trotted to a record of 2:11½ in the same free for all where McKinney 2:11½ got his record and which it took eight heats to decide. Steve Whipple won the first heat in 2:13, McKinney the next in 2:11½. It was getting dark on Saturday night when these two heats were over and the race was postponed until Monday under the rules. McKinney finally won the race, which was one of the most exciting ever trotted in California. There were from ten to seventeen scores before the word was given in each heat and none but the gamest of horses could have stood it. Two years after Ottinger was shifted to the pace and managed to take a record of 2:16 at Los Angeles, but the trot was his natural gait and he was allowed to take it thereafter. The next year (1896) at Stockton he met such horses as Iago, Stam B., Altao, Toggles, Visalia and Ethel Downs in the 2:10 class trot and defeated them in one of the greatest races ever seen on this Coast. Iago won the first heat in 2:11½, and Ottinger the next three in 2:09½, 2:10½ and 2:09½. I believe this is the record to-day of the fastest four heat race ever trotted in California. Since Ottinger was sold over East he has been used as a speedway and matinee horse, but his best days are over, and while he can yet show bursts of his old time speed he cannot go the route as his legs and feet are, as the swipes say: "On the dink."

Among the pacers entered in many of the races in which the California whirlwind, Sir Albert S. 2:08½, will start on the Grand Circuit this year is Terrace Queen, a mare owned by Mr. J. C. McKinney, of the Terrace Farm, Titusville, Pa. Terrace Queen was a good winner last year and took a record of 2:09½ at Hartford in the first heat of a race in which she was beaten in slower time. At Memphis the first of this month she worked out with Shadow Chimes 2:06½, Mazette 2:04½, Fred S. Wedgewood 2:08½ and Sphinx S. 2:08½ and beat the entire field in the first heat in 2:10. This is a very fast mile for any free-for-all pacer at this time of the year, especially over any other than a California track, and if Terrace Queen keeps good she is liable to step to a very fast record at Detroit or make some other pacer do it to beat her. Sir Albert S. will have some very hot company in all the races he starts in this year, but he ought to win a share of nearly every purse at that, as he will not be outclassed in any company unless it be the free-for-all.

New applications for membership are being sent in every week to the Golden Gate Park Driving Club and there is every prospect that the entry list to the club's Memorial Day races, which are to be held at the Oakland track, will be the largest in the club's history. There will be four races and eight or ten starters in each unless some of the horses go wrong. The members of this club are the most enthusiastic road drivers of San Francisco and Oakland, and few of them but keep a horse in readiness for a race or a brush on the road at all seasons of the year. The club's way of classifying horses always results in good contests and there have been more head and head finishes at their meetings than are usually seen in harness races. This year the club proposes to charge 25 cents admission, but will admit ladies free. The lover of harness racing who fails to attend the club's meeting at Oakland on Memorial Day will miss a good day's sport.

Kentucky's Futurity for Three Year Olds.

Owners of three year old colts and fillies eligible to Kentucky's Futurity for foals of 1899 are reminded that a payment of $50 is due June 1st on each entry expecting to start for the $14,000 remaining in this richest of all harness races.

This payment ($50, June 1st), carries the entry until thirty days (September 1st) before the race, when owners will know exactly how much merit their entries possess, and can then keep the engagement in force up to the evening before the race by another payment of $50, a total cost of less than one per cent of the purse.

The total amount of payments from this date is but two and one-half per cent of the money to be raced for, and no owner can afford to leave out an eligible colt or filly that is in the least promising at this time, for many a "world beater" has not developed speed until later in the season.

In this issue the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association also announces the renewal of its fixed events, including the Transylvania, the Tennessee, the Walnut Hall Cup and other rich purses for trotters and pacers eligible to the various classes, entries to close on Monday, June 2d, with E. W. Shanklin, Secretary, at Lexington, Ky.

When all the announcements are made it will be found that at least $100,000 will be hung up in purses and stakes for harness horses in California this year.

Notes and News.

Breeders meeting at Fresno.

The circuit is nearly complete.

Sunol 2:08½, is due to foal to The Earl 2:17, this month.

Every association over East is receiving a big list of entries this year.

The Allerton-Palo Alto Belle 2:22½ yearling, Echo Bell, has shown an eighth in 23½ seconds.

A youngster by Direct Hal, a pure gaited trotter, has recently been added to Ed. Geers' stable.

Julia M. by Zombro was purchased by W. L. Snow of Hornellsville at the Cleveland sale. She brought $2600.

Have only experienced judges, good timers with accurate time pieces on the stand at all races in the future.

The black pacer Domino by Rect 2:16½ topped the sale of California horses at the Blue Ribbon sale. He brought $3400.

Fanny Putnam 2:13 will be raced on the North Pacific Circuit this year. She has been in the breeding ranks for the last two years.

The entries for the Terre Haute Matron stake of $10,000 for foals of 1902 show a total of 297 foals, representing 130 nominators.

The Roger Williams $10,000 purse received a total of seventy seven nominations. It is for 2:14 trotters and will be decided at Providence.

Zombro 2:11 will be at Portland, Oregon, this summer instead of Salem, as first announced. He will leave Los Angeles so as to arrive in Portland, June 1st.

Geo. H. Ketcham writes that the book of Cresceus 2:02½ is full for the season. Silver Bow's book is nearly so. Both have had many high class mares this year.

Tom Sharkey had a lively time on the New York Speedway recently with his pacer Merry Pat 2:17½, who ran away with him three times in the course of the afternoon.

The chestnut daughter of Dexter Prince and Point Lace, sent East by the Aptos Farm brought $2275 at the Blue Ribbon sale. "Sandy" said she'd bring more than $2000.

John Dickerson will do his best with Anaconda 2:01½, and that means, all else being equal, the "snake horse" will beat any pacer sent against him in this year of grace 1902.

G. J. Armstrong of Petaluma, has a new piece of property in a colt by Meridian 2:12½ out of his fast pacing mare Gladys by Mambrino Chief Jr., second dam by Gen. McClellan.

Six hundred and seven orders for saddle horses were booked in a day at the Durland riding academy last week. This beat the Durland record and doubtless beats the world's record.

Secretary Charles Downing, of the Indiana state fair, is sending out the speed program for the fair meeting, September 15 to 19. Trotters and pacers are given eleven classes, with purses of $600 to $1000.

An effort is being made to hold a race meeting at the Petaluma track on the 4th of July. Mr. Smith, the lessee, is confident that by hanging up good purses, all the horses necessary can be secured to fill three or four events.

Mr. L. C. McCormick, of Portland, Oregon, has a pair of McKinney stallions that he drives as a team. They are very handsome and stylish and prompt drivers. One is three, the other four, and they are full brothers.

The Fresno county Supervisors have been offered $1800 a year for two years for the fair grounds and race track, $2400 a year for the next three years and $3000 a year for the last five years, provided a ten years' lease is given.

The Monterey Board of Supervisors have agreed to donate the Agricultural Association, District No. 7, the sum of $500 for the advancement of the agricultural interests in the county. The money will be used to promote the annual fair.

As is its custom the Fasig-Tipton Company published a very handsomely illustrated catalogue of the horses in the Blue Ribbon sale. There were nearly 100 half-tone engravings in the volume, which contained 413 tabulated pedigrees.

Mr. J. B. Bonetti, writing from Santa Maria, Cal., states that four trotters are being worked over the track there. J. M. Scott has in his string, Edison, a bay horse by Electricity out of Sallie Benton, Mabel, a bay mare by Thompson 2:14½ out of Lady Tiffany by Gibraltar, and Maria, a bay mare by Thompson. W. S. Lierly is working Leader 2:24½ son of El Benton.

There are about thirty horses now working at the Napa track and the trainers all speak in high praise of the manner in which the track is kept. Lessee Arthur Brown is sparing no pains or expense to make the place attractive for horsemen.

Medion, the handsomest two year old colt in the Palo Alto consignment brought $1350 at Cleveland and was purchased by James Golden. He is by Mendocino. The two year old filly Rosaro by Dexter Prince out of Sweet Rose by Electioneer, brought $1300.

Arab Girl, dam of the ex-queen of pacers, Bessie Bonehill 2:05½, owned at Maple Leaf Farm, South Charleston, O., has foaled twin fillies by Axius, son of Axtell. Both are reported alive and doing well. This is especially remarkable, as Arab Girl is twenty years old.

A Kansas man once won $10 at a running meeting. He has spent a thousand dollars since that day trying to win another ten dollar bill.—Western Horseman. California can beat that record. There are four or five thousand men in this State that do that thing every year.

The sister to Star Pointer 1:59½, now in Orange county and in foal to John R. Gentry 2:00½, will be bred to that horse again this year, and in 1903 and 1904 she will be bred to Joe Patchen 2:01½. She is owned by George Campbell Brown, of Spring Hill, Tenn.

John Moorhead, who went East at the time the Palo Alto horses were shipped to the sale, will act as agent for the celebrated Vita Oil all through the Grand Circuit this year and will introduce that sovereign remedy to all trainers who have not heretofore given it a trial.

Frank Bogash 2:03½ will not be raced this season as his trainer, Alta McDonald, says he will not stand the prep. Those two California whirlwinds Anaconda 2:01½ and Coney 2:02 have raced as many fast heats as any of the free for all brigade over East and are still in the ring. Both are iron horses.

F. W. Perkins of Sacramento, recently purchased a three year old stallion at Fresno from the breeder Mr. Geo. L. Warlow. This colt is by Athadon 2:27 out of Lustrine dam of Listerine 2:13½ and Donatrine 2:26½ by Onward, grandam Minnie Wren by Challenger. S. V. Mitchell is handling him at the Sacramento track.

Will Welch left Pleasanton this week for San Jose where he will give the finishing touches to his string before starting for the North Pacific circuit. He worked Uncle John by Chas. Derby three heats around 2:15 last Saturday, the fastest in 2:14. In every heat Uncle John paced the last quarter better than 32 seconds.

The Narragansett Park Association received a magnificent list of entries for their two $10,000 stakes, the "Park Brew 2:10 pace" and "Roger Williams 2:14 trot," to be raced for at the Providence Grand Circuit meeting, there being 126 horses entered in the two noted events. The association has engaged Albert H. Merrill to give the word.

The era of high prices for trotting stallions closed in 1892, when Arion, Stamboul, Director, Conductor, Ralph Wilkes, Constantine, Athel and Belsire were sold for $25,000 or more each. In the following year Sidney fetched $27,000 at auction, and the price paid for him stood as the record from that day until $50,000 was paid for the black son of Mambrino King.

Glen Moore Stock Farm reports that Baron Dillon's book has filled, with a total of 126 mares, 36 of which have records ranging from 2:08½ to 2:30. The farm has been obliged to build twenty-four new box stalls to accommodate the outside mares, and, if not sold, Baron Dillon 2:12 will stand at a fee of $100 next season. Proprietor E. S. Wells has had some tempting offers for the horse recently.

Mr. P. R. Isenburg of Honolulu sent a pair of three year olds to his Hawaiian home by the steamer Olympic recently, that are not only well matched, but handsome and stylish and promise to be fast. One is a bay gelding by Electus 20,522, dam by Elmo, second dam by Carr's Mambrino, the other a bay filly by Electus, dam Algona Belle by Algona, sire of Flying Jib 2:04. Electus is a grandson of Electioneer.

An unusual opportunity to get a fine pair of roadsters. Speedy, stylish and well bred, or either a promising track or a first class roadster performer is offered in the lot of horses now on sale and inspection at the corner of 5th avenue and 11th streets, East Oakland (Clinton Station). These horses are all sound and thoroughly broken and are by standard bred sires. As they are all to be sold at a great sacrifice one is sure of obtaining a rare bargain.

There is a colt up at Martin Carter's Nutwood Farm, by Bonnie Direct 2:05½, dam by Nutwood Wilkes, second dam Lou G., dam of Bob Ingersoll 2:14½, by Albert W. Mr. Carter says it is one of the grandest youngsters yet foaled on his farm and he thinks of calling him The Big Four, as in his veins courses the blood of the "big four" strains of trotting blood, viz: Wilkes, Director, Electioneer and Nutwood.

That the California harness racing season of 1902 will be ahead of anything seen here for several years is pretty generally conceded. It is not expected that our fastest records will be broken, but there will undoubtedly be more well contested races and larger purses than for several years past. The programs already advertised have caused several owners and trainers to hesitate about going over the mountains.

Gold Brick is the name of a very fast pacer in Geo. Spear's stable at Memphis, and he is a candidate for Chamber of Commerce honors at Detroit. Spear says his action is perfect, and that he has speed. Gold Brick is eight years old, and is by Hal Parker 2:11½ out of the dam of Peter Turney 2:11½.

Here is an opportunity to get a great broodmare cheap; the mare, Bob (Lady Ophir) that is the dam of Klamath 2:07½, Le Roi 2:18 and King Altamont 2:20½, is owned by a gentleman who is not in the breeding or the racing business and wants to sell. He has instructed Mr. Durfee who has the mare in charge to sell her, also her four year old bay filly by Guycesca 2:26. The filly is handsome and promising. Write Mr. Durfee about them.

The millionaire club man of White Plains, New York, who won $5000 by driving his horse Herald fifteen miles in 54 minutes to a road buggy containing an additional passenger, did not do anything startling as far as accomplishing a great feat is concerned, as there are horses in every village and hamlet in the United States that can do as well. The result shows, however, that there are suckers everywhere that are ready to lose money against another man's game.

Twenty-seven trotters and thirty pacers, bred in California, have entered the 2:10 list. The fastest of the pacers is Anaconda 2:01½, and Azote 2:04½, whose record was made in 1895, still leads the list of California bred trotters. He is the latest gelding, Directum 2:05½ the fastest stallion and Dolly Dillon 2:07 the fastest mare of the trotters bred in this State. Anaconda, Directly 2:03½ and Lena N. 2:05½ hold the same relative places among the pacers bred here. Will any of these records be beaten this year by California bred horses?

Mrs. E. W. Callendine, of Sacramento, has another royally bred descendant of her famous mare Abbie Woodnut. This is a handsome bay colt that was foaled by Lady Keating last week. Lady Keating is by Stam B. 2:11½ out of Abbie Woodnut, dam of Diawood 2:11 and Abdine 2:19½. This colt is Lady Keating's first foal and Lady Keating is the first of the daughters of Stam B. to foal a colt. As the youngster is by Nutwood Wilkes he should be a good one to keep entire, as he is related to about as much speed as any colt foaled this year.

Fresno is to have a Driving Club, steps having been taken during the past week to organize such an association. There are many road drivers in the Raisin City and as many good horses owned there as in any place of the same population in the United States. Since the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association announced its intention of holding its meeting at Fresno there has been quite a revival of interest in horse affairs there, and the suggestion of Secretary Kelley on his last visit that a driving club be organized, has been acted upon.

John A. McKerron 2:10 is reported in magnificent form—larger and stronger than ever before. His stud season will be limited, as he will be bred to but five mares this spring—Irene Wilton 2:18½, Zarina Wilkes 2:19½, Ximena, dam of Sunland Belle 2:08½; Peko 2:11½ and Jennie Wilkeswood by Wilkeswood out of the dam of Grattan Boy 2:08. McKerron is now the sire of six foals, four of them being this year's arrivals, the latest being out of Harry Darlington's Marguerite 2:14 by Intrigue, and the late W. B. Fasig's Eloise 2:15, the Cleveland Challenge Cup winner of 1896.

Geo. A. Kelly, who trained and raced Anzella 2:10½, to her record and sold her this spring to the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, left this week for a trip to his old home at Dayton, Washington, where he will look over a bunch of colts and fillies owned by Thos. Ronan, who bred Anzella. Mr. Kelly will probably purchase a few two and three year olds and bring them to Pleasanton to train in the hopes of getting another Anzella or something as good. Before leaving, Mr. Kelly made an entry in the Stanford Stake which closes June 1st, of his bay yearling colt by McKinney 2:11½ out of Bon-silene 2:14½ by Stamboul.

George M. Patchen 2:23½ was a bright bay stallion with black points and star in forehead, fully sixteen hands high, a head inclined to coarseness, a well-formed neck, strong, oblique shoulders, well rounded body, with lengthy barrel, good back, strong loin, long hips, powerful quarters, strong, low-set hocks, legs clean, broad and flinty, feet of good size and perfectly sound. He was bred by H. F. Sickles, Monmouth county, N. J., got by Cassius M. Clay, son of Henry Clay, and foaled in 1849. The dam of George M. Patchen was a light chestnut mare, got by a two year old colt called Head'em by imp. Trustee, his dam being a daughter of American Eclipse. The dam of this chestnut mare was a large, coarse animal, whose breeding has never been traced.

A new driving club has been organized in New York. C. K. G. Billings is President, Edgar Bronk Vice-President and Horace Wilson Secretary. C. K. G. Billings, President of the club, is well known as one of the most accomplished amateur whips and sportsmen in the country. He has the largest stable of fast trotters and pacers in the United States, and his collection of show horses is equally powerful. The other officers are well known among turfmen and add strength to the club. The club has been organized to give New Yorkers proper representation in the league of similar amateur organizations which have made Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland and other cities prominent in road driving, and will create a new era in harness horse sport in New York. It will give weekly matinee races as soon as the season opens over the track of the Empire City Club at Yonkers, free to spectators, in which the best trotters and pacers will engage in stirring contests, driven by gentlemen owners.

Two Good Ones by Nutwood Wilkes.

While at Pleasanton last Saturday, Mr. Martin Carter, proprietor of the Nutwood Stock Farm at Irvington, sold two youngsters by his great stallion Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ to F. Gomet, of the Olympic Club Stables of this city. Mr. Gomet paid $2000 for the two and at the prices at which good prospects are held in California, he has secured a couple of rare bargains. Verona, the bay four year old filly, is one of the purchases, and there are few more promising young trotters to be found anywhere. She took a three year old record last year of 2:27 in a race with aged horses at Stockton, and has filled out wonderfully since then and is now a very rugged and strong going mare. She is bred in the purple, being out of a mare by California Nutwood, second dam by the Grand Moor, and then traces to the Williamson's Belmont thoroughbred family, one of the stoutest and best thoroughbred crosses ever introduced into the trotting breed. With two crosses of Nutwood, the greatest of all broodmare sires, she should be a great mare for the stock farm when her racing days are over. The other purchase by Mr. Gomet is a two year old that has attracted so much attention at Pleasanton by his way of going and his great natural speed, that the cognomen of Little Jib has been bestowed upon him by the railbirds from his resemblance to Flying Jib 2:04, the pride of Pleasanton. Little Jib is by Nutwood Wilkes out of Brown Line by Direct Line, second dam by Grand Moor. He is one of the sweetest gaited pacers ever trained at Pleasanton and showed a quarter in 34 seconds very handily last Saturday. Mr. Gomet held his watch on the little fellow and then hunted up Mr. Carter to get a price on him. After the sale was made Mr. Gomet concluded to leave both these horses in William Cecil's charge for some time as they are doing so well. Verona will probably be raced on the California circuit this year and the two year old will be given easy training for a while and then let up on until next season.

An Oakwood Park Colt Brings $3000.

Readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN have read in these columns occasionally of a four year old black colt at Oakwood Park Stock Farm that was showing phenomenal speed at the pacing gait. This colt was foaled in 1898 and is by Steinway out of Lunado by Electioneer, second dam by St. Clair 16,675. He is a full brother to the mare Sylvanway 2:10½ that made her record over East in 1898. He is called Darkway and is one of the most promising pacers ever bred on this celebrated farm. Several Eastern parties have looked him over during the past year, and two weeks ago Mr. D. M. Shanks of North Yakima, Washington, offered $2500 for him after driving the colt a quarter in thirty seconds. Last week Dr. Dunleavy of Denver, Colorado, came to California and went to Oakwood Park at the request of Mr. Ed Gaylord of Denver to look at Darkway. He saw him driven a quarter close to thirty seconds, the last eighth of which was in 14½ seconds, and after examining him for soundness paid the price asked—$3000—and the colt is now the property of Mr. Gaylord. He will be shipped to Denver to-day and will be prepared for the races this year. Darkway will make Lunado a member of the Great Broodmare list before the year is out and ought to beat 2:10 handily.

The Two Year Old Futurity.

Owners of two year old trotters and pacers eligible to Kentucky's Futurity for foals of 1900 should bear in mind that on June 1st a payment of $25 falls due, which payment carries them within thirty days (Sept. 1st) of the race when it comes to be definitely ascertained whether the entry is sufficiently good to warrant further payments, which are light and but a small percentage of the amount to be raced for.

Nominators will recall that the amount of this purse is guaranteed no less than $20,000 by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association, of which amount $5000 is set aside for two year old trotters, and $1000 for two year olds that pace.

Owners can ill afford to neglect this payment, for when once dropped the entry cannot be reinstated for this division of this most celebrated race, and every colt, filly or gelding that is eligible and in the least promising at this time should be kept in.

This issue also announces the renewal of the fixed events for Kentucky's great trots in October, including the Transylvania, the McDowell, the Tennessee and other liberal purses for various classes, both trotters and pacers, entries to close on Monday, June 2d, with E. W. Shanklin, Secretary, at Lexington, Ky.

Belmont Prince 2:17½, that made his record eleven years ago to a high wheel sulky, won a match at Empire track, New York, one day last week when he raced against the mare Teto, half mile heats, best two in three. The old fellow had all his old timespeed and won in straight heats in 1:06 and 1:04½ drawing a wagon.

Common Sense from "Columbus."

A few years ago the exportation of horses was unknown in this country. We were buyers, and all the foreign countries that are now importing were sending horses into the United States. It is held that the tide in the exportation of horses will never turn. This nation can produce enough horses to supply the markets of the world, and at prices which cannot be duplicated elsewhere upon the globe. Take the business at Kansas City, Mo., last year. Over $25,000,000 worth of horses and mules were handled at that market, a larger per cent of which business was transacted with foreign nations. Western-bred horses may be found in every country in Europe, as well as in Asia, Africa and the islands of the Pacific. The future appears very promising to breeders of American horses; not rose-tinted and violet perfumed, perhaps, but full of good business prospects. Horses must be produced in much the same manner as cattle, or rather, for much the same sort of demand. Cattle men do not expect to sell every bullock to some New York or Pittsburg butcher for Christmas beefs. The trade in this line of cattle is limited. They aim to produce the sort of cattle demanded every day in the year. So it must be with the producer of horses for market. He need not expect to sell his five year old gelding or mare to some successor of Robert Bonner at $30,000 to $50,000. He must produce a horse that can be sold every day in the year; one that the general market can make use of to good advantage. And he must arrange his business in such a manner that he can turn off a number of matured horses each season; horses that are sound, free from wire-cuts and well broken. It costs no more to raise such horses in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Missouri, Colorado, the Dakotas and other Western States than it does to produce a bullock suitable for export trade or domestic dress beef trade. The horse will outsell the steer every day in the week.—Western Horseman.

A Memphis Matinee.

That the California horses going East this year will have to trot and pace very fast to win on the Grand Circuit looks very probable. On May Day there were matinee races at Memphis, Tennessee, or rather "work-outs" would be the more accurate term, as the events were not actual races. The time made was correctly taken, however, and shows that the horses at Memphis are as well advanced in their work as those here in California. The following summary will be interesting to owners who have entries in the same events on the Grand Circuit where these Memphis fliers are entered:

Saddle Horses Converting Russell Railey.

[Coach and Saddle.]

Russell Railey, familiarly known as "Russ," who has been selling some good saddlers in Chicago recently, is one of the characters of the Blue Grass region of Kentucky. There is no better horseman living, and he can make it win in any department of the horse business. But he is especially in love with the saddle horse end of the game, and at that has, in partnership with his brother, scored his greatest successes. It is but natural that he should believe the Kentucky gaited saddle to be the finest animal in the world. And the writer is in absolute harmony with him on that score.

When the English craze struck America, and the demand came for "walk, trot and canter" saddlers, "Russ" Railey was inclined to fight. He had built up a reputation as an educator of saddlers that had put him a good many laps ahead of the head of the procession, and he was rightfully proud of it. His horses, graduates of his school, were in demand in all sections at great prices, and those who bought and rode them always felt that they had gotten the worth of their money.

One day, before "Russ" had discovered that there was a new fad afloat, a gentleman in search of a saddle horse visited his place. He was shown the best in the land, of their kind, and there was more or less pardonable pride on Railey's part, in the showing. Imagine his astonishment, therefore, when the visitor informed him that he did not want any fancy gaits, that they would not be tolerated in the parks by the Eastern cities, and that no gentleman would allow himself to be seen riding horses gaited as were those he had been shown. He then explained that he wanted a horse educated to the three gaits—walk, trot and canter.

Whereupon the pent-up indignation of "Russ" Railey was unloosed. "Walk, trot and canter!" he exclaimed. "Any dahned hoss kin do that, it don't take no education, suh. These hosses I've been showin' you, suh, have been taught. They ah' intelligent or they couldn't have learned what they know, suh. It's a pleah-suh to ride one of them, suh. I wouldn't give one o' them, suh, foh a cah load of hosses that can only go three gaits." But with all his argument he could not make a sale. Fortunately that did not cause him to falter.

He soon learned that there was a demand for the saddlers he despised, and so he went to work to supply the demand. How well he succeeded any resident of Kentucky can tell you. He brought to bear on the business his superb knowledge of horses, and while he has never lost his market for the Kentucky-gaited kind, he has kept abreast of the times and has sold thousands of the other brand.

His achievements in the field of fast road pairs would occupy a lot of space in the telling, and when his history is finally written it will show that as an all-round horseman he has rarely, if ever, had an equal. As an entertainer, when properly drawn out, he is in a class by himself. Not to know him intimately, is not to know Kentucky people at all.

Denver's Fast Pacer.

Reports of wonderful speed shown by the pacer Roberts 2:09½ when badly handicapped by weight, comes from Denver, Col. It is stated upon good authority that Roberts pulled his driver and another party whose weight, combined with that of the vehicle, was not less than five hundred pounds, and the time of the quarter was 31½ seconds. It was not a pneumatic tired vehicle at that. Three expert timers of unquestioned veracity held their watches on the horse, and all agreed that the time of the quarter was as stated above. Considering the weight that the horse pulled, the performance is one of the most remarkable on record. Roberts is a chestnut gelding bred by James C. Wallace, Denver, Col., and foaled in 1891. He came out in 1897, won several races, and took a record of 2:11½. The next year he reduced his record to 2:09½ at Denver, Col., June 16th. He was got by Arragon, and is the only one by that horse which has yet taken a record in standard time. His dam was by Ned Forest, and his second dam, Zulo Zong, was a thoroughbred daughter of Young Lexington. This Young Lexington was by Copec, a son of the noted race horse Lexington. The dam of Copec was by imp. Yorkshire, and his second dam was the famous broodmare Picayune, that Bruce mentions in his Stud Book as one of the best broodmares in America. Her sire was Medoc by American Eclipse, and her dam was by Sir William of Transport. Arragon, the sire of Roberts 2:09½, was by Abe Downing 2:20½. The latter was by Joe Downing, and he by Alexander's Edwin Forrest out of the famous Lizzie Peebles by old Wagner. He is certainly well fortified with race-winning thoroughbred blood as well as good trotting blood.—Am. Horse Breeder.

A Great Mile at Memphis.

Zephyr, the $9000 filly by Zombro 2:11, is proving that she is worth the money paid for her by Mr. J. C. McKinney last year, and if she does not get too many fast workouts before the racing season begins, will be the sensational four year old of 1902. Down at the Memphis track on May Day, there was matinee racing for the edification of about two thousand people who had collected to see the horses work together. It was workout day, and by arrangement the horses were classified according to their speed and given two heats. The results were a series of surprises to all present, but the sensation of the day was the mile made by Zephyr. In this workout five trotters started, the others being Dormeath, The Jeweler, Ida Highwood 2:13½ and Louise Jefferson 2:17½. The first heat was in 2:14½ with Dormeath in the lead, The Jeweler second, Jephry third, Ida Highwood fourth and Louise Jefferson fifth. In the second heat Shafer let Zephyr step out when the quarter pole was reached and she trotted the middle half in 1:02½, a rate of speed that called forth exclamations of astonishment on all sides as it was not thought there was a four year old trotter in the country that could show such a flight of speed at this time of the year. It did not bother Zephyr however and she finished the mile in 2:12 handily and with plenty of reserve speed. The turf writer, Gerald Rex of Buffalo, on reading the press dispatches the following morning, wrote to the American Horse Breeder as follows:

"The press dispatches this morning announced the result of the opening of the matinee racing season at Memphis, Tenn., yesterday, and a sensational opening it was. But of the terrific miles paced and trotted, the early date considered, the greatest was that of the four year old filly Zephyr, who trotted the second heat of her race in 2:12. It shows that she is a filly such as one sees but once in a decade or more, and if the mile did not hurt her I look for her to be the sensation of the year. The half mile was trotted in 1:02½, a rate of speed that seems utterly impossible at this season. Naturally, I am interested in this filly, having purchased her for J. C. McKinney, proprietor of the Terrace Farm, Titusville, Pa., just twelve months ago, paying $9000 for her. And on the day she trotted in 2:12, I had just closed a deal whereby Mr. McKinney became the owner of her dam, Gazelle 2:11½, the purchase being made from A. H. Miller of this city.

"Gazelle is a black mare, foaled 1891, bred by Ben Davis, San Bernardino, Cal., sired by Gossiper 2:14½, son of Simmons 2:28; dam Gypsy (dam of Ed Winship 2:16½) by Gen. Booth 2:30½, son of George M. Patchen 30; second dam Echo Belle (grandam of Conn 2:15½) by Echo, son of Hambletonian 10. She made her turf debut as a two year old, trotting to a record of 2:29½; lowered this to 2:16½ as a three year old, being one of the best colts of that year on the Coast; raised a foal as a four year old, and in her five year old form reappeared on the turf and lowered her record to 2:11½, beating the best trotters of that year on the Coast. So well did the late Tom Keating think of her, she being a member of his stable that year, that he shipped her over the mountains to compete in the classic Transylvania. Some ten days before the race she trotted three heats over the Lexington track from 2:08½ to 2:09½, but climatic changes dulled the edge of her speed, and when the race was called she had lost her form and was defeated.

"Gazelle has raised three foals by three different sires. Her first foal is the pacing horse Zalach 2:10½ by McKinney 2:11½. This horse paced to his record as a five year old, and that same season forced Hetty G. to step in 2:06 in a third heat to beat him. An offer of $10,000 was refused for him the past season. Her next foal was the filly Zephyr, whose performance at Memphis stamps her as one of the best trotters in sight, while her third foal is now a three year old sired by Titus, son of Director. The price paid for Gazelle was $5000, and at this figure she is a bargain. She will be bred to Mr. McKinney's stallion Beauseant, brother of Boreal 2:15½, or The Invincible, brother of Dare Devil 2:09.

"A report was sent out the last week that the trotting mare Eula Mac (3) 2:17½ by McKinney 2:11½, dam Balance All 2:29½ by Brigadier, owned by Louis Streuber, Erie, Pa., had been purchased by E. J. Tranter, of this city. The report was premature, however, and the deal fell through. The parties had some correspondence relative to the purchase of the mare, but could not agree on price, and the mare still remains the property of Mr. Streuber. Eula Mac is in the stable of W. L. Snow at Hornellsville, and will be raced through the Grand Circuit this season. Mr. Streuber's faith in her is unlimited, he having wagered that she will beat 2:10 this season."

For Freedom, owned jointly by Mr. G. L. Waring and Capt. Tom Merry of Los Angeles, foaled a colt by Bliss Rucker on Saturday last. The colt died that same night and the little mare died on the Monday following at noon. She was a full sister to Yankee Doodle, who won $1250 in 1895, $3070 in 1896, $2925 in 1897 and $705 in 1898. The Captain is out about $200 for his share of the business.

Open-Air Horse Shows.

That there is much merit in the horse show is evidenced from the great growth of that institution in recent years. While the patronage of society has done much to place the horse show on the high pinnacle of success which it now enjoys, there must of necessity have been a great popular support or the modern horse show would not have achieved its present high standing. That which has commanded the support and patronage of the wealthy social circle and the admiration of the rank and file of healthy, sport-loving Americans has been the horse itself.

Each successive show has had an educational effect, with the result that those who originally admired the horse have had their regard for the beautiful equine broadened and intensified. On the other hand, those who took but a passing interest in the horse, who went to the show because it was the proper thing or from curiosity, have developed a truly genuine interest in man's best four-footed friend. And this process of education is year by year adding to the ranks of horse-show exhibitors and horse-show spectators.

Fortunately for the best interests of the horse himself, the promoters of the show are not those who primarily interested themselves from motives of financial gain. As a rule the directors of horse shows are gentlemen who took up the horse show because of their love for the horse and from the hope that the show would prove to be a means of interesting others who took but a slight interest in the horse. Then there was the hope that a friendly rivalry between exhibitors, especially between those who interested themselves in the breeding of horses, would result in comparisons which would induce an attempt at breeding more perfect specimens. In this respect the results have more than filled anticipations, for breeders of all types of horses are paying more attention to the individual. Breeding has become more of a science, if that much-abused word can be applied to the breeding of horses.

In this particular the breeders of the American trotter have been particularly benefited. The horse show has developed a new field for the trotter. It has been proven that the American trotter can out-act and out-style other types of horses in the heavy harness class. Without going into detail it suffices to prove this point: That the trotting bred Lord Brilliant is the winner of over four hundred ribbons, a task accomplished by no other breed of horse in the same length of time, if, indeed, the record has been paralleled, which is doubtful. The result of all this is that the breeder of to-day, instead of breeding merely for speed has adopted for his motto "strength, beauty and speed," and this is meant to include style and quality, symmetry in conformation and style in action. In the trotter which has speed all these qualities do not detract from race horse ability, and if he has not, or when his racing days are over, these qualifications mean a great deal from a financial standpoint if the breeder wishes to sell. Not only is the typical trotting horse of to-day a game, fast and consistent race horse, but he is the typical show horse in light and heavy leather and often under saddle.

But while the breeder of the trotter has enlarged the field from which he may expect to receive a return, a great good has resulted from these shows. The breeders of different types realize that there are good points in all breeds and that to-day there is a field of usefulness for the best from all; and as a rule the breeder of to-day has a respect for the opinions of those gentlemen who are breeding to a different type from the one which occupies his attention. And all this means a new era for the horse. Since the days of the stage coach there have been periodical scares that the horse would be superseded by the locomotive, the bicycle or the automobile. The intelligent breeder of to-day, however, realizes that the horse is more strongly entrenched in the hearts of the English speaking races than heretofore, and, knowing this, are extending their breeding operations on progressive lines. Never in the history of the world has so much money been invested in the horse, and this new era of the horse is just begun.—Horseman.

Heir at-Law Dead.

Heir-at-Law 2:05½, the fastest son of Mambrino King, by the records, and one of the most famous young sires in the country, died at the farm of A. G. Danforth & Son, Washington, Ill., April 27. As a trotter Heir-at-Law took a record of 2:12 and later made one of the most brilliant of campaigns at the pacing gait, taking a record of 2:05½. As a sire he was an extraordinary horse, having 18 in the standard list at 14 years of age, nearly all of which had records below 2:20, including Passing Belle 2:08½, Scapegoat 2:11½, Jack D. 2:11½, Equity 2:12½, Elsinora 2:12½, Judge-at-Law 2:15½, and Lasso 2:12½. Had this lion-hearted son of Mambrino King lived to the usual age attained by horses, he would have undoubtedly been the greatest sire among the sons of Mambrino King. His dam was Estabella, by Alcantara, while his grandam was Annabel by George Wilkes, and this double Wilkes cross seems to have been the most successful nick for Mambrino King, as demonstrated by Heir-at-Law and his brother, Prince Regent, that also met an untimely death.

B. A. Chilson, writing to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN from Butte, Montana, says: "The prospects here for a good meeting are very favorable. There are about 125 horses here already and the track is in fine condition. The weather is quite pleasant."

How to Get Extreme Speed.

I met Joe Rea a few years ago, he of the form of Apollo and the face of a Greek god, writes "Hawley" of the Kentucky Stock Farm, and in speaking of the youngsters that had been in his charge during the past season he dwelt at length on the filly Miss Previous, that trotted a quarter in 33½ seconds. He told me that had he dared take the risk he could have driven her in 32 seconds, as she trotted for him an eighth in 15½ seconds. This filly comes nearer being the acme of breeding than any trotter ever seen, and her wonderful speed came to her without the usual amount of drilling that so many youngsters undergo; in fact, she trotted a quarter in 35 seconds the first time she was ever asked to speed at that distance. I have always believed that the two-minute trotter will be the one that is endowed with great natural speed, a flight of which will be seen when very young, as, for instance, that of the filly in question, for speed that is natural can be carried without constant forcing and training in increasing the flight. Horses with great natural speed are, as a rule, of frictionless gait, and on that account can carry their best speed with less effort than is necessary when the action is labored. Take for example the stallion Cresceus, that year after year has improved until he has become the champion. Cresceus was not a natural colt trotter in the same sense as the filly Miss Previous, for although he was a fast colt, he could not as a yearling begin to trot a quarter in 35 seconds the first time of asking. His speed has been increased from year to year by training until now that he has attained such a tremendous turn of it and has the muscular development and lung power to carry it, can accomplish the difficult task of beating the world's record. Cresceus had a greater brush for one hundred yards as a two year old than as a yearling. This increased each year, until without doubt during the past season he could trot an eighth at a higher rate of speed than at any time of his life. In the case of the really natural trotter, in the sense that a thoroughbred is a natural runner, the filly Miss Previous being an example of possessing natural speed, I have always thought that such a one endowed in addition to her wonderful speed and perfect action, with great muscular development, and, of course, the proper lung power would accomplish more than any other trotter has done; in fact, equal the two-minute mark. A filly like this, if properly matured, could do with little effort what most trotters would be forced to the limit to accomplish. I believe that from the great young stallions of to-day, when mated with the fast, highly formed trotting mares that have been developed during the past decade will come a type of trotters that will be far superior to that which has resulted from old-fashioned breeding. Many of the greatest trotters of to-day, Cresceus among others, are bred in old-fashioned lines; therefore it is reasonable to suppose that the results of further advancement in breeding will be infinitely greater than those of breeding in its more primitive state. Doubtless the results of the more advanced ideas in breeding would have already been more apparent if precocious youngsters, which are nothing more than natural trotters, were not so frequently knocked out by overwork prompted by a desire on the part of the driver for notoriety.

Care of Horses and Colts.

A writer in the London Live Stock Journal gives some good advice on the care of horses: He says: No breeder is likely to succeed if he takes up a breed which by constitution or other natural peculiarities is unadapted to exist upon the soil or in the climate where the farm is situated. This is a fact which all experienced men will corroborate, but many a beginner has discovered it when too late; and another common mistake which is made is attempting to put more animals on the land than it can carry. If every acre of meadow-land is in constant use the herbage will resent the liberty, and the grass will not grow so plentifully, and its quality will depreciate if the ground is stained by horses. Yet many men who would be horrified at the idea of an over-crowded stable or straw yard are the chief offenders in the way of ruining their meadow land, an observation which applies with additional emphasis to inexperienced breeders. A few horses well done are worth a lane full of half-starved ones, and it must never be forgotten that if size is desired the in-foal mares and young stock must be well supplied with nutritious food of good quality, but by this it is not intended to convey the advice that pampering is at all necessary; on the contrary, it is the worst thing possible for breeding stock of all kinds. A fat mare is not so likely to hold to the horse as one in fair condition, whilst foals of yearlings which are indudiciously stuffed are sure to suffer in the long run for the tax inflicted on their constitution. At the same time a foal should never be permitted to stand still, much less go back, for if it once becomes less thrifty the chances are that its growth will be retarded for months, just at the very time when it should be growing. Consequently, when a young one looks poor, immediate means should be adopted to ascertain the cause, and when this is discovered it must be checked. In the majority of cases the milk will be found either scanty or of poor quality, and possibly a change of pasture may pull the dam together. If not, and the foal is a valuable one, a certain amount of artificial milk must be supplied the foal. Cow's milk slightly diluted with water, about one-fifth of the latter to four-fifths milk, is a proportion which many owners approve of; but in this, as in other things, cases differ, and should the foal continue poor the beginner will do well to seek professional advice.

LOS ANGELES TRACK is for lease for a term of years. It is one of the best tracks in America, and can be made the leading winter training track of the world. See advertisement.

$7000 IN PURSES is the amount hung up by the Napa Association for harness horses, instead of $6300 as stated in the advertisement. Besides the regular purses, which foot up $6800, a purse of $200 is offered for district two year olds.

THE THIRD PAYMENT of $25 each on entries in the Stallion Stake for thoroughbred foals of 1900, to be run by two year olds at the State Fair this year, is due and payable June 1st. This will be the first running of this stake and it will be one of the chief events of the fair this year.

TEN DOLLARS WILL BE DUE June 1st on your entry in the Stanford Stake to be trotted at the State Fair next year. Entries to this stake closed June 1st last year. If you made one, don't let the first day of next month go by without sending this payment to Secretary Geo. W. Jackson at Sacramento.

NAPA will give a $200 district trot for two year olds this year. It is for colts owned in the counties of Solano, Sonoma and Napa and entries will close June 15th. This is an excellent idea. Every district association should have district colt stakes and a few district races. They arouse interest in breeding and are greatly enjoyed by the local people, who are the ones that make successful fairs possible.

WOODLAND'S PROGRAM is announced this week. Over $6000 is given for harness races, and the classes are well arranged. It is hardly necessary to advise horse owners to enter at Woodland. They all go there every year and always want to go again. It is one of the best meetings held on the Coast and one of the best attended. This year the Directors are trying to excel all former efforts and they will make every possible arrangement that will tend to convenience horsemen and the public. Read Woodland's program. Entries close July 1st.

DON'T OVERLOOK the fact that the entries to the Stanford Stake for foals of 1901, to be trotted at the California State Fair in 1904, close June 1st next. Be sure to enter your trotting bred yearlings in this stake. It is cheap, and promises to be a rich one to the owner. All foals of 1901 eligible. Enter them. It adds to their value, advertises your farm or stallion, and puts you in the way of winning a large stake. A Special Stake will be opened in 1904 for colts entered originally in this stake, and Occident Stake of 1904, that develop a pacing gait, to be contested for as three year olds in 1904. Your colt entered in the Occident Stake of 1904 is eligible for entry in this stake. Send for entry blanks to Geo. W. Jackson, Secretary. First payment to enter, only $5.00.

THE FREE-FOR-ALL CLASSES are recognized by the Ventura Agricultural Association in its program of races published this week for its meeting, which opens August 6th. One thousand dollars is hung up for the free-for-all trotters and the same amount for the free-for-all pacers. There are eight purses of $500 each for slower classes, four for trotters and four for pacers, and the runners have seven purses ranging from $200 to $250. This is the greatest program ever given by the Ventura association, and shows that the 31st district does not intend to play second fiddle to any district in the State. The program should draw a very large list of entries and doubtless will. Entries will close July 1st with Secretary T. H. Merry at Oxnard. No other association in California has offered so much money for the free-for-all classes this year, and both races should fill.

A GOOD PLAN for every district or other association giving harness racing in California this year to adopt, is to follow the rules closely in everything pertaining to racing, and insist that every owner and trainer do likewise. Nine-tenths of all the trouble kicked up in this world is caused by misunderstandings in regard to the terms of agreements or contracts, and a majority of the cases that go to the boards of appeals and review of the two parent trotting associations, would never have been filed had the members and the owners thoroughly understood the conditions of the races and lived up to them. Every secretary should have a copy of the rules and make an effort to see that in the matter of entries these rules are followed, rejecting everyone that does not comply therewith. The judges in the stand should be men who are conversant with them and who will insist that they be enforced, and the association directors should bend every effort to the same end. Where rules are followed strictly, and all parties treated alike, there will be few complaints from horsemen or the public, and none from those who are fair minded.

A HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS are in sight already for those who have harness horses to race in California this year, and there is more coming. Associations were very slow in getting started with their announcements, but now that they have begun to show evidence of life, all are getting into line, and but very few of the 46 districts in the State will permit their appropriations to be unused. California has never had better prospects for bounteous crops and good times, so the gate receipts should be large this season, if good programs are arranged and properly advertised. The owners of breeding farms should enter their horses liberally this year, as by so doing they will show their confidence in the speed of their horses and the future of the business. If every knocker will quit knocking and every booster get in and boost a little, we will have the greatest season of harness racing seen in years. Very few associations will permit bookmaking on trotting or pacing races, which will be a great step forward. There are few crackerjacks in training, but this should make the entry lists all the larger.

FRESNO IS THE PLACE where the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will hold its meeting this year. This has been fully decided upon and the date set for the week of September 30th to October 4th. The first announcement of stakes was published last week and will soon be followed with a complete program. The big feature of this season's racing in California will be the $2000 stake for trotters of the 2:24 class to be decided at this meeting. Horsemen are already speculating on winning it and the chances are that a big field will start for the money. If the Breeders association gets a liberal entry to this race it is intended to increase the size of the stake next year and make it a fixed annual event. It is not beyond reason to predict that The California will soon be increased to $5000 and be as sensational for coast horses as are the M. & M., the Transylvania, the Charter Oak and other big races on the Grand Circuit. The Raisin City Stake for 2:20 pacers, with a value of $1000 this year, is another event that may be made an annual one. The Fresno meeting will come off at just the proper season when the horses will be at their best. The District Fair will be held during the same week of the Breeders meeting, which should cause Fresno to be crowded with people during that time.

High Prices for High Steppers.

A new high water mark in the way of average prices bid at a sale of carriage horses has been set in New York. April 25th, in the American Horse Exchange, New York City, the horses owned by Mr. W. L. Elkins, Philadelphia, were closed out at auction, the death of W. L. Elkins, Jr., having, it is reported, induced his father to dispose of his horses. A tremendous crowd of the members of Gotham's swiftdom packed the Exchange and the bidding was of the snappiest order. In fact spectators agree that they never witnessed such keen competition for high stepping horses. The thirteen made the reported average of $1819. The highest bid was $6200, made by H. K. Bloodgood for the gelding Billy Finch. The same gentleman bid $4000 for the brown gelding Foraker and $2500 for Thunderbolt. William C. Whitney bid $4750 for Lenox and $1800 for American Star. Other prices ranged down to $750.

The horses were of the high stepping sort, almost all of them show horses of more or less celebrity and quite a few of them winners in the best company. The prices reported indicate that the demand for handsome heavy harness horses is better than it has ever been. It is not at all likely that heavy harness horses of the right sort will ever be cheap in this country again. There is a tremendous shortage in the supply and once having become accustomed to using them the rich men of the great cities will never again do without them. The man who succeeds in turning out acceptable material has his path blazed to affluence if not to wealth. At the annual sale held in New York by Tichenor & Co., Chicago, thirty carriage horses are reported to have sold for an average of $1320 each. Cardiff and Wales, brown geldings, are named as the highest-priced pair at $8050.

Not the Only Pebble.

CORONA, Cal., May 14, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: I notice in your issue of May 10th, that Geo. T. Beckers calls the turn on the Occident Stake for this year and next; and that he thinks it will be won this year by a three year old Zombro, and next year by his Stam B. Mr. Beckers must not forget that there are other Zombro colts and fillies, and some of them are entered in next year's Occident. I have a two year old Zombro filly, Zoe Patchen, dam Last Chance by Mambrino Patchen 58, the dam of Nola trial 2:23 as a three year old with three months' work and Belle Patchen 2:16 one season's work, which Mr. Beckers might do well to keep his eye on, for if she does not show her heels to his Stam B., he will know that his filly has been in a race at least. Yours truly,

S. W. LOCKETT.

A Great Mare by Trenton.

The Sydney Cup, one of the classic races of the Australian Jockey Club meeting, was this year won by Wakeful, easily the best race mare of the south continent. She carried 133 pounds to victory and defeated a field of twenty horses, running the two miles in 3:28, which is the fastest time in the history of the race by three seconds.

Stromboli, who raced in California, won the event in 1892, while Darebin, a horse imported from Australia by J. B. Haggin, was the winner in 1883. Wakeful is by Trenton, a son of Musket. In nineteen starts against big fields, Wakeful finished first no less than twelve times, was second four and third two times.—Chronicle.

Vallejo is on the Map.

The navy yard town of Vallejo, where the Solano County Agricultural Society has one of the best tracks in California, will be on the main circuit this year, and an excellent program of harness racing has already been announced by Secretary W. T. Kelly. Nearly five thousand dollars in purses are provided for the harness brigade with the following classes: the 2:30 class trotters are given $700, the 2:25 and the 2:20 class pacers $500 each. These are declaration stakes, and horses must be named June 16th, at the time entries are made. There are also four nomination purses all for trotters. These are the 2:24 class for which $600 is hung up, and the 2:19, 2:15 and 2:12 classes which are for $500 each. These close June 16th, but horses not to be named until August 1st. Besides these stakes there are three races with purses of $200 each for horses owned in the district comprising Napa and Solano counties, and a race for gentlemen's roadsters owned in Vallejo and Benicia.

The announcement by the Vallejo association assures a continuous circuit of ten weeks harness racing with convenient transportation facilities. The circuit will open at Vallejo, August 11th, Napa, which is only fifteen miles distant, opens August 18th, the Golden Gate Fair at Oakland, is to be held the following week, Woodland comes next with a week's racing, and the California State Fair follows Woodland with its regular two weeks meeting. Stockton will give a fair and race meeting during the week after the State Fair, and then the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will hold its annual week of racing, having engaged the Fresno track for its meeting. Bakersfield comes next with a big program of races, and the circuit will close at Los Angeles on October 18th. This is the main or principal circuit. In addition, there will be a northern and a southern circuit in both of which purses ranging from $200 to $500 will be offered. The outlook for a stable of trotters and pacers is better in California than for years past.

Vallejo being the first meeting there should be a large entry list and it will afford the opportunity for every trainer to test his horses in actual races. The official advertisement will appear next week.

Breeders Meeting at Fresno.

It has been fully decided that the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will hold its fall meeting at Fresno during the week of September 29th to October 4th. This is the week immediately following Stockton's fair and will precede the Bakersfield meeting. At the same time the Breeders meeting is being given the Fresno County Agricultural Association will give a district fair, at which an effort will be made to put on display the finest exhibit of Fresno county products ever collected. The early closing stakes already announced by the Breeders association, including among other rich events The California, a $2000 stake for trotters of the 2:24 class, and The Raisin City, a $1000 stake for the pacers of the 2:20 class, are but forerunners of the best program of harness events that have been offered in California for years. The Fresno track is one of the best mile tracks ever built in this State and is kept in the very pink of condition by the county of Fresno, which is the owner of the fine property. The Breeders will spare no pains in making this meeting the very best that has been held since its organization, and the chances are very bright for the largest list of entries and the largest attendance in the history of the organization. Entries to the first installment of six early closing stakes will close June 2d. The conditions and all particulars will be found in the advertising columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to-day. Look them over carefully, and enter as liberally as possible, and help to make the circuit of 1902 the best ever given on the Pacific Coast.

Race Meeting at San Jose.

The directors of Agricultural District No. 5 at San Jose held a meeting last Wednesday and elected Geo. Y. Bollinger President and H. H. Main Secretary. It was decided to hold the annual fair this year during the three days, July 3d, 4th and 5th. All purses will be $500 each and entries will close June 25th. A full list of the classes for which purses are offered will be announced soon. The San Jose track is in excellent condition at the present time and the association will aim to keep it so and will offer every inducement to trainers who will come there with their horses. There has never been a more prosperous year in prospect in Santa Clara valley than this one, and the directors believe that a good program of races will attract a very large attendance in July, and enable them to get the association out of debt. Secretary Main states that all purses will be paid immediately upon the decision of the judges.

Woodland Echoes.

WOODLAND, May 14, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Once more I have the pleasure of dropping you a few lines about the Yolo county horses. At present there are about thirty in training here, nearly all doing well and showing speed.

Falrose, Walter Masten's well known stallion, sire of Don 2:10 and Primrose 2:09½, is looking fine. He has already been mated with 74 mares this season, which is the record for this time of the year. Mr. Masten is working Penrose 2:21½ by Falrose and expects to mark him in about 2:10 this year. Mayme H., a handsome mare by the same sire, is stepping fast, and Tuberose, the handsome stallion by Falrose, is going faster than ever. He should trot to a fast record this year. Masten is training John A. 2:12½, and the son of Wayland W. looks in the pink of condition and should make the pacers in his class march some when he lines up for the word with them. Gold Crown, a two year old, and Dixon Maid, both by Falrose, are in Mr. Masten's string and very promising.

C. E. Bigelow has a fine string of horses and will make a good showing on the circuit with some of them. An Alex Button filly, the property of O. A. Lowe, is a very handsome bay, good gaited and promising. The four year old colt El Primero, by Diablo 2:09½ out of old Lucy B. 2:17½ by Button, is as good a prospect for a fast one as there is in this section. He is a very handsome colt, as his picture shows, and is a candidate for a fast record this year or next. "Det" also has a five year old Diablo that is as fast as a bullet. I believe he is out of a Sidney mare. These Diablos are all fast and have the size and good looks for which the family is noted.

H. W. Miller, of San Francisco, is here with a string of horses that are good goods. He has the fast mare Lady Falrose 2:23½, that can beat 2:20, and the gelding Steve S. by Steve Whipple that is a very handsome horse. In this string are Prince Irene by Coligny, the Wilkes mare Lolito and a yearling by Rustic.

C. R. Harrington is working Smuggler, John Norton's horse by Waldstein out of an Odd Fellow mare, that is much admired by the railbirds. He was so unfortunate as to lose a very handsome and promising three year old by Falrose the other day. I did not learn the cause of death.

A. B. Rodman has a gray horse by Button that stepped a mile in 2:25 recently after a very few weeks' work, and is considered one of the good green ones at this track. He has another that is nearly as good.

William Murray can be seen often jogging his great horse Diablo 2:09½, and always attracts attention. The breeders here appreciate the fact that Diablo is one of the best bred and greatest speed producers on the Pacific Coast and are giving him a very large patronage again. He is certainly one of the handsomest individuals that ever came to Yolo county, and his colts are universally like him.

John Norton is making a good season with Gossiper Jr., Chas. Burgess has his horse Stanford here and is also doing well, Chas. Johnson is getting a good patronage for Mambrino Chief Jr., and Peter Fitzgerald has booked a large number of mares to Mickey Free. So you see that Yolo county is keeping in the front rank in breeding standard horses as well as training them.

Ebenezer Bull, of the town of Hamptonburgh, brought to our office, Friday, a calcareous formation, egg-shaped, 10½ inches in circumference, that had formed in the stomach of his horse, Doctor, an animal 30 years old. Formations of this sort are not uncommon, but the fact that the old horse is still alive and happy after getting rid of his unwelcome encumbrance is regarded by horsemen as a marvel. Mr. Bull left the stone at the Occidental Hotel, where it has attracted considerable attention.—Goshen Independent-Republican.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

Lexington's Early Closing Fixed Events.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association announces in this issue the renewal of its Fixed Events which have been well termed "the classics of American light harness racing." The list includes the historic Transylvania for trotters eligible to the 2:12 class on June 2d, 1902, and for this race $6000 is offered; the McDowell, $5000 for 2:10 trotters; the Walnut Hall Farm Cup for 2:15 trotters guaranteed $3000 by Mr. L. V. Harkness, proprietor of Walnut Hall Farm, who will, in addition, present a handsome silver trophy valued at $500 to the owner of the winning horse; the Blue Grass, $2000 for 2:19 class; the Tennessee, $3000 for pacers eligible to the 2:08 class on June 2d, but need not be named until September 19th, with the privilege of transferring entries on or before the latter date; the Johnston, $2000, for trotters eligible to the 2:24 class; the West, $2000, for trotters of the 2:29 class; the Wilson, $2000, for pacers eligible to the 2:20 class; and for youngsters the Kentucky, $2000, for three year olds, and the Lexington, $2000 for two year olds.

Certainly there is no breeder, owner or trainer but who would experience a feeling of the greatest pleasure and pride to see their charges crowned as winner in any one of these noted events.

Entries will close on Monday, June 2d, with E. W. Shanklin, sec'y, at Lexington, Ky., and we know owners will encourage these rich and classic races by making the list a record breaker.

The conditions governing entries can be found on another page of this issue where also owners of both two and three year olds eligible to the Kentucky Futurity for foals of 1899, and for foals of 1900, are reminded that another payment is due in order to keep their youngsters in.

Relics of the Great Farm.

A unique department is to be added to the Stanford Museum in the shape of a "university and stock farm room," intended as a repository for a Stanford collection entirely distinct from the mementos and purely personal belongings of the Stanford family which already have a place among the exhibits. Curator Peterson is hard at work getting together everything obtainable in the way of relics of the Palo Alto farm and the early interests of the Senator. Among the articles already secured are a four-wheeled skeleton wagon, weighing sixty-four pounds, in which Senator Stanford drove Occident; a ball-bearing sulky, the first of its kind; Leland Stanford, Jr.'s, yellow-gear rig; prize awards and various other objects of interest to the student and visitor, all of which have been placed in a separate room along with the skeletons of Palo Alto, Electioneer and Occident.

The Montana Meeting.

Racing Secretary Ralph H. Tozer has been very busy this week visiting horsemen and interviewing railroad transportation agents in regard to shipping horses to the meeting which opens at Butte, June 21st. Mr. Tozer expects there will be fully 500 horses at the Butte track by the time the meeting opens.

A Jersey Live Bird Shoot in the '70's With Trained Pigeons.

Budd Doble, the veteran reinsman who drove and piloted Dexter, Goldsmith Maid and Nancy Hanks to eminent mention in the pages of history devoted to the trotting horse and whose name was, by Oliver Wendell Holmes, humorously mentioned as a "catarrhal cognomen," is a keen all round sportsman and in days past was a devotee and admirer of trap shooting. He told an amusing story the other day of an old time pigeon shoot that took place near Jersey City, N. J., nearly thirty years ago.

John Taylor, of Taylor Brothers, who kept the Taylor Hotel in Jersey City, was a crack shot at that time and was as clever, when occasion required and opportunity offered, in jockeying and outwitting his opponents as he was skillful with his shotgun. This combination made him an adversary of no little weight when a trap shoot in his bailiwick was held. One advantage he had, and a signal one, as the sequel to this story will prove, was that he owned the shooting ground where all the principal matches in that section were shot. So when Mr. Taylor was "four flushing" he generally had the ace up his sleeve and handy to get at.

A stocky built, ruddy faced country youth, "Billy" Seeds, by reason of his extreme cleverness in the field and skill at several trap shooting meets, attracted the attention and interest of a Mr. Joseph Vandergrift, a sportsman who resided then on the Bristol turnpike about five or six miles below Bristol, which place is near Philadelphia. Mr. Vandergrift thought so well of his protege's skill that he believed he could "wipe Taylor's eye" in a pigeon shoot.

Negotiations were entered into and finally a match was arranged for a shoot at 100 birds per man, 50 singles and 50 doubles, and a financial consideration on the side. Each shooter was to "find, handle and trap" for his opponent, as they used to arrange pigeon matches in those days. Taylor backed and filled on every detail he could, and was exasperatingly insistent on a number of conditions manifestly in his favor. However, he finally gave way in every particular, excepting two, in which he prevailed. This made nearly a straight flush with the convenient ace to draw to. The date set for the match was a little longer ahead than usual for an ordinary pigeon match, Taylor gained this point, for he was practical and deemed time a potent factor in determining results. The other condition was a thirty-five yard boundary. As each shooter was to supply the other's birds, Taylor at once commenced gathering the birds for "Billy's" benefit, he finally secured about 500 pigeons. They were dark selected birds and were housed comfortably in the immediate vicinity of the trap shooting grounds. They were fed up and looked after assiduously and all but the best and strongest quickly weeded out. Mr. Taylor's next move was to give his pigeons such a training as made them a particularly difficult lot of birds to grass. This was done in the following manner, the birds were daily taken from the loft to the shooting ground and placed in the traps. The traps, old fashioned box traps, were pulled all together. As soon as the traps were sprung, directly before them the startled pigeons could see several lusty fellows flailing the ground with cedar branches and yelling like Indians. These men were aided by several others who fired shotguns in the direction of the birds, the whole contingent making as much noise and commotion as possible at the same time. In the course of a short while these birds had received a liberal and effective education and as soon as a trap was sprung a swift winged tail ender or baffling out-going quarterer would strike out in rapid flight for safety in the familiar loft located a short distance away and almost in a direct line behind the set of traps.

On the day appointed for the match quite a gathering of the sports were on hand. New York, Philadelphia, Jersey City and other places being well represented by delegations interested in the "boy wonder's" career and incidentally willing to back their opinions with a few bills of various denominations. Mr. Doble does not now recall who was referee, the names of the seconds or scorers, but many of the actual incidents happening as the match progressed are still fresh in his memory. Seeds wore a green knit jacket and shot a muzzleloading gun, which kicked like a government mule. The birds provided by Mr. Vandergrift for Taylor to shoot at were a lot of home birds gathered shortly before leaving Bristol and were brought to Jersey City on the cars in willow champagne baskets. They were an averaging lot of good strong birds and after all Taylor was just a bit lucky. Taylor also used a muzzle loader, those being the days before fixed ammunition for shotguns, each shooter had his powder flask, shot pouch, both of which old-fashioned articles had a changeable device attached, through which the charges of powder and shot were, in a fairly accurate degree, measured and then dumped into the gun muzzles and afterwards given a tamping with the ramrod. Each shooter stood at thirty yards and both sported 10 gauge guns. The contestants, it was noticed, both used about as high class guns as were in vogue at that period.

Mr. Taylor opened the race and grassed his bird with the first barrel. "Billy" then faced the traps, after the birds had been changed, and dropped his bird neatly with one barrel. He was not without a following however, the bird he drew was a "corker," his clever shot evoked an encouraging recognition from his adherents, for in the side bets the odds were in favor of the veteran shooter.

As the match progressed Seeds, it was seen, held his own cleverly; the heavy recoil of his gun caused a contusion of his cheek which began to bleed, but he kept at his work bravely. The weather, too, was intensely cold and the ground frozen. Taylor finally got in the lead and maintained it, winning by a single bird. Seeds, whose subsequent exploits at the traps are not known, managed to kill 99 out of the 100 pigeons Taylor provide; this, however, includes pigeons gathered without bounds. The scores made not being remembered by Doble.

Training pigeons for a match may now, in these days, be a lost art. We have noted a discharge of both barrels at once when a particularly awkward incomer left the traps. A little thing like dropping for place don't avail anything now. In blue rock shooting, we have heard of a shoot between gun club teams from different places, where the local club generously provided plaster of Paris blue rocks for their visitors; a better scheme than that is to use very soft blue rocks, the pellets of shot will puncture but not break the target. Such a peccadillo as screwing the traps fast or slow is too trivial to discuss—shooters don't indulge in sure-thing matches now, not at all; those customs were practiced in the days of "auld lang syne."

An Appeal to Sportsmen.

The National Committee of the Audubon Societies, with headquarters at 525 Manhattan Avenue, New York, have issued through Mr. William Dutcher, chairman, a circular that is directly to the point, earnest and manly, and is most conspicuous as a model of protective literature in contradistinction to the usual articles that are more remarkable as fanatical tirades or vituperative bits of blackguardism than, instead of doing any general amount of good, are really the means of creating many class antagonisms that are a set-back to game and fish protection and result in a corresponding indifference to the protection of all other living creatures, whether feather, fur or fin, found afield, while afloat or on the banks of stream or lake.

The circular referred to, which we heartily endorse, having frequently called the attention of our readers to the unnecessary destruction of birds that were of public benefit, is as follows:

"Many sportsmen, when on hunting trips, are in the habit of shooting birds that can in no sense be considered game—simply for practice." It is undoubtedly a fact that large numbers of gulls, terns, swallows, swifts, night hawks, which in some sections of the country are known as bullbats, and birds of like character, are destroyed every year.

"Without considering the aesthetic side of the question, such birds should not be killed, from an economic standpoint; they are of great value to the public, and to wantonly destroy them for 'practice' in shooting is a habit that no true sportsman will engage in. Let us hope that it is the result of thoughtlessness.

"This appeal is made to the sportsmen of the country, to ask them to consider the great value of the non-game birds, and it is believed that they will not only abstain from killing such birds, but will preach the gospel of protection at all times."

We will take the liberty of appending some pertinent suggestions on this subject, for which the Riverside Enterprise is responsible, whilst making a plea for many creatures supposed to be harmful:

Kill them!

Kill what?

"Oh, the horned toads! For you know that they are the only thing we have that destroys the red ants with their agonizing sting, and prevents them from multiplying into untold, innumerable millions. So, if you cannot sell the toads for a nickel apiece, to be mounted and sent East as curios, just set your heel upon them when you see them.

"And there are the gopher snakes, slow, harmless fellows. Watch one for an hour or two. See him crawl into every gopher hole there is in your little orchard and, after swallowing all the young gophers he can find, watch him turn his attention to the rat holes in the edge of the wheatfield. He minds his own business and attends strictly to it. What, tired of watching him? Well, then, kill him, however beneficial he may be; kill him, just because he is a snake.

"Then, there are the birds. Here we have a couple of meadow larks, standing confidently close to the edge of the road. Get your gun and wantonly butcher them, lest they escape and destroy a hundred times their weight in cutworms. Shoot the pretty, waggish road-runners. They feed upon scorpions and centipedes and prevent them from becoming a menace and making life a burden to man. But then, the idle Sunday saunterer with his death-dealing twenty-two rifle, must be amused.

"Shoot the tucalotos, the pretty little ground owls that politely bob good morning to you. Shoot them, even though a man of veracity on the Chino ranch claims to have found seventeen gophers, old and young, in the nest of a family of tucalotos. They are too good to live—too innocent and self-sustaining. Shoot them!

"Shoot the hawks, the little kites or sparrow hawks. Of course they live upon the mischievous linnets, but that don't matter. Shoot the hen hawks! In this country they live on mice, rats and rabbits, but there's a legend from the East that they sometimes catch chickens. So be sure and shoot them; they make such a nice target."

The foregoing, whilst directed particularly to Southern California, is applicable in sentiment, theory and practice universally.

Striped Bass Fishing on the Eastern Coast.

When S. A. Tucker, Parker Bros.' representative on the Coast, was in Los Angeles recently, he told a rather interesting tale of sea fishing on the other Coast which shows that on the Atlantic the fishing for striped bass has been carried to far greater lengths than on this Coast, where the sport is younger.

Tucker is a charming narrator, and here is his tale: "Out on the Pacific Coast the fishermen usually have their sport from boats or from the public wharves, which is rather inconvenient some of the time, and from the agitation that has been raised lately against the seiners I would judge, most of the time.

"Down on Narragansett bay in the Massachusetts country, about where the rock-bound coast begins, the wealthy sportsmen go at the game in a more luxurious and expensive way, though I do not know whether it is much more satisfactory after all. They build iron fishing stands out into the Atlantic, each wealthy fisherman of any prominence having at least one of them and some have two or three. They are costly affairs, too. But that does not matter. People like John W. Gates do not care how much they spend so long as they get some fun in return for it.

"Out on this Coast a man thinks he is hard used if he spends $4 or $5 a day for a boatman and a boat and does not get half a dozen yellowtail or bass. Down there they think it is a big season's killing to get that many striped bass. There are only certain days that they can fish from these Narragansett bay stands with any show of success, and those are the days on which the winds blow strongly from the northwest with a cloudy sky and a roily disturbed condition of the water that sends the big bass into the surf following up the tide for fiddler crabs and other food.

"Once in a while one of these fellows with his hundred dollar split bamboo bass rod and high priced reel hooks two goodly sized bass in the course of a day. Then the entire sporting fraternity hears of it next day and turns out in force. These wealthy fellows buy a cuttyhunk line and never use it enough to take the kink out of it. About one trip is all that a line is supposed to be good for. Then it is given away. It might fray a little against the rocks causing a weakness that might lose a record fish, and that is a thing that would not be accepted for $500, let alone the price of a line or two.

"If some of the Catalina yellowtail anglers could see the kind of light gear that is used by these fishers after striped bass it would open their eyes. Out in this part of the country they think it is necessary to use a miniature telegraph pole and a reel like a windlass in order to do business with fish that do not average as large as those tide-runner bass. There they use specially made rods of selected split bamboo made up in the most costly style and put together to stand any reasonable use that will be given them by a careful angler. Of course they will not stand being 'fetched up' on by a heavy fish, but the sportsman in the East will take an hour or two to kill a bass if he is any size to speak of, and I have known of anglers working half a day with one.

"Fishing from these stands is not all a pleasure, however, owing to a peculiar construction of the law that makes it so a proprietor has no more rights on one of them after high tide than does any other fellow who may happen to attach his boat and climb up on them. The proprietors of these fishing stands have spent thousands of dollars trying to get through a law that will give them some permanent proprietorship in their stands, but so far it has been of no avail.

"There is an interpretation of the laws there that allows certain privileges to all fishermen—a sort of equity proceeding which does not recognize any proprietorship on the ocean after certain stages of the tide. The fact that a man owns the land from which one of these stands juts out protects him only so far as admittance to the stand is concerned. At low tide anybody can climb up from the beach and use them, and if the proprietor comes along and wants to fish it is entirely a matter of the courtesy of the first man there whether he vacates or stands pat. The law has been tried on the thing time and time again, but the law has never been made that would reverse the precedent.

"These Eastern striped bass run to immense size and some have been taken that would weigh fifty pounds. They do not average that large, but it is not uncommon to hook a thirty-pounder, and if there is any kind of fish that is much nicer than a slice of fresh bass steak I have never struck it to date.

"Out on this Coast there are a number of bass, but they do not seem to be as large as the Eastern product. That, I suppose, is a matter of age. California bass are an importation and I presume they have not been here long enough to have attained their full size. It must be a matter of a good many years for them to get their growth."—Los Angeles Express.

The record striped bass caught in the Sacramento river, is a fish caught recently by some of the net fishermen employed by the American Fish Company of Sacramento; this fish weighed fifty-nine pounds. The largest bass caught previously to this weighed forty-eight pounds. These two fish are not by any means as large as many recorded catches of big bass in Eastern waters. We have not yet had the pleasure of noting a thirty pound bass caught in our waters with rod and reel, several twenty-five pound fish have been landed however.

Fox Terrier Notes.

There seems to be a feeling of unrest among Fox Terrier exhibitors at the present time, mainly on the question of size. The disquiet is nothing new. It has occurred at intervals, over and over again, ever since the terrier of true working dimensions gave place to the larger, showier exhibition terrier. But at no time perhaps has the feeling been more pronounced or the necessity of choosing one's judges more decided. With the craze for long heads and exaggerated fronts, the larger dog was bound to have his day. Every breeder knows it is easier to produce long wolf-hound like heads with narrow fronts and sloping shoulders in the comparatively large terrier. A long head and perfect front with a compact, short-legged frame have never been very easy to attain. But there is no doubt a happy medium, and when Fox Terriers of lathy build weigh twenty-two pounds or more, it seems high time that the opposition should have a chance. The point, however, needs great discrimination. Assuming that the terrier is, as the name implies, a little dog capable of going to ground, a comparatively large dog of the correct shape may be more efficient than the coarse and cobby one however small he may be. It is not, therefore, a question of mere height at withers, and the sportsman has many points of detail to consider; but be that as it may, the large dog, which is otherwise unfit for the legitimate work of the breed, should be chucked at sight, and the movement is all in the right direction.

In the matter of size, dogs have always been the principal offenders. At no time have the prominent winners among bitches been very large. It is common enough at good shows to see a whole class of small bitches, no larger than they were five and twenty years ago. But the dogs are frequently giants, and dogs admittedly too large for show—the admission means a good deal in these days—are freely accepted as good stud dogs without any thought as regards the future of the breed. A dog that is defective in some point of detail may be held to be undesirable as a sire, but size is likely to be as hereditary as any other point, and it is not very clear why an over sized stud dog should be regarded as free from objection. The giants occur in both smooth and wire-haired varieties, the points of which do not differ beyond that of coat, but the latter are perhaps the greatest offenders. The recent champions in the wire dog classes have almost invariably been large, and they are accepted by English judges of reputation. At present, however, there is a tendency to make a stand.

The first sign of the times occurred perhaps at the Birmingham show of 1901. Mr. Redmond was the judge, and the show saw the downfall of Champion Cackler of Notts. Cackler is undoubtedly the wire dog of the day. It is not that he holds an unbeaten record, he has been defeated on and off by various cracks; but, for all that, he is beyond question the most dreaded competitor that any wire exhibitor has to face. He is a large dog, weighing, in good condition, perhaps twenty-two pounds, but his style in the ring, his magnificent head and neck and outlook, are usually more than sufficient to crush competition. And he is no chance winner of mushroom reputation. He is a son of Champion Barkley Ben and a grandson of Champion Tipton Slasher. As a sire, he has proved a remarkable success. Among his winning offspring are Commodore of Notts, Captain of Notts, Dusky Cackler, Dont Cackle, Classy of Notts, Dusky Gleaner, Morden Beau, Humberstone Rocket, Holmwood Cackler, Cackle of Colne, Cackling Weasel, Birchington and others. The Duchess of Newcastle has every reason to be proud of his career, and not the less because she bred him herself. A sportsman would doubtless like to see him smaller, but having said that, there is little more to be said; he is undoubtedly one of the grandest terriers of modern times.

At Birmingham, he was put down by Mr. Mutter in the open class, and Mr. Mutter, exhibiting him for the Duchess, never handled him for the Championship Cup with more confidence than he did on this occasion. It was thought an absolute certainty. At the same show, however, the Duchess was exhibiting a young son of Cackler, Commodore of Notts. Commodore had not been entered in the open class, possibly because it was not desired to run him against his illustrious sire, but more likely because it was held he had no chance in the company; the contest was very keen. He was entered in the limit class and was awarded first. As a limit winner, he was called up for the championship and was handled by Mr. Mutter, Jr. Commodore is a little dog, weighing, at a guess, under eighteen pounds; he has an exceptionally well shaped head, good front, short back, hard coat and admirable hind action. Still there are few judges who would have had the pluck to place him above the champion. Mr. Redmond did so, and Commodore, in addition to Champion Cackler, beat Champions Barkley Ben, King Elf and Royston Remus. It was a grand victory for a youngster, a little over a year old, and all in the same kennel. Still the owner was, I venture to say, disappointed, and many were surprised.

But there was a worse disappointment in store. At the fox terrier club show at Cheltenham, later in the same year, Mr. Shirley was the judge. Mr. Shirley is the president of the Kennel Club, and a gentleman of high position and knowledge in all canine lore. But he was an unknown factor, he had not judged for many years, he was scarcely in touch with the fox terrier of the day, it was not known in what direction his proclivities lay, and there was a bumper entry. As it proved, Mr. Shirley would not have the giants at any price, he did not consider them workmen, and Mr. Redmond's game little wire Don't Go Bang ran gaily through his classes, and eventually secured the championship over the redoubtable Cackler and many other cracks. Don't Go Bang is quite a small terrier, who has not been exhibited often, in fact very seldom, but who has always held his own when shown. Still he had never won a championship before, and on the 13th of November last he was competing against the very best wires of modern times. His success was a feather in the cap of the small strain. At the same exhibition, the twenty-second show of the fox terrier club, Mr. Walter Glynn was adjudicating on the smooth classes. Mr. Glynn is a young man and thoroughly in touch with the times, but he was taking the same line. The well known Velocipede obtained no higher card than a v h c, and Mr. Glynn remarked that he was too big, and could not with any consistency be placed in the same category as the winner (Avon Minstrel) unless there were no other quality small ones. It will be interesting to observe what will happen at later shows, and whether the Duchess will exhibit Cackler again, for Cackler is still the champion in a class where the competition is highest, and it will take a very good small one to remove him from his place.—John Brown in The Asian.

Ping Pong.

Ping Pong
Is what?
Great Scott!
Better ask, what not?
Here—There,
Everywhere,
Tie—Back,
Over—Back,
Click—click—
Another knock,
No score—
On the floor,
(Under the table,
Are you able
To turn and twist
Like a contortionist?
Bat it—Hit!
Just a whiff,
There—Where?
In the air—

Oh, my
In the eye!
Down again—
Crawl—crawl,
Let it fall—
Prance—dance,
Jump—hump,
Twist your wrist—
Tip—tap—
Snippity snap,
Never stop
Pop—pop—
Now you know,
Sure enough,
It's hot stuff
Red hot—
Gee whizz!
That's what Ping pong is?

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

AT THE TRAPS.

The Capital City Blue Rock Club shoot at Sacramento last Sunday brought out a large crowd of shooters. Over 6000 blue rocks were trapped during the day. In the club race several members missed a straight by one bird. Dr. E. C. Deuel won a gold bar and advanced one class. Messrs. Ajax and Peek of the first class won gold bars and advanced to the championship class. Dr. F. L. Atkinson won a gold bar and advanced a class. A. P. Booth sprung the greatest surprise of the day. He shot for the first time, using gun and ammunition wholly unfamiliar to him, won a gold bar, the only one in his class, and advanced to the next highest class, among which are some of the most reliable shots of the club. The fact of the Northern California tournament taking place to-day and to-morrow drew forth a large attendance for practice. Teams from Red Bluff, Redding, Dixon, Davisville, Cottonwood, Chico, Oak Park, Washington and three from Sacramento have entered for the team championship shoot. At this event accommodations will be provided for the public to witness the shooting in comfort.

The Capital City Blue Rock Club members now shoot under a classification system arranged on a promotion scale. Gold, silver and bronze bars will be awarded in each class as follows: Championship class, a gold bar for 25 straight, a silver bar for 24 breaks and a bronze bar for a score of 23. First class, gold, silver and bronze bars for straights of 24, 23 and 22 respectively. Second class, bars for scores of 23, 22 and 21 breaks. Third class, bars for scores of 22, 21 and 20. Fourth class, for strings of 21, 20 and 19. Medals can be worn only once in any one class during the season. The winning of a medal advances the shooter one class. The medals are of unique design—a blue rock entwined by a laurel wreath with the name of the club figured on the border.

A recent blue rock shoot by Fresno trap shooters at the local gun club shooting grounds shows some good scores. Frank Fanning won the first-class medal, breaking all of a possible fifty in that competition. Fred Fanning winning the second-class medal with a score of seventeen. In the seventh event Dan Dismukes broke thirty-eight targets straight and also made a clean score in a twenty-five bird race. Fred Stone made two separate runs of twenty-four.

Following are the scores, all the events being at twenty blue rocks, but the last two, which were at twenty-five:

The principal feature of the Golden Gate Gun Club shoot last Sunday at Ingleside besides the regular monthly club race, was the shoot for the third and last of the trophies won by members of the now disbanded Olympic Gun Club. N. H. Neustadter won the prize, the Overland Monthly trophy. Nine men entered and shot at 50 birds, distance handicap. Neustadter and Derby stood at the sixteen-yard mark, Nauman at the twenty-yard mark and Haight at the eighteen-yard mark. All made 44, and tied for the trophy. In the shoot-off Neustadter won with a score of 45.

At the club's April shoot, C. A. Haight and Otto Feudner tied for the Roost trophy. Last Sunday Feudner won the trophy in the tie shoot-off scoring 42 breaks to Haight's 31. Fred Feudner won the first trophy shot for, the Inanimate Target Association trophy.

In the club shoot at 25 targets, distance handicap, the scores were: Haight, 18 yards 22 breaks, E. L. Forster 18-21, W. J. Golcher 18-21, "Slade" 18-20, O. Feudner 18-20, Dr. E. G. McConnell 18-20, W. E. Murdock 16-19, W. A. Robertson 16-19, N. H. Neustadter 16-19, F. Feudner 16-18, E. A. Wands 16-17, A. L. Gerstle 16-17, J. J. Sweeney 16-16, W. Wattles 14-16, Dr. A. T. Derby 14-14, Eug Forster 14-11.

In a following thirty-bird handicap race all the entries shot at their first fifteen birds from the sixteen yard mark and for the second fifteen they were handicapped according to the first scores made.

Scores made from the sixteen yard mark were: Golcher 14, Nauman 13, F. Feudner 13, Neustadter 13, Wands 13, O. Feudner 12, Tano 12, Slade 12, Derby 12, Klevesahl 12, Murdock 13, Robertson 12, Haight 11, Sweeney 11, Wattles 12, Williamson 11, Gerstle 8, McConnell 9, Ed Feudner 9, Jensen 5.

In shooting at the second fifteen birds the handicaps and scores made were as follows: Golcher 20-12, Nauman 18-15, Fred Feudner 18-13, Neustadter 18-10, Wands 8-10, O. Feudner 18-12, Fano 18-12, Slade 18-11, Derby 18-10, Klevesahl 18-13, Murdock 18-9, Robertson 18-13, Haight 16-15, Sweeney 16-10, Wattles 16-14, Williamson 16-11, Gerstle 14-2, McConnell 14-12, Ed Feudner 14-11, Jensen 14-9.

In the foregoing event Nauman won first with a total of 28, Otto Feudner second with 27 and W. J. Golcher, Fred Feudner and C. A. Haight tied for third with scores of 26. W. A. Robertson won both a gold and silver bar for straights of 25 and 15, Nauman and Haight each won two silver bars. Otto Feudner and Dr. Derby each won a silver bar.

A party of Black Jack Gun Club members and friends, including "Ole Lem," Prof. James Markland, "Stump" Wyman, "Hefty" Marcus, "Hardmouth," "Clabber" Goodman and a few other choice spirits (inside and outside) arranged a live bird shoot on the quiet recently. The shoot took place in the country on the ranch of a congenial companion. A San Mateo sportsman furnished several dozen pigeons that were ordered. The style of shooting and the resulting scores between two teams of the shooters for a dinner—the "War Correspondent" was Referee, handled the ropes and scored—can be surmised readily by a perusal of the following note Pete Thorsen sent to Prof. Markland from San Mateo: "Friend Jim—I beg to sincerely thank you for the patronage of the Black Jack Verein, and to intimate that I shall be only too happy to supply you with any number of birds on future occasions of the sort. The whole of the pigeons for which you paid me at the rate of 25 cents per head returned home in safety, and moreover, brought with them four stray pigeons."

In the blue rock events at Bakersfield last week, Haight, Feudner and Nauman shot from the twenty-yard peg

The blue rock shoot of most absorbing interest since the opening of Ingleside grounds this season will be a merchandise prize shoot to-morrow given by Clabrough, Golcher & Co. Among the list of nearly 100 articles offered to the shooters in four classes will be four fine shotguns, one for each class. The program and conditions of the shoot appeared in last week's BREEDER. Indications point to a large gathering of trap shooters.

Napa sportsmen to the number of one hundred and fifty, enjoyed a pigeon shoot and "bullhead breakfast" at the Suscol House on the 4th inst. Nine heads cooked to a king's taste, and plenty of chili sauce, beans and the other good things that go with the barbecued meats. There was some very good and some very bad shooting. The day was an ideal one. C. C. Mansfield, of Napa, was referee and J. W. Elias, of Vallejo, scored. The birds were an exceptionally fine strong lot. Many were well hit, but fell dead out of bounds. The following scores were made:

The first race at 10 birds ended in a tie between Reams and the two Mayfields, and after shooting at four birds more they divided the purse:

Reams, C.	11012	00112	7	Mayfield, S.	00121	20212	7

It is whispered that there was no shot in the cartridges of Mr. Berry's gun the first time he shot. S. Mayfield and Chas. Reams then shot four matches. The first two were 4-4, 5-5. The third was Mayfield 3, Reams 2; the fourth (10 birds), Reams 8, Mayfield 7.

Event No. 3, twenty blue rocks, high guns, $5 entrance, five moneys—Hawkshurst 16, Giddings 13, St. John 18, F. Stone 16, O'Neill 12, Donohoe 11, G. Stone 18, Fano 15, Raymond 18, Yancey 14, Blanchard 17, Fesler 14, Feudner 15, Nauman 20, Haight 15, Hicks 12, Wilkes 12.

Event No. 4, twenty blue rocks, class shoot, $2.50 entrance, four moneys—Raymond 18, O'Neill 12, Davis 6, Yancey 15, St. John 16, Woods 16, F. Stone 18, Fesler 16, Downing 15, Blanchard 18, McLane 15, G. Stone 18, Feudner 19, Nauman 20, Haight 17, Giddings 13.

Event No. 5, twelve live birds, class shoot, $10 entrance, four moneys—Hicks 11, Woods 10, Raymond 12, F. Stone 10, Haight 12, St. John 11, Yancey 11, Blanchard 8, Giddings 11, Downing 10, Nauman 12, O'Neill 11, Feudner 9, G. Stone 10, Allen 12.

The biggest live bird shoot that ever occurred in that part of the State took place last Saturday, the second day of the shoot. The principal event was No. 3 on the program, and was for a purse of $315, divided as follows: $100 to first, $75 to second, $50 to third, $40 to fourth, $30 to fifth and $20 to sixth. It was a handicap match at twenty-five live birds, $20 entrance, birds extra, high guns to win. Eleven of the crack trap shooters of the State lined up for the affair, as follows: Sam Yancey of Bakersfield, Raymond, Blanchard and Hicks of Los Angeles, A. J. Allen of North Ontario, G. Stone, F. Stone and St. John of Fresno, and Clarence Nauman, Clarence Haight and Otto Feudner represented San Francisco. "Raymond" and "Hicks" are the assumed names of two prominent men of Los Angeles. Horace Stevens was the scorer, J. H. Davis of Bakersfield refereed and M. A. Fesler of Visalia handled the pulls.

Yancey, the local man, was first up and used both barrels in killing his initial bird. He shot in splendid form up to the seventeenth bird, which he missed, as well as the one following, but thereafter killed every bird with the first barrel. His two misses were sufficient to keep him out of the money, however, as St. John won, with a clean score of twenty-five, while Nauman, Haight, Feudner, Raymond and F. Stone were right after him with 24 birds each. Nauman fell down on his twelfth shot and it was all due to his own carelessness, as it was a slow incoming bird, and probably as easy as any that he had during the day. Judge St. John shot with extreme care as he faced the traps for his last shot; the Judge realized fully how much that shot was worth to him.

He adjusted his glasses very properly, looked down at the 28-yard stake where he was standing as if in search of a hunch, and after twitching his hat rim to the proper pose for shade from the strong sunlight, called out "ready," and a second later gave the word to "pull." The pigeon hung around the trap in the most tantalizing manner possible; when it did rise it made a bee line for the rear, but got no further than ten feet away, as St. John's gun stopped it. It was a decidedly popular victory, as everybody likes Judge St. John, and all his competitors joined in the demonstration. The scores were:

Yancey 30 yards, 23; Raymond 30-24, Feudner 33-24, Hicks 29 yards (withdrawn), Blanchard 28-21, Haight 32-24, F. Stone 29-24, St. John 28-25, G. Stone 28-23, Nauman 33-24, Allen 29-22.

The tournament promoted by the Union Gun Club of Kern county was held at the club grounds in the Indiana colony, Kern City, under the most favorable auspices possible. A large force had been at work for several weeks putting the range in first class shape, and as a result Kern county can boast of the best equipped shooting grounds in the State. While the club has been organized less than one month—since April 12th—it already has more than 80 signatures to its official roll, while fully twenty-five more have signified their intention of joining. The following is a complete list of those who signed the roll, together with the names of the officers: Horace Stevens, President; H. L. Dort, Vice-President; Louis E. Swain, Secretary; Charles A. Hare, Treasurer; Edwin N. Moor, Shooting Master; H. R. McClane, Shooting Master; Charles E. Day, Captain of Shotgun Team; J. W. Payne, Jack Nelson, O. Neikirk, Fred E. Borton, Daniel B. Woodson, E. Arrangements have been made for rifle shooting at 200 yards, with prizes for single shot rifle, repeaters and other arms on the German ring targets, and military rifles at 200 yards on the Creedmoor targets; also at fifty yards with pistol and revolver, and 22 and 25-caliber rifles in separate classes.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Buckwa, the English Setter that is familiar to local sportsmen, a dog that is a typical exponent of what a good field dog should be, is announced in the stud in the kennel advertisement columns. Buckwa is a clean built, strong boned and symmetrically handsome dog and should do much to keep the breed at a high standard here.

Mr. Feige informs us that he has two dog puppies left from the last litter out of Nancy Hanks by Luke C.

The Ellesgy Kennels have added another brood bitch to the company composed of Harry Lacy, King Commando, Endcliffe Forceps and Endcliffe Pleasure. The new one is the bitch Lady Bethel (Guelph—Hour II.), whelped August 1899. She was sent out here by an Eastern breeder and sold to Mr. Leon S. Greenebaum by Dr. Geo. W. Clayton, agent. The Ellesgy Kennels now have a start on the breed that will be a hard one to beat on the Coast.

The Sacramento show opened auspiciously on Tuesday morning. The exhibit is a small one, nearly 150 entries. Cockers, Collies and Fox Terriers had the best representation. Among the local fancy and others in this vicinity who entered their dogs were: Chas. K. Harley, Mrs. Thos. Magee, Wm. J. Foster, N. H. Hickman, Irving C. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Klein, Albert Joseph, James Hervey Jones, Delverton Cocker Kennels, Naird Kennels, Plumeria Kennels, Mrs. T. J. Blight, O. J. Albee, Winters Collie Kennels, Mrs. Chas. Newman, Dresser, Simpson and Niehaus and others. A report and list of awards will appear next week.

The affliction of our dear old friend and well esteemed sportsman, Horace Smyth, has, we sincerely regret to state, recently taken a turn for the worse. Notwithstanding the application of every possible effort that loving care and the very best medical attention could devise, the fatal termination of the illness is now regarded as but a matter of days or possibly a month—with the saving clause, that while there is life there is hope, and with the vitality and stamina which Mr. Smyth was well endowed with, there is a flickering chance that he may pull through and remain with us for some time. We pray that he may and know that his many friends among the angling fraternity will heartily echo the sentiment.

The old dam in the Garcia river about seven miles above Point Arena was washed out this winter. It is reported lots of big steelhead have been enabled to get up into all the small tributaries during the high water this year.

The run of salmon in Monterey bay is still on. Anglers are getting fish three to ten pounds in size near Santa Cruz. The bay is full of immense schools of sardines. The run of the big salmon is looked for daily.

Clabrough, Golcher & Co., are selling as many ping pong sets as fishing rods these days.

The Bowersock land leasing bill in Congress has been indefinitely postponed, the President, it is said, not favoring its provisions. Another bill has been introduced differing somewhat from the original measure which was endorsed if not drawn by the National Live Stock Association.

Four hundred thousand more acres of land in Oklahoma Territory are to be opened to settlement in about three months' time under the provisions of the homestead law. These are the lands of the Kiowa and Comanche and Apache Indians.

A cablegram from Europe states that in some parts of Russia famine has forced the price of wheat up to $3.35 the bushel. In some parts of the Czar's empire it is said that the shortage is so great that the last remnants of the seed grain has been eaten and no spring crops have been sown. It is supposed that this shortage may have a marked effect on European prices of wheat within the next few months before the Hungarian crop can be marketed.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued Circular No. 36 from the Dairy Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. This contains a complete list of all "officials, association and educational institutions connected with the dairy interests of the United States for the year 1902." Included are the names of the officials of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, the list of State dairy schools, dairy associations, and finally the dairy statistics of the United States. The pamphlet may be obtained on application to the Secretary of Agriculture direct at Washington, D. C.

Cured Spavins of Ten Years' Standing.

Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Gentlemen—Some years ago I used your Kendall's Spavin Cure on a horse that had been lame from splint, and it removed them entirely. These spavins had been on him from birth, and were of ten years' standing. I now have a case of a mare that was injured by falling through a bridge, and am going to give her complete treatment with your Spavin Cure. Very truly yours, CLARK O. POORE.

132,000 Deaths from this alone.

One special danger menaces those who live well, who can use champagne and fine liquors, and that is Bright's Disease. Posted clubmen understand this so well that many have tests made every few months. Others drink nothing but dry wines. But still the deaths reported from Bright's Disease and Diabetes are increasing at a fearful rate. The last census reports show that since 1890 the increase has been nearly fifty per cent and that the deaths in the United States alone from above causes and diseases growing out of them last year reached the enormous number of 132,000.

Hence the importance of every clubman knowing this one fact, viz.: That Bright's Disease and Diabetes are now positively curable in about 87% of all cases. The Fulton Compounds are now saving the lives of hundreds, and will, when better known, save the lives of thousands who are now with little hope.

MONTEREY 31706 RECORD 2:09 1/4
PEDIGREE IN PART.

Sired by SIDNEY 2:19 1/4, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05 1/4 (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Battle dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4340, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18 1/4. Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21 1/4, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:15, first quarter in 0:40 1/2, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."
WALTER S. MABEN.

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902.

SIR GIBBIE 2d.....	James McDonnell, Portola, San Mateo Co

THE BIG MEETING of the California circuit this year will be at Fresno, where the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will give a grand lot of stakes and purses (headed by The California, a $2000 stake for trotters eligible to the 2:24 class) during the same week the Fresno Agricultural District Association holds its fair. The racing will begin September 30th and continue five days. It will probably be the only exclusive harness meeting given in California this year and that it will be a grand success is assured. It has been several years since the magnificent track at Fresno has been used for a race meeting and as Fresno county is a great horse breeding center and the business is now prosperous, there was a general demand for the Breeders to hold their meeting there. The track and grounds are owned by the county and are kept in fine condition. A driving club is being formed by Fresno road drivers and there is already a great demand there for good roadsters. The members of the club are taking great interest in the Breeders meeting. It is proposed by the Breeders Association to hang up a magnificent silver cup costing $150 for a race for horses owned and driven by members of the Fresno club, and it is said commissions are already out for horses to be entered in this cup race. The P. C. T. H. B. A. proposes to advertise and boom this Fresno meeting to a greater extent than any meeting in California has been exploited for years and with the aid of the county fair will doubtless succeed in drawing to Fresno the largest crowd of people seen at the raisin center for years. Entries for the first installment of six stakes ranging from $600 to $2000 each will close Monday, June 2d. Secretary Kelley has already mailed blanks to horsemen all over the Pacific Coast, and a big lot of entries is confidently expected.

SEVEN THOUSAND DOLLARS AT NAPA should draw a big list of entries, and Secretary Ed Bell will doubtless be the busiest man in his town when the entries made Monday, June 2d, come in. That is the date for closing the Napa entries and horsemen must not forget it. The Napa meeting opens August 18th and follows the Vallejo meeting. The very generous program provided by the Napa Agricultural Society did more to start the circuit off right this year than the action of any other association in the State, as the announcement was made before any other board of directors had arranged a program. Napa should therefore be remembered by every owner in California who will race harness horses this year. There are twelve stakes to close Monday, June 2d. Of these six are for trotters and range from $500 to $800. The six stakes offered pacers are $500 each. The Napa meeting has always been one of the very best on the circuit. This year the trotters and pacers will have the track to themselves for four days, and there will be no book-making permitted on harness races. This program is just what every harness horse trainer and owner in California has been demanding for several years and we believe they will show their appreciation of the new deal by entering liberally. The track at Napa is in excellent shape for training horses over, the trainers who are quartered there now speaking in the highest praise of its condition. Mr. Brown, the lessee of the track, is an enthusiastic member of the Board of Directors and wants to see the best meeting ever held there this year, and with the aid of his fellow members and the efficient Secretary will come very near accomplishing the desired end. There is no prettier spot in California than Napa, hotel accommodations are excellent and every provision is being made at the track for the comfort of horsemen and their horses. Start off by giving Napa a big entry list and see the California Circuit boom this year.

SALES OF THOROUGHBREDS will begin at the Fasig-Tipton Company's paddocks at Sheephead Bay early next month. Consignments from forty-two breeders will be sold during the summer, the first sale being down for June 3d, and the last on September 9th. Rancho del Paso yearlings will be sold June 13th to 18th, and those from Mr. A. B. Spreckels' Napa Stock Farm will go under the hammer July 1st. Superintendent Geo. W. Berry will leave Napa with this consignment about the 15th of June. He has a grand lot of youngsters to take across, fully as good as last year's yearlings, which created quite a sensation by their size and good looks, and brought good prices.

JAMES F. CALDWELL, the starter, prominently known in turf circles throughout the country, died suddenly of apoplexy at his cottage at Saratoga last Thursday. He suffered from rheumatism since last November, but of late appeared to be greatly improved and was able to take outdoor exercise. Mr. Caldwell was born in Danville, Ky., sixty-five years ago, and enjoyed robust health until last fall. During his long career on the turf he officiated as starter on all the principal running tracks in the United States.

TROTting BRED HORSES, to the number of 46, are to be sold at auction by Mr. William G. Layng at his new quarters for the Occidental Horse Exchange, at 246 Third street, on Tuesday next, May 27th. These horses are from the Alisal Ranch, Santa Barbara county, and include sons and daughters of Bay Rose 2:20½, Beau Brummel 2:16½, Almonition 2:24½, Alonza Hayward 2:30, Will Tricks and other standard bred stallions. The horses are all of good size, weighing from 1000 to 1300 pounds. There is no reserve on anything and buyers can depend on getting horses at their own prices.

A NEW YORK RUMOR has it that Mr. J. B. Haggin will have the Monmouth course put in shape for special effort to be made by his colt Watercolor by Watercress to beat Salvator's record of 1:35½ for a mile. Salvator carried 110 pounds when he made this record as a four year old, and Mr. Haggin believes Watercolor can shade the time a fraction if all things are favorable.

THE EMPIRE CITY Trotting Club has received an enormous list of entries to its early closing purses. The entrance money will more than pay the purses offered.

From Olympia, Washington.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Holton Martin has had Beach by Altamont, dam by Adirondack, under his tutorage at the Woodland track since last March, and last week he was bought by D. M. Shanks, of North Yakima, from his owner, H. S. Royce, of Tacoma, for $500. Beach can show miles better than 2:20.

Holton Martin is working a four year old filly by a son of Wonder 2:27½, dam by Ichi Ban. She trots and is a good one. He also has a five year old stallion by Florida M., dam by Ichi Ban, that is a fine individual and can step some.

Dr. Ingham is driving Chester by Evara, dam by Henry Middleton. The Doctor is always ready for a road brush.

Dr. Redpath drives Goldust Wilkes and enjoys a brush also.

Mr. Berkshire drives Duke and Mr. Norris old Mollie K., and are waiting to meet—by accident, you know.

C. S. Wilcox has Bonnie Kisbar by Royal Kisbar, dam by Challenger Chief, and Black Bess by Mason Chief, dam by Oregon Pathfinder. Black Bess is heavy with foal by Zombro.

I drive Altamontine by Antamont (he by Altamont), dam Birdie Altamont by Altamont, and Maud W. by old Wonder 2:27½, dam by Antelope. The horseless age is further from Olympia than ever.

Yours truly,

F. PEPPARD, V. S.

Buying Range Horses for South Africa.

TACOMA (Wash.), May 16.—The British government has buyers in Eastern Washington and Oregon with orders to purchase all the available range horses. These will be shipped to some central distributing point, probably Lathrop, Mo., and there broken by professional bronco riders. These horses which pass inspection after being broken will be shipped to South Africa for use in the army, the others being sold, some to owners of cotton fields in the South.

Large shipments of Washington and Oregon horses were bought by British buyers last year and shipped to Africa. These gave such good service that the government decided to secure as many as possible during the coming spring and summer. Hereford & Lowther, well known horse traders of Walla Walla, have just received an order for 1000 horses, to be delivered immediately. Prices vary from $35 to $45 for broken animals and $15 up for unbroken steeds.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses, cattle or dogs by sending a plain description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

F. S. K.—I have seen in some numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that the subscribers have the privilege of asking questions in regard to horses. I had a mare foal on the 3d inst. She tore herself and is gillfirted. Will I be able to breed her again and will she catch? Will she foal all right?

If the parts are cleansed and disinfected, the edges of the tear scraped to make a fresh bleeding surface, then sutured in place, and the parts cleansed with antiseptics twice a day, it may unite again and avoid the unsightly appearance and the disagreeable noise made when driving such an animal. If this be not done the chances of getting the mare in foal by ordinary means (without artificial impregnation) are small. If the mare should become pregnant, the act of foaling should not cause any more trouble than if she were not thus affected.

W. S.—I have a stallion 9 years old that has a breaking out, mostly near the flank on the body. The skin raises up in a hard welt, about one inch wide, and keeps spreading slowly, the welt moving forward. The hair comes off, but seldom makes a raw sore, and when the hair comes back it is considerably white. Although I keep it well greased, he has a few hard pimples on the shoulder. The horse gets good care, plenty of grass and good hay and grain, and plenty of exercise and a clean stable. He is in good condition, looks fine and feels fine. Can you tell me what to do for him? He has been troubled all spring. Sometimes he gets almost well. I have given him golden seal one part and saltpeter two parts, mixed, one tablespoonful once a day, but it don't cure.

Avoid barley as a diet. Wheat hay should also be avoided. Oat hay is best to feed, and if he be not worked hard give bran mash every evening. Oats may be fed if he gets regular work. Sulphur internally is good, and the following ointment applied to the parts daily: Icthyol 1 oz., compound stearate of zinc 1 oz., lanoline 4 ozs., vaseline 4 ozs. Mix together and apply as a salve.

J. M.—Can you give me a receipt to take stains out of the hair on a white horse?

I cannot answer this. If the parts be allowed to remain dirty and the stain becomes fixed there, clipping the parts to remove the old stain, and daily washing, good large blanket and good clean bedding will keep it clean.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

Order your mail to Hotel Rosslyn, Los Angeles.

JOTTINGS.

A BIG SALE OF TROTTING STOCK will be held at the well known mart on the corner of Van Ness avenue and Market street during the latter part of next month. At that time Fred H. Chase & Co. will sell all the broodmares and colts from Hon. Jesse D. Carr's Gabilan Stock Farm at Salinas. Uncle Jesse has been wanting to dispose of this stock for some time, saying that when a man is 87 years old it is time for him to get out of the horse business. There are forty well bred mares in this consignment and they have been bred this year to such stallions as McKinney 2:11½, Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, Hambletonian Wilkes, Boodle Jr. and others, and the yearlings, two and three year olds are all by first class standard sires. There are many grandly bred mares and colts, some that would grace any stock farm in America, and as great prospects as can be found in any country on earth. Mr. Carr has always bred from a practical standpoint. If mares were not sound and robust, with good looks and size, he did not think them worth breeding, and he never patronized a poorly bred or inferior stallion. His many interests in all parts of the State have kept him from having but very few of his horses trained, but he has sold many a horse at a good price and has always been counted one of California's successful horse breeders. Now that Mr. Carr is getting so far advanced in years that he cannot devote his personal attention to such matters as horse breeding, he thinks the best thing is to dispose of the entire lot and they will be sold for what they will bring, with no by-bidding or reserve on anything. This sale will afford an opportunity for small breeders to get a few broodmares or colts that will bring them good money on the investment. There is a scarcity of broodmares in the country from Maine to California, and the prices which ordinary horses are now bringing in the market have an upward tendency, with small prospects of any lowering of prices for years to come. A good broodmare bred to a good stallion will bring a revenue that will pay a profit on the investment, the pasture bills and the service fees. There are many excellent horses standing for public service each year for $25 that can be patronized with profit. Every farmer will find that unless he breeds his own roadsters for the next five or six years that he will be compelled to pay big prices for suitable horses. This sale of the Gabilan Stock Farm animals will enable purchasers to get some good goods at their own prices. When Mr. Chase returns from Salinas with a list of the mares and colts to be sold, we will be able to say something more definite about the stock.

Down at the Fresno track, where Charley Clark has been preparing a small string of trotters to campaign on the Grand Circuit, is a four year old gelding by Junio out of Maud Whippleton, that is looked upon by the raisin eaters as the nearest approach to the two-minute trotter that was ever foaled in the great San Joaquin valley. Clark has been working this gelding for the owner, Joe Weil, and the railbirds at the track say that he has driven him a quarter in 31½ seconds. One would think from his breeding that the four year old would be at least 16 hands high and weigh 1200 pounds, but he is a different sort of a horse. About a thousand pounds is his weight and his height close to 15.3. He is said to be as clean turned and clean gaited as anybody's trotter. I was told this week by a Fresnoite that it was the owner's intention to have the gelding worked a mile in about 2:15 the last of this week and then turn him out to run and feed and grow until Clark comes back in the fall. If no accident happens him the intention is to enter him well on the Grand Circuit next year. His dam, Maud Whippleton, is a standard and registered mare that was bred by Mr. D. S. Fraser, of Petaluma. She was sired by Fred Loeber's old horse Whippleton, that weighed all of 1300 pounds, and her dam was by Gladiator. Junio was 16½ hands high and weighed 1280 pounds.

Charley Clark will start for the East with his string about the first week in June. He will leave Toggles 2:08½ behind him in all probability, as the son of Strathway is on the shelf and will in all probability never go down the line again in the regular races. His old lameness from rheumatism has troubled him much this spring at times and Mr. Clark thinks it is useless to take him where he has to trot to his limit in nearly every heat and meet the best horses in training. Toggles has been a great trotter in his day, and when he was just right, with no aches or pains to trouble him, few trotters could keep up with him when he struck his best gait. A quarter in 30 seconds could be covered by him seemingly with perfect ease and the manner in which he held his head and swung it from side to side made a pretty sight, especially as he trotted without pulling a pound on the bit. He is one of the greatest road horses in America, and although his occasional lameness may prevent his campaigning, don't ever think when you see his owner, Mr. Babcock, driving him on the roads at Coronado that you have a horse that can beat him. As the chances are you will have to take the dust of Toggles, whether the road is one or twenty miles long. Sue 2:12½ and Cozad 2:20½ will be Mr. Clark's mainstays on his trip. Sue is in about $60,000 worth of stakes and everybody who knows Clark will hope to see him win the most of them.

"He is very fast, but a mile is a long distance for him, and he gets very tired before he reaches the wire." This was the story told me the other day by an owner of a trotter that has been showing some fast quarters during the past month and talked about as a coming 2:10 performer. The owner added: "Last February, when I first began working this horse, I fully intended entering him through the Eastern Grand Circuit and thought I had an M. & M. winner. He showed me an eighth at a 2:10 gait before the first of March, and I was all swelled up with the idea that I at last owned a world beater. I think different now, as while my horse can show an eighth in 16 seconds almost any day on the track or on the road, he has never yet been able to trot a half-mile faster than 1:08 and is stopping some when the half-mile pole is reached. He is not a counterfeit, as he does not stop because he does not like it, but because his lungs are not right. He puffs like a fat man at the end of a fast quarter and wheezes like a high pressure engine at the half. A mile is simply too far for him; it is beyond his limit and that's all there is to it. I have driven him forty miles in the forenoon of a summer's day on a trip into the country, given him a rest of a couple of hours and roaded him back home before dark, and the next day he seemed ready to make another just such trip, but if I drive him a mile at his best he shows the effects of the effort for a week. I will not race him this year nor at any future time, as I know he is not a race horse, but no man on earth can make me believe he is not game. He will do all he can and try to do more, but a mile at speed is beyond his capacity and he is not one of the sort that will ever be able to earn money on the race track. He is one of the kind that can trot a quarter in 35 seconds and die coming home in 2:30. If the heats were around 2:40 I believe I could win a race or two with him, but that is not fast enough for country club races these days."

I know of several horses that were in training last year that were counterparts of the one above described. They are like the old time quarter horses that ran on the racing paths in our boyhood times. I remember one that had a big reputation in the county where I spent my salad days. Her owner (she was a gray mare) was a dry goods clerk with pompadour hair and long legs, and he was generally ready to make a match with anybody. He usually employed some young fellow to ride her in her races, but rather than pay forfeit he would be his own jockey and when astride the little gray his long legs would nearly touch the ground. I don't think this mare weighed over 750 or 800 pounds, yet she would carry her owner 220 yards in about 12 seconds. Brown, that was the clerk's name, rode her forty miles one Saturday night and won a race with her the next day in Lake county and rode her home Sunday night. He always claimed, and no one, that I ever heard of, disputed him, that she was the gamest piece of horseflesh in Napa county. If he had ever started her in a half-mile race she would have then and there earned a reputation of being a quitter or a "dog," as they now call them. She was simply a quarter mare and her owner knew it. There are hundreds of quarter horses among trotters and pacers and, sad to relate, many of the owners never discover the fact except after a heavy expenditure of money.

All the horsemen are talking about the very successful sale of California bred horses that came off at Cleveland last week. A full report of all the sales is given on another page of this paper, which will show just how much money each one brought. There was but one real disappointment during the week. Willard Stimson had refused $5000 for Julia M. by Zombro before leaving Los Angeles, and she only brought $2600. I hear that she made a very poor showing on the track the day before the sale, a quarter in 38½ seconds being the best she could do and was badly gaited at that. As friend C. H. Harrison of Los Angeles writes, Stimson would have been wise had he taken his tip and engaged Walter Maben to go to Cleveland to show the mare, although it is not unlikely that the cause of her bad showing was something unavoidable, as often occurs with mares. Julia M. worked a mile in 2:13½ at Los Angeles and did it very nicely, but could show nothing like such a clip at Cleveland. It was an off day with her and Mr. Stimson had to stand the loss. Better luck to him next time. He sold The Vendome very well, as he got more than he paid for him by considerable.

As the Palo Alto two year olds brought forty per cent more on the average than they did last year Superintendent Frank Covey is entitled to much credit. He had a very hard fight to get his consignment to Cleveland in any sort of condition at all, and the result of the sale shows that the public wanted the goods with the Palo Alto brand. About the time James Thompson was engaged to go to the farm and begin work on them, the rainy season began in earnest and during the months of February and March, there were but fourteen days during which they could be worked owing to the heavy downpours. Two weeks is not much time to devote to 48 two year olds, and when the weather cleared in April, distemper made its appearance and an even dozen had to be cut out of the training barns and scratched from the sale catalogue. More rain in April followed and Mr. Covey had three carloads of green babies, 36 in all to start East with. Seven of these were taken sick with distemper on the way over, were also scratched from the sale but the genial Superintendent of Palo Alto, nothing daunted, went into the ring with 29 head and beat last year's average by forty per cent. A pretty good record that.

I notice that Santa Rosa Stock Farm did not sell B. S. Dillon 2:25, but withdrew him from the sale. This did not surprise me, as the five year old gelding worked so fast before leaving Pleasanton that he looked good enough to keep, and Millard Sanders will probably be teaming him in the races over there this year. He is by the farm's stallion Sidney Dillon and out of the famous broodmare Biscari (dam of five in the list), by Director 2:17; second dam another famous mare Biscari (dam of 6 including Pancoast) by Harold; third dam Belle (the dam of Belmont 64) by Mambrino Chief. B. S. Dillon is bred all right, and as he worked a mile in 2:12 and a half in 1:05 last month, looks rather a good candidate for almost any class of pacers. The other four sold brought an average of nearly nine hundred dollars each, a good showing.

Mr. A. B. Spreckels, who attended the sale, was greatly pleased, I learn, with the result of his venture. The pride of the string, the five year old chestnut mare by Dexter Prince out of Point Lace, brought within a very few dollars of the price Mr. Spreckels had marked and they all sold at fair figures. When it is remembered that this was the first direct consignment from Aptos Farm, that they were given less than three months' work and had not been handled for speed, the average of $437 per head is a remarkable one. Sandy Smith was complimented on all sides on the condition in which he landed the 23 head at Cleveland.

Of the Griffith consignment Rect 2:16½ sold for $1700, not $1100 as reported last week by telegraph. He went to Mr. John H. Shults, of Portchester, New York, who was one of the heavy buyers at this sale and picked out good ones every time. Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick, of this city, was much taken with Rect's work at Pleasanton this spring, and although he has quite a stable of roadsters, sent a bid of $1000 to Cleveland to be placed on the son of Direct and Lily Stanley. I expect to hear of Mr. Shults cutting quite a swath when he starts Rect on the New York Speedway, as the gelding is one of the fastest brushers and best actors ever driven. Domino brought more than anyone here thought he would. He is a wonderfully fast pacer; but few horsemen here guessed his auction price at more than $2500 and when it was learned that $3400 was paid for him, they considered it a good sale.

A gentleman who has been engaged in breeding trotters for several years in California and has raced some in a small way purely for the love of seeing horses of his own breeding win races and get records, remarked to me last Tuesday that he owned a trotter that could beat 2:20 three times, but did not think he could win with him in the green classes. His reason was that he thought the green class trotters would put in their heats in about 2:15 this year. I begged to differ with the gentleman and will again go on record with the prediction that any horse that can trot three heats in succession in from 2:18 to 2:20 can win enough money in the green classes here this year to pay quite a profit on his year's work. I know of several trotters that will be able to trot a mile in 2:15 provided they get the pole and keep their feet during the entire mile, but that cannot trot two heats, let alone three or five, within three seconds of that time the same day. 2:15 speed, that is a quarter in 33½ seconds, will be very common on the training tracks by the first of August, but miles at that gait will be as few and far between on that date as angels' visits. How many new 2:15 trotters showed up on the California circuit last year? Solo 2:14½, Alta Vela 2:15, Thos. R. 2:15 and Ned Thorne 2:11½, are all that I can remember. Thomas

R. was the best winner of the bunch and he was beaten several heats in slower time than his record. Of the trotters that started in the slow classes last year McKenna won four races and $1587 out of nine starts, Nora McKinney 2:16½ won three races and $1405 out of seven starts, and What Is It 2:16½ won three races and $1055 out of four starts. Their records were their extreme efforts and not one of them would have won his entrance money in the same classes over East. If any owner or trainer has a horse that he is confident can trot three heats as good as 2:18 in any race where he is good, he can be pretty sure of winning his share of the purses.

I don't want to disparage our California trotters in the least, and I believe we have more good ones here in proportion to the number bred than any State in the Union. But for some reason or other, probably because fast records are getting more common, there is a general belief that a green trotter must be able to beat 2:15 three times to win any money on the California circuit. It is all nonsense. A man came down here from North Yakima, Washington, last month, advertised for a green trotter and stood ready to pay $2000 for one that could beat 2:20. He was buying on the "Missouri" plan and wanted the speed shown to him, not simply talked about. He was asked more than his limit for two or three good ones, and went home without a horse. I heard it on good authority that on two occasions he went to see a sure 2:20 trotter worked and that 2:22½ was the fastest mile he saw either of them accomplish. There are many trotters that show 2:15 speed at some part of the mile, but very few of them are equal to three heats in 2:18 or better, while five or six heats at that rate will put a big majority of them in the list of those that "also started." Thos. R. 2:15 that won $2740, more money than any other trotter won in California last year, was second in six races out of his eleven starts. He was beaten heats in 2:18½, 2:22½, 2:19½, 2:20 and 2:25, and reached the 2:15 mark but twice during the season. Every horseman in California looked upon Thomas R. as a 2:10 prospect, and had he kept right he would have reached that record this year, but the fact remains that he was the largest money winner of California campaigned trotters in 1901, and in no race did he trot three heats in 2:15. The trainer who gets his horse in shape to go three heats from 2:18 to 2:20 and drives him that fast in his races will not have to walk home at the end of this year's campaign.

During the latter part of March this year, Hans Frellson went to Pleasanton with a string of horses to work for speed and among them was a four year old filly belonging to F. Gomet, of this city. The B. & S. camera was pointed at her that week and her picture appeared on the front page of this paper in the issue of March 29th. Hans told me at that time that the filly had only been started up that month and he could not tell whether she would develop much speed. As she was a particularly large and handsome young mare, I asked her to stand for a photo and she behaved very nicely. A gentleman who was at the Pleasanton track two weeks ago last Saturday tells me that he saw Hans drive her three heats and that the time was 2:40, 2:25, 2:20. There were a dozen watches held on her the last heat and all agreed that she paced the four quarters just alike—35 seconds. Now this is something out of the ordinary. Five weeks is all the track work this mare has had and a third heat in 2:20 is certainly a very handsome showing and Hans is to be complimented. During this fast mile the mare was never urged by voice or whip, I am told, but took her own gait and kept it. There are half a dozen Seymour Wilkeses that would be heard from this year if they were trained and raced.

The Southern California circuit will be much more pretentious than most horsemen imagined when the announcement was first made in regard to it. I see by the advertisement of the Ventura association, which will open this circuit August 6th, that the free-for-all trotters are offered a purse of $1000 and the free-for-all pacers one of the same amount. This is good money in any country and I understand quite a number of the best Los Angeles strings will enter in these races and come north by the coast route and take in the entire Southern circuit.

The Lawson stable in training at Dover, N. H., comprises 18 head of horses, made up as follows: Boralma 2:07, Glory 2:11½, William H. Moody 2:12½, Dreamer (3) 2:14½, Mary P. Leyburn (3) 2:16½, Oxford Boy (2) 2:20, Priola (2) 2:20½, Baroness (3) 2:30, Boralma's Brother (three year old trial 2:12½) by Boreal, Miss Cuthbert (with a four year old trial of 2:17½) by Ashland Wilkes, Juniorio (trial 2:13) by Altivo, Belford (four year old, 2:17½) by Bow Bells, India Belle (two year old, trial 2:22½) by Jay Bird, Sagwa (trotting record 2:13½) by Saywa, Boralma's Sister (3) by Boreal, Miss Boralma (3) by Boreal, Monatine (4) by Mendocino.

THE BLUE RIBBON SALE.

California Bred Horses Bring Good Prices at the Cleveland Vendue.

Herewith is presented a complete report of the sale of California bred horses at the great Fasig-Tipton Blue Ribbon Sale which opened at Cleveland May 13th and continued during the week. The consignment of two-year-olds from the celebrated Palo Alto Stock Farm brought an average of 40 per cent more than was received last year, and Superintendent Frank W. Covey, under whose direct personal supervision the horses were prepared for the sale, received congratulations from all sides on the result. Considering the fact that one whole carload of colts had to be left at home on account of distemper, and that seven of the most promising two-year-olds were attacked with this disease on the way over and had to be withdrawn from the sale, the prices obtained must be very pleasing to all concerned. It was the "greenest" lot of two-year-olds that ever left Palo Alto, the unusually wet season during February and March preventing training work almost entirely, and while the youngsters showed size and good looks at Cleveland speed was not attempted. Could Superintendent Covey have had one more month to devote to these colts before they were shipped East the prices might have been considerably higher, but could hardly have been more satisfactory.

The consignment of twenty-three head from Mr. A. B. Spreckels' Aptos Farm were particularly lucky, as the entire lot were landed in Cleveland by the indefatigable and irrepressible "Sandy" Smith in good order. They averaged $437, which is a remarkably good showing for a band of green ones taken up in January and given three months' work. It was Aptos Farm's first sale and can be put down as a complete success.

Willard Stimson, C. L. Griffith, and Santa Rosa Stock Farm had smaller consignments and higher averages, but they all had speed to show, ready for the road and the races, and as a consequence there were higher prices paid for individual horses. The statement sent here by the Associated Press that Domino showed a mile at Cleveland before the sale in 2:05½ has not been confirmed, but he was driven a half by Bert Webster in 1:03½ on the day prior to the sale.

The list of California horses sold, with the prices obtained and the names of the buyers, is here given:

To the Cleveland sale Village Farm sent a daughter of the thoroughbred mare Keila by Hyder Ali, and a granddaughter of the thoroughbred mare Ina Blonde by Iroquois. Someway this great breeding establishment, that has produced so many great trotters and pacers, has not succeeded in getting any fast ones from the two thoroughbred mares in the stud there, and their descendants are being sent to the sale ring.

"Sandy" Made a Hit.

CLEVELAND, May 17th, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: The Blue Ribbon sale, the greatest one of its kind ever held here is over. Californians and their horses played a great part in making it a shining success. Domino by Reot, the young pacer from C. L. Griffith's Pleasanton farm created a sensation by going a half on Monday in 1:03½. On the strength of his performance, bidding for him was lively, and the price paid, $3600, by A. B. Cummings of Pennsylvania, was the top one of the sale. The Santa Rosa offerings went well and the demand for the two year olds from Palo Alto caused them to bring prices that were much more satisfactory than those obtained in 1901 for Rowellan and the others of the lot.

But, coming down to individuals who came over the mountains with the horses, it was Sandy Smith who made the hit of the week. Representing Aptos Farm, he arrived here the Sunday before sale week with 23 head of young green horses, every one of them in pink of condition and with not even a hair turned in transit. This same Sandy has been a familiar figure around Glenville for the last twenty-five years and when the news of his arrival was heralded throughout the haunts of the horsemen, everyone flocked to see him and the stuff he had. They found Sandy even more affable than ever, but entirely wrapt up in care of his charges. For a week he showed off his colts to good advantage and when sale day rolled round the name "Aptos" was heard as much as "Palo Alto." It was in the speed showing in the sale ring that Smith had all others beaten and beaten easily. Every one of his colts, only a few months before running wild on the range, handled himself like a city bred horse and there was no display of wildness. They handled themselves like the trotters that their breeding indicates that they must be. Smith knew just how to show them off and his admirable handling added many a dollar to their purchase price.

Smith will be retained by Mr. Spreckels and is going back to California within the next week or ten days. Twelve horses go back with him. Venus II 2:11½ and Czarina 2:13½, will be picked up at Toledo where they are at Ketcham farm having been bred to Cresceus 2:02½. Then Mr. Spreckels bought two saddle horses from a Kentucky sale consignment besides picking up a carriage team in New York. The others six are from the Palo Alto lot. They were seized with distemper while en route here and were not in condition to be offered. They will be sent to the Old Glory sale in New York next November. R. W. R.

Silver Cup Hackney Sale Successful.

The Silver Cup Hackney sale held every year by Mr. Grand at the American Horse Exchange began last Tuesday. The cup was won by the Hon. Henry Fairfax of Aldie, Loudoun county, Va., the conditions being that the cup should go to the consignor of the best six horses. His winning six were by Danesfort, out of hackney and trotting bred mares. His average was $862. Dr. F. C. Grenside paid the highest price for a beautiful bay mare by Danesfort, and other purchasers were Messrs. H. R. Miller, Paul D. Cravath, J. W. Clarke and F. C. Church. F. J. Kimball's six averaged $345, Susannah and Ladysmith, a fine pair of bays by Phaeton, fetching $1000; F. G. Bourne's entries, five in number, realized $337 each; Mr. Cameron's six brought $226 each. The average of Mr. Ogden's consignment was $396, A. A. Housman getting the pick of the lot in Carlotta and Jackdaw, a pair of prize winners, for $1400. The Ross consignment averaged $392, and Colonel Astor's lot averaged $284.

Mr. Grand deserves a deal of credit for doing so much to stimulate interest in the hackney horse. If the breeders would do as much on their own account results might be different. Some of the hackney breeders have felt that the enormously successful sales of trotting bred carriage horses at the Horse Exchange were gotten up for the purpose of injuring the hackney, which is of course an unreasonable impression. The market reflects more than anything else the survival of the fittest. The question as to whether the American trotting bred carriage horse is any better than the hackney is not, of course, settled by any such judiciary, but the native has been pushed to the front by those interested.

We congratulate the hackney breeders who responded to Mr. Grand's overtures and trust that in future they will be even more enterprising and courageous. The cup presented by Mr. Grand cost $500.—Rider and Driver, May 17th.

Answers to Correspondents.

HANFORD (Cal.), May 20, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—I would like to submit to you a question which is of importance to horsemen and myself in particular.

Three horses named "A," "B" and "C" are started in a trotting race. Three best in five. There is first and second money. For first place A wins the first, second and third heats (A, 1-1-1). For the second place B takes the first and second heats (B, 2-2-3) and C takes the third heat (C, 3-3-2). Which heat decides the race? What horse wins second money, B or C?

ROWEN IRWIN.

In the above case the third heat decided the race, as A had a majority of the heats required by the conditions to his credit when it was finished. Section 4 of Rule 36, National Trotting Association, is as follows: "In deciding the rank of horses other than the winner, as to second, third and fourth places, etc., to be assigned among such as remain in the race entitled to be placed at the conclusion of the last heat thereof, the several positions which have been assigned to each horse so contending shall be considered as to every heat in the race—that is, horses having won two heats, better than those winning one. * * * A horse that has been placed "second" one heat better than a horse that has been placed "third" any number of heats."

It will be seen by the above that according to the positions given in your letter that B was entitled to second money.—ED. B. & S.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—In a race given by the Kings County Agricultural Association on May 17, 1902, the following horses started and finished as follows:

Doctor W.	1	1	1
Pearl C.	2	2	3
Si S.	3	3	2
Glenway.	4	4	4

The judges awarded Si S. second, Pearl C. third. Pearl C.'s owner went to the judges' stand and offered a protest before they had announced the position and awarded the premiums. The judges and secretary would not recognize his protest and ordered him out of the stand. Then a few minutes later said to him, you will get second place. When he went to the secretary's office at seven o'clock P. M., the secretary had paid second money to the owner of Si S. Will you please state through the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN which horse was entitled to second money and how to proceed to get it.

R. F. CHALMERS,
627 K st., Fresno, Cal.

As will be seen by the rule quoted in the answer above, Pearl C. is entitled to second money. As to the procedure we suggest that you make a written demand on the Kings County Agricultural Association for second money. If it is refused file a complaint before the Pacific Board of Appeals of the National Trotting Association, of which the Kings County Association is a member. File your complaint with F. W. Kelley, Secretary, 36 Geary street, San Francisco—ED. B. & S.

The Directors of Agricultural District, No. 5, held their annual meeting this week. George Y. Bollinger was elected President of the society and H. H. Main Secretary.

The Directors determined to hold an agricultural fair July 3d, 4th and 5th. There are to be full exhibits of live stock, poultry and everything from the orchard and ranch, as well as exhibits from the factory, such as wagons, plows, pumps, agricultural machinery, etc. There is also to be a display of art and art work, these displays to be given in the pavilion.

It is proposed to make the live stock display as perfect as the county and section can show. Daily during the fair there is to be some special attractions in connection with the live stock, especially of fine breeding horses.

The Secretary was directed to proceed to advertise for bids for privileges of various kinds and to make all necessary arrangements to secure the exhibits.

The speed program for the three days as so far agreed upon is:

July 3—2:40 trot, 2:25 pace and free-for-all trot.

July 4—2:18 trot, 2:18 pace and free-for-all pace.

July 5—2:25 trot, 2:14 pace and 2:14 trot.

Purses $500. Entries will close June 25th.

In addition to these races some specials will be arranged, probably something for each day.

Success of County Fairs.

[Columbus in Western Horseman]

Considerable curiosity is expressed at times by horsemen regarding the popularity and success of county fairs. Many are unable to account for this fact, and yet, to the writer, there appear certain reasons that seem extremely plausible. County fairs are growing more popular each season, and we find that a large majority of these institutions are money-making ventures. Now, it happens that quite a large per cent of the men who love the light harness horse for what he can accomplish are not able to fit, furnish and equip a trotter or pacer for a campaign through the Grand Circuit. These men take a delight in the horse for his own sake; they patronize the very best stallions within reach, grow and educate the foal, which is really the "whole thing" with them, and in due time their thoughts naturally turn to the race track, where they hope to see realized the dreams of their past years. To venture far away from home is a matter entirely out of the question; they can train the colt or horse until such time as he needs polishing up for a race, when he is placed in the local training stable of some quite capable man at the county-seat town. The county fair affords all such owners an opportunity of racing their colts and aged horses, without going to any great expense. This fact is taken advantage of each succeeding year through the United States, by thousands of enthusiastic horsemen. Perhaps, in a majority of cases, the animals thus bred and educated do not actually appear in races, but their owners have grown enthusiastic and become permanent patrons of the county fairs. If their own horse has fallen by the way, they must needs attend the county fair to see how fast the other horses are compelled to trot or pace in order to win the very race that they had set their hearts upon winning. The man that is enthusiastic enough to try winning a race at the county fair this year, even though he lose, or fail to get his horse ready to start, is certain to make an attempt next season, or, if not then, at some future time. Once a horseman, always a horseman; once a colt breeder, always a colt breeder; once a patron of the speed ring, always a "hankering" after the fifty or hundred-dollar purse at the county fair. The county fair is the democratic trysting place of horsemen, there all men are equal, providing they possess a love in common for the horse. J. P. Morgan may buy up all the railroads and steamship lines in the world; the proxy hunters may destroy the Grand Circuit; the outlaws of the turf may make life miserable on the minor circuits, but nothing can harm the county fair. From it have graduated such men as Ed. Geers, Myron McHenry, Scott McCoy, Joe Rea and scores of first-class drivers. The ranks of Grand Circuit, matinee and speedway horses are yearly replenished with promising material that has been developed at county fairs. All honor, then, to the county fair. May its numbers increase and its profits never grow less.

Butchers' Day Races.

The results of the harness races at Oakland track on Wednesday last were as follows:

Special butchers' cart race—F. Giuliam's Jack, first; B. L. Fisher's Lord Spankie, second; W. H. Noy's Dolly F., third. Time, 2:40, 2:45.

Retail butchers' trotting and pacing race—S. C. Hammond's Imp, first; Frank Merrill's Clara C., second; R. Consani's Bondy C., third. Time, 2:30½, 2:33.

Butchers' trotting and pacing race—M. Schweitzer's Anigito, first; S. Hammond's Sable Lagrand, second; Monroe Schweitzer's Hermia, third. Time, 2:26, 2:26.

Free-for-all trotting and pacing—H. H. Dunlap's King Cadenza, first; Frank Merrill's Mission Girl, second; S. P. Jefferson's Aurilla J., third. Time, 2:24½, 2:25.

Free-for-all trotting and pacing, two miles—H. H. Dunlap's King Cadenza, first; S. C. Hammond's Imp, second; Melville Schweitzer's Anigito, third. Time, 5:00.

Coming Fair at Stockton.

Within a week the Stockton race track will be ready for horsemen to train their gallopers and harness animals on. The Driving Club has men at work now putting it in fine shape for the race meet, which will eventuate here immediately after the State Fair. The races this year will be far ahead of any held here before. There will be more and better horses and larger purses. The past reputation of the Driving Club is helping it wonderfully this year in securing subscriptions from citizens, and there have been many offers already to make pavilion exhibits. A number of new features will be promulgated both at the track and in the pavilion. There is talk of eliminating bookmaking and having only auction pools and Paris mutuels.—Stockton Mail.

Notes and News.

No specials or divides will be the rule this year.

Entries to the Stanford Stake will close June 1st.

Whose horse will win the California $2000 stake at Fresno?

Vallejo offers a splendid program for the opening of the circuit.

Several handsome driving horses are for sale. See advertisement.

Tags 2:11½ by Diablo is in the stable of John Dowd at the Hamline, Minn., track.

James Berryman is getting several prospects ready at the Alameda track for the circuit.

Monte Carlo 2:14½ by Mendocino is in William Cecil's care at Pleasanton and is doing well.

W. G. Durfee, of Los Angeles, has about concluded to race his horses in California this year.

Napa's track was never in better shape than at present and the outlook for a high class meeting in August is excellent.

Eleata 2:08½, may represent the Gentleman's Driving Club of Boston in the contest for the Boston cup at Cleveland.

Ed Lafferty will probably remove his string of trotters and pacers from Pleasanton to Napa about the first of the month.

Entries close June 1st for the Stanford Stake of 1904. Read the conditions in the advertisement and make your entry in time.

It is now reported that A. H. Miller increased his recent offer of $15,000 for the sensational filly Zephyr to $17,500, without avail.

The Lexington rail birds aver that Charley Herr 2:07 is in better condition this spring than he has ever been at this season of the year.

Fred Ward of Los Angeles has gone to Colorado with McKenna 2:17½ and The Tout. He will race there and on the North Pacific circuit.

Five thousand dollars was the price paid by J. C. McKinney, owner of the great filly Zephyr, to A. H. Miller, for her dam Gazelle 2:11½.

G. M. Stevens, of Lancaster, N. H., has bought from Kentucky parties the stallion Clay 2:25, by Electioneer. Clay is the sire of 23 standard performers.

You can see speed nearly every forenoon now at Alameda track. Saturday is the favorite day for working out with the majority of the trainers.

M. E. McHenry says he has a pacer that he is ready to match against Anaconda 2:01½, for $10,000 a side. Is it Dan Patch 2:04½? Some people think so.

The San Jose speed program has nine purses of $500 for harness horses. Entries close June 15th and the meeting opens July 3d to continue three days.

J. E. Conley of Saginaw, Mich., has paid $2000 for the four year old colt, Sid Thorne by Sidney. He was raced last season and showed ability as a trotter.

The $10,000 stake for 2:14 trotters at Providence received seventy-six entries, while forty-nine side-wheelers are named in the $10,000 Park Brew stake.

Admiral Dewey 2:14½, the son of Bingen 2:06½ and Nancy Hanks 2:04, is showing great things in his work, and it is claimed that he will beat 2:10 away off this season.

Do you want a trotter for the circuit? An advertiser has one that he claims can show three heats in 2:17 or better and will take $1250 for. This is a bargain.

Monroe Salisbury said before he left Pleasanton that Ed Lafferty's four year old Silver Bow colt out of Grace by Buccaneer was one of the best prospects he ever saw.

Among the trainers who are using the Alameda track to train on are Messrs. Groom, Berryman, Breed, Nelson, Williams, Brown, Morrison, Lapham and several others.

A press dispatch from Memphis states that Geers drove The Abbot a mile in 2:10½ on Wednesday, and that Fred Gerken sent The Monk a mile in 2:15, last quarter in 30 seconds.

Mr. J. Breed of Alameda has a pacing mare that is showing mighty well for a green one. Mr. Breed is training her himself and turned the track with her in 2:20 one day last week.

Tom Marsh has made a radical change in the shoeing of Borlma. He has had the toes of his front shoes squared, instead of rounded, and predicts that it will be a great improvement.

Fifty thousand dollars is the aggregate amount of money offered by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association for its early closing or fixed events this year. Entries close Monday, June 2d.

Don't miss entering your colts in the Stanford stake this year. It is for foals of last year and is to be trotted at the State Fair in 1904. This is about the only stake left open for last year's foals.

J. J. Seannell, owner of The Abbot 2:03½ and Shadow Chimes 2:06½, has bought a stock farm at Matteawan on the Hudson. The farm is in Dutchess county, and contains about two hundred acres of land.

The Silver Bow horse Sir Archer, that C. Morrison of Oakland is getting ready to trot this year, is showing up well although he has been sent no fast miles yet. He should get a place in the 2:20 list by fall.

Doc Wilkes 2:15½ will be on the circuit this year. H. D. Brown has this fast pacer going like a race horse and there is a good chance of getting money with him in his class and probably reducing his record.

The trainer who goes through the circuit this year looking for "specials" will get most gloriously left. There is a determination on all sides to have none of these "pestiferous" races on the program this year.

$25 must be paid June 1st on each two year old trotter or pacer expected to start in the two year old division of the Kentucky Futurity this year. There is $5000 allotted to the trotters and $1000 to the pacers.

It is reported that the State Agricultural Society will be asked to offer a $2000 stake for trotters and one for pacers this year. If the request is complied with harness racing will have a boom in California this year.

Colonel F. N. Lawrence, New York City, has bought of Colonel H. D. Mix the well known Speedway trotting mare Ambo 2:18½ by Warren 2:20½ and will breed her to Oakland Baron 2:09½. Colonel Lawrence raised Ambo.

Sally Brass, dam of Dick Hubbard 2:09½, by George Wilkes, now 26 years old, recently foaled a fine filly by Blake 2:13½ son of Nutwood. Sally Brass and her foal are owned by Miles A. Leech, Cornland, Ill., who also owns Blake.

It is not a matter of general knowledge that Millionaire J. B. Haggins has on his Elmendorf farm, near Lexington, Ky., a band of upward of 50 richly-bred trotting mares, which he is mating to Dan Cupid 2:09½ and James Madison 2:17½.

M. D. Madigan, Chicago, has matched his pacer, Ione 2:08½ against Persenette 2:09½, owned by W. R. Code, Princeton, Ill. The Chicago man gave odds of $1500 to $1000 and the match will be decided at the summer meeting at Princeton.

A horse that has attracted a great deal of interest at the track is the unbeaten California pacer Sir Albert S. 2:08½ in Millard F. Sanders' stable. He is a good looking, well-made bay gelding and fills the eyes of the local horsemen.—Cleveland American Sportsman.

This is a filly year for the McKinneys. Out of 55 foals by that stallion dropped this year, 52 are fillies. This is a remarkable fact and is the largest proportion of fillies we ever heard reported from one year's service. There will be at least 30 more foals by him dropped by July 1st.

At Cleveland M. A. Bradley's black mare Eddrea 2:29½, has a foal by John A. McKerron. This youngster should certainly develop into a great wagon performer as its sire has a matinee wagon record of 2:06½, its dam a matinee wagon record of 2:17½, and its granddam, Mattie Bassett, one of 2:22½.

In the Empire $5000 purse for 2:20 trotters at the Empire City Park, New York meeting, next September, F. S. Fisher of White Plains, N. Y., has entered no less than nine horses. This is undoubtedly the record for the number of entries by one owner in a trotting purse event of like nature.

Hurrah for Stockton. The Driving Club of that city is now engaged in making out its program of races for the fair this year. The club has decided, for one thing, to offer a purse of $1500, to be known as the Stockton Chamber of Commerce Stake, for a pacing race. It will probably be for the 2:20 class.

The chestnut gelding Lasso, by Heir-at-Law, 2:05½, dam thoroughbred, will act as pacemaker for Borlma this season. Lasso was used to prompt The Abbot and pulled Ed Geers a quarter to sulky in 22½ seconds. He was worked at the trot for a time, and showed a mile in 2:22 at that gait before his value as a pacemaker was discovered.

Sandy Smith is expected to arrive home this week with a carload of horses. He is bringing back Venus II. and Czarina that were bred to Cresceus 2:02½, two fine Kentucky saddle horses, a carriage team purchased by Mr. A. B. Spreckels, besides a half dozen of the Palo Alto two year olds that were too sick with distemper to be sold at Cleveland.

In view of the fact that a majority of the clubs in membership with the League of Amateur Driving Clubs has expressed a preference for the first week in September, as the date of the competition for the Amateur Challenge Trophy, the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston has withdrawn its request for the last week in September as the date of the competition, and cast its vote in favor of the first week in September.

Mr. Geo. Kingsbury, manager of the Lick House in this city, received a letter from Wm. Hogoboom this week, which states that the writer is doing well at Walla Walla with his horses. Lynmont is meeting with great favor among the breeders of Washington and has 84 mares booked for this season, nearly all of which have been bred. Mr. Hogoboom's many friends in California will be pleased to hear of his success up north.

Not all the horses are gone from the Pleasanton track by any means, although the best of the lot have been sent East. There are still left Ed Lafferty, with 8 to 10 head; S. K. Trefry, 1; G. A. Kelly, 2; Sam Gamble, 2; Hans Frelson, 12; J. M. Alvino, 2; G. A. Davis, 5; Wm. Cecil, 7; James Sutherland, 15, and Joe Goss, 1. Among these will still be found some pretty good ones, possibly as good as some which have been sent East.

Fresno road drivers will form a driving club. Among those who have already put in their names as members are T. C. White, T. J. Hay, F. G. Berry, A. J. Hudson, C. A. Schweizer, S. N. Griffith, Louis Heilbron, J. R. McKay, Hi Rapelje, M. L. Woy, Lee Blasingame, Alfred Blasingame, John Hall, H. E. Burleigh, W. C. Baylis, A. Benham, George Taft, Jake Shaffer, William Johnson, James Grove, C. A. Teller and John White. Many others will join as soon as the club is started.

The road users of New York city have done the sensible thing in forming an association composed of road drivers, truckmen, automobilists and cyclists to protect their mutual interest. The day has gone by when these road users should have any feeling except that of mutual regard for each other's interest. By uniting for the purpose of securing needed reforms in regard to the etiquette of the road, these gentlemen have set a good example for the whole country.—The Horseman

The selection of Col. John E. Thayer as successor to J. M. Forbes on the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, will meet the approval of everyone, and will be especially pleasing to the campaigning horsemen and drivers. Col. Thayer is president of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, president of the Boston Horse Show Association and of the Worcester East Agricultural Society. No one has done more to elevate and popularize light harness sport than he.

Mr. S. U. Lockett, of Corona, writes under date of May 15th, that his mare Last Chance by Mambrino Patchen, dam by Dudley's Richmond, son of Mambrino Pilot by Mambrino Chief, foaled a nice colt by McKinney 2:11½ on the 13th inst. The colt is a bay with small star on forehead and right front foot white. Mr. Lockett refused an offer of $500 for the youngster the morning he wrote the letter. Last Chance is one of the few daughters of Mambrino Patchen remaining, and Mr. Lockett prizes the colt very highly. Look out for the youngster in the Stallion Stake which is trotted in 1905 at Sacramento.

P. W. Bellingall, of Oakland, has great faith in the blood of Secretary and always has a few of that horse's get in his barn. He is a great road driver and can teach a horse how to go about as well as the professional trainers. He is now driving a very handsome bay mare by Secretary, dam, a mare by the thoroughbred horse Gladiator. She is a trotter and pretty green, but is learning and shows a burst of speed now and then that is of the 2:15 order. She is gaited something like the Knight gelding out of a mare by Secretary that Mr. B. sold recently to Judge Murphy for $1500.

The horse market is not very good in Southern California, judging from a sale held at Edgewood Park Stock Farm at Savannah, Los Angeles county, on Monday last. Horses went for almost nothing. Freckels 12,600, with a record of 2:30, sold for $100; Zoe M., a bay mare by Sultan, with a suckling by Freckels at foot, brought $105, and a ten year old gelding out of this mare brought the same amount. Mr. C. A. Harrison, proprietor of the Hotel Rosslyn at Los Angeles, bought a yearling filly by Jud Wilkes out of Betsey Herr by Mambrino Patchen, for $18 and the old mare sold for $25. Mr. Harrison says the filly is good looking enough to enter in stakes and that she is a trotter. Lee Rose bought the mare. Mr. Harrison thinks he will claim the name of San Gabriel for this filly. P. W. Hodges is training Mr. Harrison's Altamont colt Printers Ink and thinks he is as good a trotting prospect as he ever saw.

A serious and fatal accident to several good horses happened at the G. Pestdorff place at Russell's station, Alameda county, last Sunday evening. There were fifty or sixty horses and mules on pasture there and breaking through the railroad's fence got on the track in the way of the midnight freight. Eight horses and two mules were killed, among them the broodmare Nancy by Engineer, owned by Mr. A. O. Gott of Alameda. Nancy was the dam of Cydia by Diablo 2:09½, Paramount by Altamont 2:26, Mephisto by Diablo 2:16½. She was about due to foal to Nutwood Wilkes again. Mephisto was struck by the train also and very badly bruised, but will probably come out all right except a few scars. Mr. John Lutgen of Alameda lost a very fine four year old filly by Altamont out of Oakville Maid. She had all four legs broken and had to be shot by the railroad employes. It was over a half mile between the points where the first and the last horses were killed.

Second hand bike sulkies and carts for sale. Bike wheels made to order and repaired. McMurray bike carts and sulkies kept in stock. Pneumatic rigs called for and repaired. Kenney Bicycle Company, 531 Valencia street, San Francisco.

Driving Club Races at Sacramento.

At Sacramento last Saturday members of the Driving Club added to the attractiveness of the day's racing at Agricultural Park by giving five races. Geo. W. Jackson was presiding judge and was assisted in the stand by Harry Bell and Hon. Frank D. Ryan. Hi Hogaboom wielded the starter's flag and did good work.

The opening race, a special trot, mile, brought out four starters: Duke of Cameo, Charles Silvey; Queen of Bavaria, owned by George H. Clark and driven by Vet Tryon; John I. F. M. Ennis; and Harry N., C. A. Nelson.

Duke of Cameo got the pole in the drawing, the best of the start by half a length, and led all the way, jogging in an easy winner by two lengths from Queen of Bavaria, with Harry N. third. Time, 2:28.

The second event, special trot, mile, brought out Zulene, Albert Elkus; Rosa Gold, I. H. McMullen; Arrow, W. Lamphrey; and Boxer, Dr. Weldon. Rosa Gold led to the three-quarter pole, where she had thirty lengths to the good. Boxer broke after passing the wire, made a brave drive of it, and coming down the stretch was overhauling the mare hand over hand when he left his feet, and the race was won by Rosa Gold, Boxer second and Arrow third. Time, 2:39.

For the third, special trot, mile dash, the entries were Monroe B., F. J. Ruhstaller; Fred Ames, George H. Clark; Baby Button, F. Wright; Silver Bee, W. Harris and Elevator, Dr. W. A. Root.

In scoring Mayor Clark's sulky was upset, his horse rearing, and he was somewhat bruised.

They got off with a very even start, and Silver Bee fell behind and the others went together up the back stretch, Monroe B. in the lead. At the five-eighths Silver Bee began to close up, and passed Baby Button. On the turn he challenged the other two, but Fred Ames stumbled and fell, giving Mayor Clark another hard fall. Silver Bee was directly behind him, and Harris had to pull him up short, losing the race by the mishap, probably. Monroe B. was never headed and came in first by five lengths, Silver Bee second, four lengths ahead of Baby Button. Fred Ames ran in and was caught at the saddling paddock. Mayor Clark was quite badly shaken up, but not seriously hurt. Time, 2:25.

The fourth race, a special trot, mile dash, was contested by Canny Scot, Morrison; George Direct, William Sayre; Toots W., F. E. Wright, and Pearl Sinclair, C. W. Paine.

Toots was a bad actor and delayed the start, as he would not trot, and when they finally were started he was several lengths behind. George Direct took the lead immediately by ten lengths, and held it all the way round, never being headed. Toots overhauled Pearl Sinclair at the quarter, and at the half challenged Canny Scot and passed him after a short brush. Coming down the turn she left her feet again and fell behind. George Direct won by ten lengths, Canny Scot as much in front of Pearl Sinclair and Toots last. Time, 2:49.

The fifth race was a special trot, mile dash, with Dave Ryan, Dr. A. M. McCullom; Peo, C. W. Paine; Polka Dot, Vet Tryon, and Candy Joe, William Trust, as starters.

They got off well together, Peo a little ahead, but Dave Ryan went quickly to the front and increased his lead to the half, where the rest came up and Peo hung at his wheel, with Polka Dot close up. He came into the stretch first and at the seven-eighths they were all on even terms. Dave Ryan forged ahead and came in a winner, Polka Dot close behind and Peo, which broke near the finish, third, Candy Joe fourth. Time, 2:30.

A Terrific Equine Duel.

Details of the fight last fall between the two thoroughbred stallions Sligo and old Logan lose nothing in the telling. The grooms had been jollifying the previous night, and slept late. Both horses were stabled in the same barn, and Sligo, apparently angered at the delay in being given his morning meal, kicked out the lower door of his stall. The upper part of the door and a stout cross-bar were left in place, but, crouching down, Sligo crawled under and went out in free space. He went direct to Logan's stall. The doors were open, but a stout cross-bar was in place, and this Sligo broke in some way or another and made a rush at Logan. The latter had his face to the door, and as Sligo rushed he met him with a counter-plunge and the two horses came together with a crash. Sligo was forced into a corner of the barn and there gathered himself together. Both were squealing and stamping in their rage, and the grooms, hearing the uproar, came rushing to the scene of battle. They tried to get close, but the two stallions, while eyeing each other looking for an opportunity to renew the battle, lashed out with their heels when a groom approached. After watching each other for perhaps a half minute there came another rush. Logan was the quicker, and he struck Sligo at the shoulder. Sligo was just rising for a jump and the force of the collision threw him in a heap on the floor. As he went down Logan jumped on him, crushing him in the corner and breaking one of the fallen horse's legs. The mix-up gave the grooms a chance, and they rushed in and grabbed the infuriated Logan and pulled him back. He struggled, kicked, bit and fought to get free to get at his fallen enemy, and the grooms exerted all their strength in the effort to force him back in his stall. Sligo, suffering intense pain, managed in some way to rise, and the sight of it was too much for Logan. With a final and desperate wrench, he tore free from the grooms and plunged with full force against Sligo. Sligo went down again, and again Logan jumped on and kicked him. Again the grooms tore him away, and this time succeeded in forcing Logan into his stall and barring the door. Sligo's back had been broken in the final onslaught, but despite all this he managed to drag himself back to his stall, where he died a few hours later.

Hints from Prof. Roberts.

Writing of the points of a good horse, Prof. I. P. Roberts, dean of the Agricultural Department of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., than whom there is no man better posted upon topics of practical and scientific agriculture and stock breeding, says: Dark-colored hoofs are likely to be of better texture than light-colored ones. The shape of the foot is variable. The "cold-blooded" draft horse has a broader, flatter foot than the light driver or speed horse. The foot is often the point most likely to be deficient in draft horses, the heel being too open and the foot too flat. Occasionally "the hollow of the foot makes a hole in the ground." On the other hand, the driving horse sometimes has a foot too hollow and narrow at the heel, in which case the foot is likely to become contracted, since the frog does not come in contact with the moist soil, losing its elasticity, becomes hard, contracts, draws the quarters in until the hoof becomes too small for the internal structure. The shoe does not pinch, but the hoof does. There is a happy medium between these two extremes. A horse's limbs should be placed well under its body, for the same reason that the wheels of a street car are placed well under its body, to secure a swaying, easy motion instead of a pounding, inelastic one. Horses are of many colors, but dark browns and bright bays with dark points are preferred, since dark colors indicate fine, close-grained texture. But some one may have depreciated the value of the horse in "breaking" him, in doing which his mouth has become hard and unresponsive, courage turned into revenge and whip-obedience substituted for obedience to the driver's slightest wish, sent through the reins by the kind hand. So the horse should be driven before one can determine whether all of the points of a good horse are present.

The Greatest Race of the Year.

The New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has scored another of its usual successes in opening a $10,000 purse for trotters of the 2:07 class, to be contested for at the annual breeders meeting in September at the Readville track. Although the announcement of the opening of this class was made but two weeks ago, the association has already secured for this event nine of the best trotters in training in the country. The list to date includes Lord Derby 2:06½, Chain Shot 2:06½, Borlma 2:07, Charley Herr 2:07, Dolly Dillon 2:07, Peter the Great 2:07½, Onward Silver 2:08, The Monk 2:08½ and Eleata 2:08½. All of these horses, with the exception of Peter the Great, performed well, and the most of them brilliantly, last year. Peter the Great was given a complete rest last season, and his owner, Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes, is confident that the great stallion will be able to stand the strain of a season's campaigning. If such should prove to be the case, this horse will have to be counted a very dangerous factor, as he has speed of the two-minute order up to half a mile. The only horse of which there is any doubt of being able to be ready is Charley Herr, that was a failure as a sensational performer after his race at Brighton Beach early in August last year.

The average speed of the nine horses entered for this rich purse is 2:07 36-100. If but five or six of these trotters should come together for the word, it will in sure one of the greatest races of the year, and will provide for the New England breeders an attraction equal in importance to their famous Massachusetts stake at the Grand Circuit meetings or the big stallion races, which have been a feature of their fall meetings in the past.—Chicago Horseman.

The Oldest Horse in America.

The oldest horse in America is owned by Major Robert Mass, of Louisville, Ky., who has papers proving its age to be over 47 years. He is named Ivanhoe, and is a large bay, with a blaze face, and up to a year or so ago a very docile disposition; of late, however, he has grown irritable, and almost vicious toward strangers; to his master and the children he is the same as ever. He bears on his right flank the scar of a gunshot wound received at the battle of Buena Vista, in the Mexican campaign of 1853, where he was ridden by the grandfather of the Major. He was also used as a charger in the Civil War, and three separate times when his rider was unhorsed found his way home to his pasture. As he grew older he would not allow any other horse to be placed in the pasture, and fought them with mouth and hoofs. For twenty years he had no harness on his back, but let the children climb all over him. His teeth were gone, and at last accounts he was fed principally on boiled corn and mush. His last appearance in public was at the fair at Lexington, 10 years ago, and he was brought home completely denuded of his tail and mane, these having been plucked out by people crowding around him to secure a relic of the oldest horse known.—Albany Argus.

Derbies I Have Seen.

These, unfortunately, number no fewer than 33; the earliest of them dating as far back as 1863, so it is quite certain that I must waste no space over preliminaries, if I am to deal with a few of the most interesting of them. My first introduction to Epsom Downs took place under very favorable conditions, for I never remember a wetter day than that which was associated with Lord Clifden's year. A good many of us still persist in calling it "Lord Clifden's Year," and shall go down to our graves in the firm belief that Lord St. Vincent's magnificent son of Newminster and The Slave just won, but Judge Clark was of a different opinion, and Macaroni got the stakes. There were 31 runners, and the delay at the post was the longest that I can call to mind in all my experience. This was due to Count Batthyany's Tambour Major, or, rather, to Wells, who rode him. That jockey was not blessed with the sweetest of tempers, and he used his whip with such severity as he was passing through the saddling paddock on his way to the starting post, that Tambour Major turned hopelessly sulky, and was finally left behind. In the course of the race King of the Vale came down and Saccharometer fell over him, but neither horses nor jockeys were hurt. The former was an exceptionally big colt, belonging to Baron Rothschild, and I remember a playful little passage of arms that took place in the paddock between him and Lord Palmerston, who was represented by Baldwin, a very small and weedy son of Rataplan. "What's the use of running a little rat like that?" said the Baron. "He'll beat that overgrown camel of yours," was the rejoinder of the Premier, and he did.

I shall always regret that I was not present in the following year, when Blair Athol defeated what was probably the very best field that ever went to the post for the Derby; but I have a vivid remembrance of the great ragged-hipped and hollow-backed Gladiateur towering above the others in the paddock in 1865. Until then I had pinned my faith to Breadalbane, an own brother to Blair Athol, but it was impossible to look at the great horse of France and to imagine that anything in the field had the remotest chance against him. His trial for the Derby was about the most remarkable ever known, as he gave eight pounds to the four year old Filie de l'Air, who had won the Oaks twelve months previously, and simply played with her. Yet one of the best things ever known in racing was within an ace of being upset, for Harry Grimshaw, who rode Gladiateur, was terribly short-sighted, and Jem Goater, who was steering Brahma for Lord Westmoreland, always maintained that, had he not shouted to him to go along, he would never have seen Christmas Carol, and would have allowed himself to be beaten. Lord Lyon, the winner in 1866, was only a moderate colt, and quite unworthy of his place amongst the heroes of the "triple crown"; and the story of Hermit's sensational victory is too well known to bear re-telling. I may state, however, that the much talked of blood-vessel which he broke about ten days prior to the race was only a small one in one of his nostrils, and that he was able to get through a very fair amount of work between the date of the accident and the day of the race. The Derby of 1868 is, perhaps, better remembered for the defeat of Lady Elizabeth—possibly the most brilliant and highly-tried two year old that was ever saddled—than for the victory of Blue Gown; and the following year saw another difference of opinion between the judge and a good many of the spectators, the latter thinking that Pero Gomez should have had the stakes that were awarded to Pretender. Both were moderate, and Sir Joseph Hawley's colt took full revenge in the St. Leger, as Pretender had become a very bad roarer before he was sent to Doncaster.

The defeat of the flying Macgregor in 1870 has never yet been explained, and will probably always remain buried in mystery. It is quite certain that he was not "got at," as many people have supposed, and the idea that he left the race at Bath is another popular error, for his gallop there did him no harm, and he never went better in his life than he did at exercise at Epsom on the Monday following. Nor did he break down during the race itself, and to this day his trainer can give no reason why Kingcraft, who was certainly 12lb. his inferior, should figure in the list of winners of the "blue ribbon." "Follow the Baron" might well be the popular cry after the season of 1871, when the Derby triumph of Favonius was supplemented by Han-nah's One Thousand, Oaks and Leger, and Corisande's Cesarewitch, to say nothing of various other "unconsidered trifles." A very great horse was Cremorne, the hero of the following year, and it would have been cruel luck indeed for Mr. Savile if carelessness on the part of his jockey had led to his defeat by Pell Mell, yet this as nearly as possible happened, and the verdict, which might have been one of half a dozen lengths, was reduced to a head. Doncaster, who won in 1873, never really came to his best until he was five years old, and he will always be remembered as being head of that wonderful line which was carried on by Bend Or, Ormonde, Orme and Flying Fox, in unbroken succession from father to son. Unplaced to Doncaster was Hochstapler, a bay colt by Savernake out of La Traviata, who was bred in Germany and was the property of Count Renard, owner of Adonis, the winner of the Cambridgeshire of 1870. The colt had gained an immense reputation by running right away from speedy animals like Hurlingham and The Colonel over the Rowley Mile during the Craven Meeting, and he started at 9 to 2 for the Derby—Doncaster's price was 45 to 1—in which he cut a very ignominious figure; nor do I think that he ever won another race.

George Frederick, the winner in 1874, was an infinitely better horse than is generally supposed, but he was never really wound up from beginning to end of his brief career. At the same time he was by no means of the same class as his immediate successor, Galopin, who was a very extraordinary colt indeed, and ought never to have been beaten. It was only the other day that the veteran John Dawson, who trained them both, told me that Galopin was quite eighteen pounds better than Petrarch, and he was very anxious to match him against Prince Charlie at weight for age. This would certainly have been "the" match of modern times, but Prince Batthyany, who simply idolized Galopin, could not bear the idea of risking his defeat, and this was the reason that he did not run after the end of his second season, but was sent to the stud absolutely sound in every respect. Those who saw Kisber make hacks of his opponents in 1876 would have thought even more of the performance had they known the trouble that Joseph Hayhoe had in training him. He was lame in one of his hocks, and the weak spot was under the pump for a couple of hours every afternoon. This intermittent lameness was doubtless the cause of his in-and-out running, and he could not be prepared for the St. Leger. Silvio, Sefton and Sir Bevy may be passed over with the remark that the last-named, who was not such a bad horse as is generally imagined, had the distinction of giving George Fordham—the greatest jockey of all time—his only winning mount in the Derby.

No one who saw it will ever forget Archer's marvelous finish on Bend Or in 1880, which was rendered more memorable from the fact that "the Tinman" was still partially crippled from the attack made upon him by Muley Edris. As Robert the Devil passed Tattersall's Ring he held such a lead that it did not look possible for him to be caught, and to this day I cannot understand how Bend Or ever managed to get his head in front. The following year witnessed the first success of an American-bred candidate. They were a very moderate field that took part in the race of 1882, and the only memorable feature of it was that Shotover should have taken rank with Eleanor and Blink Bonny as the only fillies in all the long list of winners. There is possibly only one man living who knows the true history of St. Blaise's Derby, and it has always been thought that the unpleasant rumors which were current with regard to that race hastened the retirement of the late Lord Falmouth. I missed the dead heat between St. Gatien and Harvester, but saw Archer ride another of his superb finishes on Melton in 1885, when he was meeting an almost equally consummate artist in Webb on Paradox. Twelve months later Archer was again to the fore, this time on the mighty Ormonde, who won easily enough at the finish, although the gallant little Bard fairly tackled him for a few strides as they came down the hill from Tattenham Corner. It can only be written of Merry Hampton that he was the best of a bad lot, and lack of space forbids me to deal with the remainder. Such a scene as was witnessed on Epsom Downs in 1896, when Persimmon so gallantly defeated his great rival, St. Frusquin, and won his first Derby for the Prince of Wales, can never quite be repeated.—Captain Absolute in The Sportsman.

Buying Yearlings.

Choosing young thoroughbreds is always an uncertain kind of business. The most perfectly shaped are not necessarily the fastest gallopers, nor does "fashionable" breeding always prevail in the real test. When the number of youngsters sent to market each season is considered, and the percentage of failures added up, it will be readily seen that there are a great many chances against a buyer dropping on to a race horse in the word's truest meaning. The element of luck must enter largely into such a speculation.

A man might be walking over some unthought of ground, kick up a stone, and find revealed indications of gold that lead to fabulous fortunes being unearthed therefrom. It is much the same with buying yearlings. You might buy a dozen, all duffers, and for the sake of just another bid—another tenner, perhaps a fiver—miss a Maribyrnong Plate winner, and the man who chips in with no set object in view gets the treasure.

A slight deformity on an otherwise truly shaped young thoroughbred will greatly decrease his value, and a good one is often picked up cheaply because of some supposed detriment.

Some buyers bid for pedigree, others for size and shape, but all require an immense amount of luck on their side to make a success in their investments in yearlings stock. The man who looks for shape would scarcely pause long before a big-footed, coffin-headed member of the Gozo tribe. The Gozos are chiefly remarkable for ugliness, and yet they are winning races—and good races—every day. There was no more shape about The Grafter than there would be about a great, gaunt store bullock, but, all the same, he was right there with 9st 2lb. on his back when the judge hove in sight at the end of Melbourne Cup. Gozo has upset all the theories about formation. With his progeny it is a case of the most ill-shaped ones being the greatest gallopers.

An old timer at the sale one day, when having the "breeding lines" explained to him by an enthusiast, got rather bored, and retaliated with, "I don't want a pretty pedigree; give me a galloper." So far so good. But the question is, how are we going to sift the galloper from the other sort in their babyhoods? We are much afraid that it will always remain a lottery. A man might take a fancy to a young one, and the opinion may be verified in the test occasionally, but the average of "rubbish" must always exceed the profitable material. Sticking to running families sometimes pays, but then, again, we have seen some rank failures related to great horses. None of Newhaven's brothers or sisters were within stones of the mighty chestnut, and plenty of other equine heroes from time to time had similarly had "poor relations." There is often an exceptionally brilliant son or daughter amongst a family generally dullards, and in the equine tribe the same thing is common enough. You might buy a full brother to a Derby winner, only to find in the process of training that you have paid a lot of money for an article that is valueless for the purpose for which it was secured. In England, as well as in this country—all over the world, in fact—it is much the same. Yearlings are bought and found wanting by the hundred each season. But, fortunately, there is always money for even such a doubtful speculation. There is a certain amount of fascination about the uncertainty of the thing. It is really a sort of a gamble, and one lucky throw (or bid) makes up for any number of disappointments.—Pretender in the Melbourne Sportsman.

If the report that Onward Silver 2:08 will not stand training again is true, the turf has lost one of its brightest ornaments. He was never a reliable trotter, and until a long course of drilling by Mr. Geers he was positively erratic, but he was fast and game, two qualifications which always gain admiration for a race horse. Mr. Geers regarded him a prospective 2:05 trotter, and he must be greatly disappointed if a trial has shown him that the son of Onward is out of it as a campaigner. Possibly the unsteadiness which Onward Silver showed in his races was the result of injudicious handling early in his career. Certain it is that he was a better actor last year than he was the previous season, and the chances are that he would have been a still more improved horse in this respect this year had he been able to stand a racing preparation. Horse World.

Northern California Trap Shooting Tournament.

The fifth annual tournament of the trap shooters of Northern California, open to all shooters residents of that portion of the State north of Sacramento, took place at the Kimball and Upson grounds on Saturday and Sunday last. The attendance of sportsmen was excellent, over 100 enthusiasts faring the traps in the various events programmed for both days. The arrangements at the grounds were excellent, visiting shooters and guests being looked after in a whole-souled and congenial manner that won many encomiums for the managers. Weather conditions during both days caused some sad results in the scores of some of the cracks. A north wind blew strongly on the first day and turned into a gale almost on Sunday. The shooting under the circumstances was very good.

Shooters from Chico, Dixon, Davisville, Willows, Gridley, Oak Park, Newcastle, Oroville, Yuba City, Redding, Red Bluff, Dunsmuir, Jones City, Colusa, Washington, San Francisco and other places were in evidence. The headquarters of the up country shooters were located in a row of comfortable canvas tents erected just back of the firing line. Taken altogether the shoot was the most successful ever held in Northern California. The sentiment of those attending the shoot is favorable to having the future tournaments held in Sacramento.

The shoot was formally opened on Saturday by Mayor Clark of Sacramento, who fired the first shot.

Forty-one shooters entered the different live bird events, which were shot on the opening day. The traps were box traps, pulled one after the other, each shooter standing in front of his trap. W. A. Robertson acted as referee. The birds supplied were nearly all good ones, some right quartering birds that went away with the wind were hard enough to test anybody's skill.

The first event of the day was for the championship of Northern California, twelve pigeons, entrance $2.50. Winner to receive medal and one-third of entrance money and two-thirds of next entrance money. Thirty-seven shooters were in the race. W. S. Harkey, of Gridley, Frank Ruhstaller and Dr. Weldon of Sacramento each made a straight score. Mr. Harkey won in the miss and out shoot-off on his eleventh bird. J. A. Bailey of Willows won the medal at Red Bluff last year and received on Saturday two-thirds of the entrance money. The previous winners were Frank J. Ruhstaller at Chico in 1898; J. H. Durst at Redding in 1899, and again at Wheatland in 1900, and S. A. Bailey at Red Bluff in 1901.

In the second event, 12 pigeons, class shooting, entrance $5, three moneys, 50, 30 and 20%, thirty-seven entries, Harkey, Ruhstaller and Weldon divided first money on straight scores. Bailey, Wittenbrock and Hough divided second money, with eleven birds each. Inglehart, Humble, Bergi, Morrison, Graham, Barham and Jones divided third money, with ten birds each.

The third event was a match at ten live birds, $7.50 entrance, high guns, three moneys, 50, 30 and 20%. Wittenbrock and Judge Hughes divided first and second moneys with clean strings. There was twelve contestants in this race, each other shooter however withdrew at different times during the match.

Event number four was the initial blue rock race of the tournament. Twenty targets, entrance $1, three cash prizes, $17.50, $12.50 and $7.50, seventy-six entries. First money was won by F. M. Newbert of Sacramento with twenty straight, G. L. Barham, second, third money being divided between Johnson, Loshbough and Williams.

A race at twenty blue rocks, $1.00 entrance, was event five for the Kimball and Upson trophy, winner to receive one-third of entrance money and two-thirds of next entrance. The cup to be won three times before final individual ownership, competition to be in Northern California only. Forty-one shooters entered the race. F. M. Newbert won the trophy on another straight score.

The sixth event was at twenty blue rocks, entrance $2.00, cash prizes, $35, $25 and $15. J. H. Burston won first money with a straight score of twenty, G. A. Johnson, J. W. Humble and W. D. Peterson with nineteen each divided second money. Third money was divided between Wittenbrock, Bergi, Hughes, Holling, Garnett, Haselbush, Damon and Durst.

The final event of the day was a merchandise prize shoot, twenty targets, $1.00 entrance, nine classes. Sixty-nine shooters entered. Gibson and W. A. Robertson made the only straight scores.

On the second day the shoot commenced with a twenty target race, entrance $1.50, cash prizes $25, $15 and $10, seventy-eight entries. Thomason and Peterson with eighteen each divided first money. F. M. Newbert, second money; Damon, Johnson and Woods divided third money.

The second event at twenty blue rocks, $2.50 entrance, $42.40, $27.50, $17.50 and $10 cash prizes brought fifty-nine shooters to the traps. Englehart, who broke eighteen birds, won first money. Bailey, Haselbush, Barham and Humble divided second money. Third money was divided by Newbert, McWilliams, Peterson, Bergi and Englehart. Fourth money was split between Johnson, Gibson, Haugh, Black, Smith, Morgan, Burston, J. Montgomery, Grieve, Garnett and Hotchkiss.

Event three, twenty blue rocks, entrance $4, cash prizes, $65, $45, $30, $20, with eighteen breaks, F. Newbert was first; Johnson, Wittenbrock, Peterson and D. E. Newbert dividing second money. Thomason, Haugh and Garnett divided third money. Fourth money was divided among Johnson, Chiles, Grieve, Holling, Hotchkiss and Durst. Forty seven shooters entered.

The fourth event, at twenty blue rocks, entrance $2, cash prizes, was contested by forty-three shooters. W. D. Peterson, with twenty breaks scored, took first money. Second money was divided among Barham, Payton, Wittenbrock and Englehart. Third money was divided by Johnson, Thomason, Haugh, Black, F. Newbert and Bergi. The purses were $42.50, $27.50 and $17.50.

The contest for the blue rock championship of Northern California was fifth on the card. The race was at twenty birds, entrance $1. Thirty-five shooters entered. Peterson won the championship with a straight score, the second made by him and only straight made in the individual races during the day. F. Newbert, the previous holder, received two-thirds of the entrance money. Peterson will receive two-thirds of the next entrance money.

The sixth event was a merchandise shoot, entrance $1.50; eighty-four shooters entered. W. A. Robertson, with nineteen breaks, was high man and won the first prize, a Remington shotgun. Prizes in this race were provided for ten classes. Ties were shot off miss and out.

The closing event of the tournament was the six man team contest for the championship of Northern California, the winning team, composed of Dixon shooters, received one-third of the entrance money, two-thirds of the purse went to the Chico team, Chico shooters having won the trophy last year. Nine teams entered, entrance per team $6, fifteen blue rocks per man. The contesting teams and scores were: Oroville 66, Capital City Club (1) 70, Washington Gun Club 68, Dixon 78, Davisville 70, Willows 76, Chico 70, Gridley 72, Capital City Club (2) 63.

On Saturday events one and two and four and five were shot at the same time, entrance separate. On Sunday events four and five, entrance separate, were shot at the same time.

In the evening the shooters gathered at Elks' Hall, where Frank J. Ruhstaller, Jr., gave a little German tea and mirth and jollity reigned supreme before the fifth annual tournament for Northern California became a matter of past history. Mr. Ruhstaller presided and presented the trophies to the winners, with a neat speech on each occasion.

The live bird championship having been won by W. S. Harkey of Gridley, Mr. Ruhstaller presented him with the championship trophy amid great applause, and he responded appropriately.

F. M. Newbert of Sacramento having won the Kimball & Upson trophy, was presented with it and returned thanks.

W. D. Peterson of Dixon, who won the blue rock championship of Northern California, was presented with the cup.

The Dixon team having won the team trophy, they were brought to the front and the handsome cup was confided to their keeping, with the injunction to defend it.

W. D. Peterson, who had won the highest average with a score of 89, was presented with a handsome diamond medal.

"Dustproof Harry" was present and (by prior arrangement) was called on for a speech and responded happily. He drew a picture of the true sportsman, nature's nobleman, pointing to himself with pride and satisfaction. The pleasures of his younger days live with him and he likes to see, in his old age, the younger sportsman enjoying himself and joining fish and game protection organizations that may be utilized for the protection of Governor Gage's re-nomination. He referred to the harmony that had prevailed through the meeting. He urged the sportsman to guard well the game or in a few years it would be lost forever and the next generation would not find "a valuable food supply for the people," as he used to term it.

A number of others were called on and responded, and the general expression was of determination to use every endeavor to secure the protection and preservation of game and the passage and enforcement of proper game laws. It is to be hoped that the Sacramento shooters in particular will unbend and endeavor to apply the foregoing very nice and thoroughly sportsmanlike sentiment to the protection of English snipe.

The scores for both days are in the following

summary:

Robinson won the Remington gun on the shoot-off. The other winners in this class in the order given were: C. C. Juster, A. M. Gomez, G. A. Hodapp, of Martinez; T. A. Work, of Monterey; J. Gordon, Knick, B. Harrison, E. A. Wands, C. F. Grant, R. C. Rosenberg, D. Ostrander, W. H. Price, A. Bonner, Ed Donohoe, J. Burns, J. Pisani and W. J. Fox.

In the third class, R. Finocchio was high gun with a score of twenty-five, he won the repeating shotgun. The other winners were: L. G. Leavel, G. H. Chick, C. M. Wollam, C. A. Muller, W. Hanson, H. J. Hyde, C. Reise, A. P. McGregor, "Hobart," H. Von Soosten, Chas. Kewell, J. Williams, J. Kiosch, C. E. Breitweiser, H. B. Jeffrays, F. W. Bell, C. Walker, J. Lavigne, C. Eggers and R. G. Haggard.

The handicap conditions of the race were arranged on a very satisfactory system. All of the shooters were classed—experts, first, second and third class men shot in segregated classes by themselves. Each shooter shot at thirty blue rocks, the first fifteen of which were fired at from the sixteen yard mark. The distance for the second fifteen for each shooter was determined by the following scale: Shooters breaking fourteen and fifteen shot the remaining fifteen from twenty yards; twelve and thirteen breaks, fifteen at eighteen yards; ten and eleven breaks, fifteen at sixteen yards; nine breaks or under, fifteen at fourteen yards. The handicap was the same for all classes. Ties for guns were shot off at twenty-five birds from the handicap distance peg. This arrangement seems to work remarkably well. The shoot was under the management of Mr. E. L. Forster.

During the shoot the shooters were further handicapped by a very heavy wind, which at times was so strong as to prevent a shooter firing at the bird sprung from a trap for him.

The scores and distance handicaps were as follows:

The Sacramento Show.

For a small show and one conducted under certain adverse conditions the capital city bench show was an excellent exhibit. The show opened on Tuesday morning and closed on Saturday, the management decided to run a day longer for the gate receipts. A dog show as one of the attractions of a so-called "street fair" cannot be expected to turn out a financial success, there is no reason however, why it should not be a howling success.

The benching was erected in a structure similar in style to the one used for the show last year—canvas stretched over a scantling framework. Spratt's benched and fed. The number of dogs benched was 129, the entries numbered 140. A great many of the dogs shown were from San Francisco, and were familiar features of past exhibitions here and across the bay. The judging, with but few exceptions, was very satisfactory. Judge Chas. N. Post, of Sacramento, judged Setters and Pointers, his task was an easy one. E. C. Plume judged the Cocker and won golden opinions for the cleverness of his initial appearance in the ring. Dr. George W. Clayton, of Chicago, judged all other classes, and did not have a very arduous task in placing the ribbons.

In St Bernards six were shown, smooths and roughs. Lester C. was easily far ahead of the rest, he was in splendid condition and one of the attractions of the week in Sacramento. Two smooth coated bitches, Margery and Vienna, are two more than fair ones.

Great Danes were ten in number, half of them harlequins. In puppies, three harlequin bitches Empress Eleanor, Maybelle and Lady Blanche ran in one, two, three order. The surprise came in limit and winners when Ruy Blas was placed over Bluebeard, who had beaten him at the San Francisco show. Ruy Blas is a handsome harlequin and shows plenty of quality and type.

Greyhounds, seven in number, were a nice lot with Sacramento Boy, a well set up and finely coupled dog, in the lead.

Collies, nineteen benched, were a very good lot of dogs. Ch. Ormskirk Emerald Jr. and Cheviot Construction were winner and reserve, Ch. Verona Bonnie Brae winners bitches, are two well known dogs. Alfie, first puppy dogs, is a promising one.

Pointers and Setters, six and two entered respectively, were ordinary. Ch. Queen N, still shows well despite her age. Susie Rip Rap, a puppy bitch, well headed, a little leggy, but nice bodied and stylish, is a very promising puppy.

Four Irish Setters and three Gordons were not deserving of special mention, save the Gordon Crackerjack. The Irish Water Spaniel was a large bodied, apple headed one.

Cockers, nineteen of them, showed lots of style and quality. With but few exceptions they were the same ones shown in Frisco. Bulldogs, Bull Terriers, Dachs-hundes, Irish Terriers, Beagles, Scotch Terriers, Pugs, Wire-haired Fox Terriers were filled out principally by the entries of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Klein and George S. Thomas' dogs that were left here with Mr. Klein. This lot includes a number of excellent dogs, now very familiar to the fancy.

Fox Terriers, sixteen smooths, brought Endcliffe Resist to the front over Norfolk Trueman, who was absent from the April show. Three wire-hairs in three classes, Skyrocket, Skyscraper and Endcliffe Daisy all received blue ribbons.

Seven toy Black and Tans were the best exhibit of these diminutive and frail dogs we have seen for years. Erastus, a puppy Dalmatian, was a very good specimen of the breed. Four American Foxhounds were shown. These dogs were all large, well boned and strongly built dogs for going over rough country. They have a local reputation in Sacramento for being the cleverest hounds in that section.

Manitoba Field Trials.

Prof. Eric Hamber, Hon. Sec. Manitoba Field Trials Club, mails a circular giving important information regarding their coming trials, the sixteenth annual of the club. The money increase in each of the two stakes, the Derby and All-Age, is $100. Entries for the Derby close July 1st; for the All-Age and Championship Stakes, August 1st. The stakes in the Derby and All-Age are $325, each divided into four prizes, viz.: $150, $100, $50 and $25. The purse in the Championship Stake consists of the running fees and a gold medal. Entries to all stakes are $5 forfeit and $10 additional to start. Post entries will be allowed in the Championship Stake for the winners of the fall circuit up to that date.

Birds are represented as being plentiful, the past winter being a most favorable one for them. Handlers will have no trouble in getting located on good grounds, and the game laws of the Province now permit the training of dogs during the close season without interference, when accompanied by owners or handlers.

Handlers and others who contemplate a trip to Manitoba should thoroughly understand the conditions upon which they can take their dogs into the Province of Manitoba for training and starting in the Manitoba Field Trial Club's trials this fall. The ports of entry are Emerson, on the Northern Pacific Railroad, and Greta, on the Great Northern. The printed conditions say:

All dogs that have been duly entered in any of the Manitoba Field Trials Club events are allowed to enter Manitoba and remain for ninety days, free of all duty.

In order to benefit by this arrangement, an accurate description of each dog is absolutely necessary, giving name, breed, sex, color, event entered in, owner's name, name of person having charge, and line of railway traveling by, must be mailed to Eric Hamber, Secretary M. F. T. C., Winnipeg, Manitoba, one week previous to date of arrival at port of entry.

Dogs unless entered in the Trials will be detained by the Custom House authorities.

The California Mountain Trout.

There are several varieties of trout in this State which go by the name of California trout. The differences between them are not radical, and arise, probably, from the influences of locality rather than from natural variation. The differences appear principally in external markings.

The fish of highest development are found in the McCloud river, from which they take their distinctive name. They are the true rainbow trout, having a band of bright red, like the tint of the iris, along the whole extent of the lateral line. The mountain trout have the same marking, but in fainter tint. In some specimens it is hardly perceptible. It has been noticed that in wild waters this tint is much more strongly brought out than in fish confined in artificial ponds. The influence of the wider range and of the change to natural food, largely crustaceans, is observed not only in the brighter colors, but in the greater vigor and more rapid development of the fish.

The spawning season of the mountain trout commences about the 1st of March and continues until June. The California trout is, in its structure, pretty much the counterpart of the Eastern brook trout. It has not the carmine spots which distinguish the latter, but has the same dorsal markings, a slightly more forked tail, and the same color and texture of flesh. The general external color is a silvery green or olive, mottled with irregular spots of a black or darkish color. Along the lateral line is, as has been already stated, a marking of red of varying distinctness according to habit and habitat.

This fish is one of remarkable vigor and hardiness. It will thrive in water which, to salmon or some other trout, would be certain death. It will bear rough handling with comparative impunity, and bruises on its skin, which, in other fish, would be followed by fungus and death, make apparently no harmful impression. It is an active fish, and though it will thrive in either lake or river, loves best a swift running stream and the most thoroughly aired water. It is a voracious feeder, but its tastes are as delicate as others of the trout family. It loves best to take its food alive, and cannot resist the temptation of a struggling grasshopper or miller, no matter how full its maw may be already. No fish known is as certain as this to be attracted by the artificial fly. It does not matter much what the form or color may be, so that a motion is given to resemble life. In its greed for insect food it takes no account of seasons, and will rise as readily in January to a red fly, when it is hardly possible for a natural fly to exist, as in July, when the surface of the water swarms with insect life. It grows with nearly double the rapidity of the Eastern brook trout in the same water, and is, of all fish whose habitat is exclusively in fresh water, looked upon as the most suitable for the large Eastern streams and other streams which overmuch fishing, dams, sawmills and other destructive agencies of human contriving have spoiled for good trout fishing. Whether it can endure the poison of tanneries has not yet been tested. If it shall be found to stand this last desperate test, to which all others of the trout family have succumbed, it will deserve to take rank with immortals.

The only unfavorable criticism which has been made on this fish is that they are not good keepers; that they rapidly soften after killing, and do not bear transportation well. This may be a disadvantage or an advantage, according to the standpoint from which it is considered. The residents in the neighborhood of trout streams do not care to have all the stock shipped to market; they want some for their own use, and if these trout will not bear transportation, there will be all the more to eat at home. No fish, anywhere, or at any time, is as good as fish when caught. The complaint of softening, we think, does not apply to all of our trout; but to such as are caught out of season or in mild waters. The quality of all trout is very much affected by the character of the water in which they live and by what they feed on. Speckled trout caught within a few weeks of spawning time and after spawning time till they are restored to vigor, will be slimy and soft, and tend quickly to putrefaction, and those that live in shallow water, with muddy bottom, and feed on leeches and lizards, are never good keepers. Every one who has done much trout fishing will have observed that fish caught on a running stream, especially if the stream be one subject to the influence of rainfalls, soften more quickly than those taken in lakes. Even on a good spring stream, the angler will observe the ribs of the first trout protruding before the last has been put in his basket. Our native trout, in this respect, will not differ materially from any other trout.

Fish Lines.

The possibilities for sport in salt water angling obtainable by Los Angeles fishermen are charming at this time if the following account taken from last Sunday morning's Herald is any criterion.

In and around New York city, the devotees of salt water fishing number no less than 150,000, their interests are looked after and a fraternity of fishermen established, by the formation of a League of Salt Water Anglers numbering thousands.

The development of local and Coast salt water fishing has never been attempted except in a crude and intermittent manner. The salt water sportsmen have been, until the advent of striped bass fishing recently, ridiculed by the dilettanti who cited the virtues of fly-fishing and delights of the trout stream. Notwithstanding we know several of the extremely ethical gentry who do not disdain to make a quiet trip to Lake Merritt, the Oakland estuary and other waters where the silver smelt abound, and there enjoy themselves with light tackle and red ant or black gnat flies on No. 14 hooks, casting for the little smelt, which at times will take the fly with avidity. These can be caught now by any angler who will take the trouble to try the shallow waters off Berkeley with light rod and leader.

The fact that one striped bass angler hooked a large salmon near Sheep Island two weeks ago, and the taking of a four pound quinnat salmon at Tiburon last Sunday, by Al Wilson, on a bass spoon, is evidence enough to warrant some different styles of fishing in our bay, than the old clumsy drop line system. The Los Angeles data is given below:

"On the Salt Lake train this morning, (18th), there will be a merry crowd of surf fishermen. Tidal conditions, while not favorable until afternoon, are not bad enough to warrant a prediction of poor sport for the day, though it is likely those who remain after 4 o'clock will get more in the ensuing two hours of fishing than is taken during the day.

M. Kremer, R. Campbell, P. Lazarus, M. H. Newmark, S. Nordlinger, J. Baruch, D. Botiller, Ed. Germain, the Brighton beach contingent, have accumulated plenty of clam bait, and most of them are planning to stay over for the late train. The Salt Lake road is now running a fine service at 6:35, and many of the anglers are willing to stay a little late so as to avoid the crush, and have plenty of comfortable space on the trip home.

Simon Spier, W. G. Stearns, W. B. Skeel, Joe Spear, Jack Jenkins and E. L. Hedderly will go to Terminal wharf, where they will join P. T. Jordan and R. D. Middleton, who left last night for the resort.

R. F. Van Cleave, Sylvain Lazard, Al Sheriff and several others will put in the day at East San Pedro, fishing in the bay for yellowfins and croakers until afternoon, then trying for a few surf.

Louis Wundhammer, John Marset, C. C. Caslera, J. Heis and Ernest Benchel have planned to raid the pompano at Port Los Angeles to-morrow. The pumpkin seeds have been caught at intervals for several weeks, and last Sunday two or three dozen were taken by one old fellow who never bothers with anything but pompano. No lobster bait can be had legally until August 15, and in its absence pieces of stingray, skate or shark are the best pompano bait that can be had.

G. Pomeroy left last night for his Redondo place, and he doubtless has done some business with the corn-feds already this morning. A number of halibut and yellow-tail fishermen went to Redondo last night equipped with the hand lines and other yellowtail gear, but they are likely to have little sport with the big fish. The mackerel contingent greatly outnumber the others now.

Quite a few surf are being caught off the beach near the stump slough of Redondo. Two or three anglers will go there to-morrow. J. Whomes and his friends will be busy obtaining the customary "small mess" of fish that Brother Whomes always brings home.

Mackerel fishing slowed down a little the last two days, but in all probability it will be as good as ever to-day. Some of the large corn-feds that have been taken lately at Redondo afford pretty sport.

Big mackerel make the worst tangles of any fish excepting, possibly, the powerful amber colored boys with the yellow tails. Everybody who goes after the big mackerel takes off his sinker or uses a very light one, and baits with a chunk of mackerel or a small fish. The heaving and hauling process is a succession of snarls and tangles, for the mackerel is one of the most active of fish, and seems to take a yellowtail's delight in tying everybody's gear into knots that are hard to unfasten in the excitement. Mackerel hunt close to the top of the water at such times and often can be seen plainly. Forty or fifty two-pounders is not an uncommon catch when conditions are right, though the ten and twelve-inch mackerel are better for food purposes than the bigger ones. They do not put up the fight, though the sport is conducted more on a rod and reel basis than is the catching of the bigger mackerel.

J. G. French and one or two others will fish to-day at the remains of the Ocean Park wharf.

Harry Slotterbeck and his friend Morrison left last night for Redondo and will dally with the blue backs to-day. From trout to mackerel is, Slotterbeck says, a big come down, but one cannot have the best of it all the time. He has a new Leonard salmon rod which he wishes to try on the corn-feds.

Quite a number of trolling parties went out early this morning after barracuda. Most of them left Long Beach, but a few went out from Redondo and San Pedro. At present Long Beach seems to be the place. Good catches have been the rule.

A tide table is also published weekly for the benefit of fishermen at Santa Monica and other beaches in that vicinity.

The science of pisciculture, which now engages so much attention, is not altogether a new one. The Chinese had an inkling of it ages ago. It is stated that in the fourteenth century, a monk in Europe hatched by an artificial process some fish eggs; but whether they were impregnated from the water where they were naturally cast we are not told. The first authentic case of artificial impregnation is credited to an officer in the Prussian army—Lieutenant Jacobi; the result of which experiments were published in 1763.

No further advance seems to have been made in this science for nearly a hundred years, when a fisherman named Remy, in German France, was so successful with artificial impregnation that in 1851 the French government, whose interest had become enlisted, established the extensive hatchery, still in operation at Huningen, now under the jurisdiction of Germany. From these small beginnings the science has spread to nearly all civilized nations. On the American continent attention was first practically drawn to this subject by the alarming decrease of shad in rivers where before they had existed in such plenty as, in their season, to furnish large populations with cheap, abundant and wholesome nitrogenous food. Experiments were tried with varying success, previous to 1867, to hatch, on the Connecticut river, the spawn of artificially stripped shad, but the right methods were not hit upon until Seth Green, who had been an enthusiastic fisherman from his boyhood, and a watchful investigator for many years of the secrets of the finny tribe, solved the problem.

The tomb of Izaak Walton is in what is known as Prior Silktede's Chapel, in the Cathedral of the ancient city of Winchester, England, on the eastern side of the south transept, and is covered by a black slab on which is the inscription:

There are many points of interest in the grand old building, though disciples of the gentle art will probably be most struck by the tomb and the finely executed statue of the great man who, by his unequalled book on the art of angling and the moral principles inculcated in it, has rendered his name dear to the hearts of all good and true anglers.

Striped bass anglers find good boats and boatmen, for Sunday fishing, at and around West Berkeley. The net fishermen are prohibited from fishing on Sunday, they are consequently willing to hire out reasonably to the bass fishermen rather than have their boats laid by idly.

Off the Oakland and Berkeley shores the silver smelt can be found in countless myriads. Light tackle, black gnat and red ants on No. 14 hook is the proper rig for the fun. The fish are a delicious pan fish too.

Two Bear Stories.

The capture of an extraordinarily large brown bear, or as we believe a "cinnamon," is thus exploited by the Colusa Sun:

"For several years a large brown bear had been living off the finest and best kids on the Harlan goat ranch between Sheet Iron and St. John peaks of the Coast range, and on the 18th of April a party composed of A. T. Luttrell of Maxwell, W. T. Brown of Williams and Chris and Helm Harlan of the ranch started out with Luttrell's imported hounds determined to find him. Just at the ravine that marks the dividing line between the two great peaks above named, the dogs brought him to bay. He was in the brush and he made for Chris and gave him a lick that tore the clothes off of him, but fortunately he was able to get away. The bear then got hold of Helm Harlan, but the dogs piled in on him so that the young man got away. About this time Billy Brown got into the thicket and put five shots into him, and the bear ran. In the fight at this place he killed four dogs. They followed him about half a mile and found him dead. One of the bullets had passed through the heart, and still he had vitality to travel a mile.

This was perhaps the largest brown bear ever captured in the mountains, as when dressed it weighed over 600 pounds. Old hunters say the weight was over 800 pounds when alive."

The Mexicans in California had an ingenious method of trapping bears before the advent of the Yankees brought modern firearms into the region. A piece of meat was nailed to the stout horizontal limb of an oak tree. From a limb five or six feet above a rope was suspended, to the end of which a large stone was made fast so that it hung about six inches above and a trifle nearer the trunk than the meat on the lower limb.

When a bear smelled the meat from afar, he would climb up the tree and make his way to the bait. In doing so he would push the stone pendulum to one side. Just as he was about to fasten his teeth in the meat the stone would swing back and bang his head. This would arouse the anger of the bear, and he would give the stone a sweep of his paw which would send it swinging farther out. The consequence was a harder bang and more anger. The more he struck the stone the harder he would be hit in return until from ferocious anger he would lose his caution and attack the pendulum with all his vigor. One powerful sweep, then bang! and bruin would be tumbled out of the tree to the rocks arranged below, where, disabled by his fall, he would be at the mercy of those who set the trap whenever they choose to take him.

Seal Shooting.

The stalking and shooting of seals is a description of sport that very few gunners have had opportunities of enjoying. Seals are plentiful opposite certain places on the coasts of Scotland and Ireland, and only in one out of half a dozen localities where they are to be found is the stalking of them possible, owing to the configuration of the surroundings. They are not so easily stalked, but only by stalking is it possible to bag them; for to shoot at them as their heads momentarily appear on the surface of deep water is, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, to lose them even when hit by the bullet. The quickness, too, with which a seal can duck under water on seeing the flash of a rifle is really marvelous. Its round head disappears entirely just the hundredth of a second before the ball reaches the spot in the water the head previously occupied. But the fact is that it is long odds against a shooter being able to fire from a boat at a seal so as to hit its head, the only visible part of the animal as it comes up the surface for a breath of air. The boat in the first place in all probability is unsteady, the aim has to be very quickly taken, the seal's appearance above the water is unexpected and momentary, and it can duck to the flash. Furthermore, when all these disadvantages are overcome, and a bullet is sent crashing through the small, compact head, taken at an unguarded moment on the part of the animal before it has discovered its human antagonist in the boat, the chances are very much against the recovery of the carcass, which sinks out of sight immediately. It is very difficult to bag a seal except by stalking and shooting him when found upon dry land.

By those who have done both, it is considered quite as difficult a sporting feat to stalk and shoot a seal as a stag. Both are very wary animals, both have by instinct the faculty of selecting the most unapproachable places to rest in, and both are quick to discover any appearance of danger. In the estuaries of some of the rivers on the east coast of Scotland there used to be very good sport in pursuit of the seals to be seen there in very large numbers all the year round. It was useless, however, attempting to kill them in deep water from a boat. It seemed as if the animals used absolutely to enjoy dodging the bullets fired at them, for after ducking at the flash and disappearing before the bullet reached the water, they would reappear, perhaps, on the other side of the boat quite within shot, as if inquiring what all the noise was about! Occasionally they might be caught napping, especially where one was watching, rifle in hand and finger on trigger, for their first appearance; but even then, when the round bullet-head was palpably hit by a carefully aimed ball, and the surface of the water was tinged with blood, seldom, indeed, could the seal be bagged. It went to the bottom and remained there to all intents and purposes. Whether by a dive in the death struggle or sinking dead like a lump of lead, if dead, it went down and never reappeared. Only if severely wounded was there a chance of its reappearance for a breath of air. "Shooting seals in the water from a boat I have always found very unproductive sport," is the opinion of a noted English writer.

The only sportsmanlike and satisfactory mode of bringing a seal to bag is by stalking him. In that manner on the sandbanks in the estuaries of Scottish rivers, some sportsmen have killed a good many phocæ, after very exciting, though very wet and muddy, stalks. In some places there the sea recedes for miles at low water, leaving only the deep beds of the rivers, with banks of sand or mud on each side. On these the phocæ, after a meal on a fat salmon, loves to bask in the sun, and then he is approachable only by those skilled in his little ways and acquainted with the intervening ground. It is useless trying to sail past him in a punt with the notion that he may mistake it for a log of wood floating down the river to the sea. He knows the look of a punt when he sees one, and has he not selected that high bank for his siesta so that he can look around for a mile on every side of him and detect the approach of punts, canoes, or boats of any description. Only in one way can he be approached unseen, and that is by following the burn that runs through the mixture of sand and mud into the river bed, the banks of which might hide the head and shoulders of the approaching stalker, up to his armpits in the water. It is a dangerous stalk, indeed, only to be attempted by one who knows every inch of the ground and has come prepared for it. But if no mistakes are made it may bring one within fifty yards or less of the seals, when everything depends on accurate marksmanship. The head is the most vulnerable part, for a body hit may only result in wounding the animal, and, however severely hit, he quickly disappears into his native element, near which it will be found he has cautiously made his resting place, and into which he waddles with an awkward motion, very unlike his smart and graceful progress in the water.

For two or three years after the slag from the Mountain Copper Company's smelter at Keswick began to be dumped into the Sacramento river the fish in the river that had heretofore been plentiful were rapidly killed. Dead fish lined the banks of the river, and in the gills the slag was found literally packed. The salmon runs were interfered with and the catch of eggs was small.

There has been no slag dumped into the river for a year, and an unusually big run of salmon and a large catch is expected. Captain Lambson, superintendent of the hatcheries, was in Redding three weeks ago. He says the salmon had already begun to run and were reaching the Baird hatchery. No fish will be taken this summer from the Battle or Mill creek hatcheries. The water has been found too warm for the eggs to hatch.

Cartridge Loading.

If the many discussions and powder controversies have done anything, they have convinced sportsmen more than ever—if they wanted convincing that the fault of misfires, blowbacks, fizzling, ineffective discharges and other similar mishaps are attributable, not to the nitros used, but to the shells or the loading. The best powder badly loaded, or loaded in bad shells, is much less effective in the field than poor powder properly loaded in shells properly made. In the days of black powder the adage, "If you want to kill dead ram well your powder but not your lead," might have held good, but with the use of nitro compounds it has to be read the other way round. Not that the shot should be hammered too much either, as it jams the pellets together and must put them out of shape. Cartridges should undoubtedly be firmly loaded, but they should not be violently pressed with the lever, simply because some sportsmen consider shells improperly loaded if they can succeed in shaking the shot. The latter is a delusion, and rather than explain it, some cartridge sellers prefer to punch down the shot to please their customers against their own convictions. The proper loading of a cartridge is not to be learned in a day, and the past agitation, if it have any effect at all, will probably throw all the more business into the hands of the expert manufacturers and cartridge loaders employed by the best dealers, who are loading cartridges all the year round by hand, and can be trusted to turn out ammunition that will always hold its own so long as they are supplied with the best, and only the best shells, grease proof cloth cardboard and felt wadding. The difference in price is really infinitesimal, altogether out of proportion to the advantage on the other side, of birds killed clean instead of being maimed or missed.

Where to Buy Cartridges.

Sportsmen in these days have become much greater connoisseurs in cartridges than they were even ten years ago. At that time nitros had not obtained the strong hold they now have. Every addition to the list of nitros has its own peculiarities, which have to be studied to some extent, even by the inexpert cartridge loader, or he is bound to make a muddle of his business. Loading, then, has become an art that requires education in a manner that it never did before. It is impossible for the unskilled assistants of a country hardware dealer for instance, to load smokeless cartridges with that attention to detail, with that knowledge of the peculiarities of the powders that can only be found with the factory expert and metropolitan experts, both annually load millions of shells containing every variety of explosive, and have no other daily work whatever beyond loading. They study the particular wadding used, the shells and the primers supplied, and the pressure applied to each cartridge. So far as human skill can be infallible he is likely to turn out good cartridges. His work soon finds him out. His mistakes are quickly discovered by his employers' customers. The result is he avoids making many; he takes pride in his work. If I could not buy my cartridges from responsible manufacturers or dealers I would never resort to a hardware dealer for them unless I resolved to run the risk of finding a number of them very much the reverse of reliable and satisfactory. With the large selection of smokeless explosives now in the market, even country dealers themselves must be occasionally hard pressed in providing their customers with their favorite powders, properly loaded in special shells with special wadding and perhaps special primers. Proper loading in proper shells is the solution of the powder question, and when we have that we will have perfect cartridges, and not till then.

So Mote It Be.

Nothing delights the busybody so much as to make a grand stand play for the suppression of any act or occurrence that can be construed as cruelty to animals. These opportunities are generally ready-made trivial in importance, and are jumped at with avidity. If efforts were made in a proper way and along legitimate lines, publication of articles like the following taken from American Medicine, a journal of standing and influence, would not be necessary:

"The extermination of birds is not alone the work of fashionable vanity, but of fashionable gluttony. The recent seizure in a New York cold storage warehouse of great numbers of dead birds during the close season illustrates the easy invasion of the law by those careless of consequences. In hotels, travelers often find upon the bills of fare the names of birds unknown to ornithologists and dictionary makers. When asked what kind of birds these represent the waiters are permitted to answer only by smiles and silence, or by confessions of ignorance. In the cold storage house in New York were found so many birds that the legal fines would have run to millions of dollars. What would they amount to for the United States? As a result of such practices everywhere those butchers and dealers who obey the law are really punished for their honor, while the reckless are rewarded by great profits. We are fond of pointing out excellent spheres of work and usefulness for those who are greatly troubled by a few deaths of animals in scientific laboratories. Why should this stupid and ruinous war of extermination of birds, with its great resultant suffering, not arouse the energies of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals?"

THE FARM.

Improving Pastures.

Grass lands throughout the country are regularly becoming depleted. In many cases they are producing a much poorer quality of grass than formerly, and in others are becoming considerably damaged by the grass being entirely killed in spots.

A mistake that is frequently made by nearly all farmers and stockmen is to turn their cattle and sheep out to pasture too early in the spring and before the new growth of grass has secured a good start. The result is to graze the land too close in the beginning, with the frequent result that it does not recover during the season.

Close onto this comes the evil of overstocking pasture lands. The grass is eaten down, and the overpasturing keeps it down definitely; it is only a matter of time when any sort of vegetation that is prevented from sending out leaves will become entirely exterminated.

A secondary evil of overstocking land is to pack the soil to such an extent as to seriously interfere with the growth of the plants. A hard soil is favorable for rapid evaporation of moisture. Also, when rain falls upon the land, the soil is too hard to take it up readily and quantities run off that ought to be taken up.

When grass is either trampled down or pastured too close a chance is given for weeds to come in, and this quite invariably occurs. Were the grass unpastured the probabilities are that the weeds would be prevented from coming in, but, as the grass is always handicapped, there is a proportionate opportunity offered for the weeds to take up soil that the grass should occupy.

When land is pastured and the weeds are getting a start, means should be taken to keep the weeds in check by cutting. Run the knife above the grass, and yet low enough to take the weeds. Cut while or before the weeds are in bloom, and by all means previous to seeding.

Harrowing the land, either for the benefit of existing pasture or to work new seed into the soil, is always beneficial. A good illustration of this occurred in the experiment made at the Kansas station eight or nine years ago, when worn out pasture was thoroughly cut up and harrowed, and several varieties of cultivated grasses were sown.

The tame seeds at once germinated and took root and shortly the land was well covered with the cultivated species. By September, however, the native grass had recuperated, and was actually driving out the tame grass. The course of cultivation in stirring root and soil had done the work.

The time may come in this country when manuring pasture lands will be popular and followed, as it is in England today. But in some sections, where fertilizing is comparatively unknown, other and more practicable means must be exhausted. The first lesson to learn is to husband present resources. — Drovers' Journal.

Packers at all the important markets have agents in Texas just now trying to contract for sheep from the ranges there just as soon as they shall be fat enough to come to market and kill out decently. The Texas woolly coats are reported well forward in condition and showing an unusual proportion of wethers in the flocks. Hence the desire of the packers to contract for them now and so fill in for sure between the time the feed-lots' supply gives out and the big run from the Northwestern ranges comes to hand.

The leanness of the cattle which have this year arrived in the Chicago market has caused a falling off of 33 per cent in the output of oleo oil, with the result that that product has greatly advanced in price.

Cattle Conditions in Mexico.

Bulletin No. 41, issued from the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, deals with cattle conditions in Mexico and contains an immense amount of information touching the meat-making business in the republic to the south of us. It is plain from the fact that this bulletin has been issued and that the necessity for conveying the information it contains to breeders on both sides of the international boundary line, that Secretary Wilson believes Mexico must soon take a large number of pure bred cattle from us and also that the time is close at hand. The bulletin is a very comprehensive one and is designed to inform the Mexican as well as the American cattleman what he ought to do in order to get the most out of the animals he desires to sell in international trade. For instance, it is admirably pointed out that the belief obtains among Mexican cattlemen that prices for pure bred animals are exorbitant in the United States. To refute this the table of sale results published in the Gazette last December is reproduced, but the Secretary of Agriculture makes a mistake when he states that the table was compiled by Col. F. M. Woods. The table, as a matter of fact, was compiled wholly in that office and entailed a large amount of work. This table shows that all the Shorthorns sold at auction in the United States in 1901 averaged something over $280 and the other breeds down to $207. As these figures represent all sorts of cattle up to the best, Mexican ranchmen ought to see that bulls to suit their purposes are very moderate in price in all the different breeds. Very interesting letters from the United States Consuls in the various districts of Mexico set forth the facts relating to cattle breeding in the parts of that country with which they are familiar and these, together with figures presented and the information tendered relative to the importation of pure bred and other cattle into the two countries involved, should prove of the utmost value in facilitating this trade.

Buyers of export cattle state that they are extremely cautious at present about buying very many. Prices on the English side of the ocean are about high enough to leave a little profit but any great influx of beef would put prices below the remunerative point and they do not wish to get caught. The howl raised in this country against the beef trust has had in Britain an effect similar to that which it exerted here only from a different direction. The people over there seem to believe that the packers' trust has put the price of beef on the hoof up on them and here the people seem to believe that the packers pay little or nothing for the material on the hoof but charge all sorts of long prices for it after it has reached the hooks.

Prof. E. E. Elliott, of the Washington Experiment Station, writes: "The country is rapidly turning to a stock country. Nearly ten thousand cattle have been brought into the Palouse during the past ten months from the East and most of them were of high grade. There recently was a sale of eighty Short-horn bulls at Colfax. Thousands of acres of broome grass were seeded this year, alfalfa also. Our last year's seeding on the hills is now six inches high. Land has appreciated in value 50 per cent. Sales are enormous and influx of settlers is heavy."

A farmer near Appleton, Wis., owned a flock of 80 pure-bred Southdown sheep. Three weeks ago a mad dog got among them and when the brute was shot and the flock rounded up it was found he had lacerated more than half of them. Later the sheep began to exhibit symptoms of rabies at the rate of some five to six a day, and according to a telegram of April 18 only a few of them remained alive or unaffected at that time.

Raising Turkeys.

Young turkeys are very tender and need to be carefully and intelligently treated or the mortality among them will be great. While a turkey hen will sometimes secrete her nest and bring off a fine flock of little ones, the chances are that if left to herself and permitted to roam the fields unfettered she will soon have but a small number. Especially is this true of the first hatching. Later in the season, when the weather is warmer, the result will sometimes prove satisfactory, but as a rule it is best to confine the poults for a week or so at least.

To do this make a tight pen of boards a foot high in a dry location where there is sand or dirt for them to pick at. The old turkey need not be confined, for she will not leave her young. In one corner of the inclosure make some provision for shelter where the mother may retire with her brood. The poults are the silliest creatures imaginable. They will seek out the tiniest crevice and escape, wandering away farther and farther from the nest until chilled and exhausted.

The most common cause of failure in growing turkeys lies in not properly feeding during the first week. The very best food for the little things is sour milk cheese. Scald and drain the thick milk as for cottage cheese. This, fed quite dry, agrees with the young turkeys perfectly. Boiled eggs are also good, but quite expensive fed very long, especially when the old hen persists in gobbling down more of the feed than he little ones. A turkey mother is the only one among the animal creation which seems to have no respect for the wants of her young. She will eat everything within reach, even driving them away or seizing a mouthful and running away with it so where she can eat it undisturbed. Well baked corn bread, crumbled and fed dry, is good food for little turkeys. Whatever is given must be quite dry. Sloppy food almost invariably causes bowel trouble. Wheat screenings are excellent, and as soon as the poults are old enough to eat this all other food may be discontinued.

When the young poults are a week or two old, it is quite common for them to begin to droop. The wing feathers are seen to hang down, the eyes are closed, and a general dumpish condition exists. The turkey chirps mournfully and is evidently sick. If neglected, death is sure to follow. An examination will reveal the presence of lice. Look for these on the head, around the vent and at the root of the wing quills. The last named place is a favorite haunt of the insects. Pure lard may be applied, but never use sulphur, kerosene or other powerful agent. Insect powder is safe and sure. Sprinkle each turkey well with it every week or so all summer. To do this call them up to you with some food. They will gather around fearlessly. Then stoop without disturbing them and sprinkle it thickly over them as they eat.

Lice, sloppy food and dampness are the principal causes of death in young turkeys. Turkey hens are not apt to be so lousy as common hens. When hatched by the latter, constant watchfulness is necessary to keep them free from insects, especially if allowed to remain in the henhouse. Be sure the hen is freed from lice before the eggs are hatched, and give her a good sprinkling from underneath when taken from the nest. To do this hold her head downward and dust the powder well into the feathers. The large striped louse will be found on the heads and necks of young fowls almost as soon as they are hatched if there are any upon the hen. For these nothing is better than a good greasing with lard. Turkeys are perfectly hardy after the red appears upon their heads. As a well grown turkey ought to bring at least $1 at Thanksgiving or Christmas, there is a good profit in raising them. — Mrs. E. R. Wood, in American Agriculturist.

Sober up on Jackson's Napa Soda.

Dried Skim-Milk.

The latest wrinkle in dairy economy is dried skim-milk. By a new process the milk is heated to 130 degrees or higher, sometimes 160 degrees being required. Rennet and acid is added and when well curdled the whey is drawn off. The curd or pot cheese is next twisted in a bag and hung up to drain or pressed for twelve hours or so. The mass is then tough and stringy and should be picked apart or rubbed to pieces through a half-inch wire sieve. It is finally spread half an inch thick on cloth or galvanized wire-cloth screens three feet square and exposed to the sun. These screens may be set into a box that has no bottom or top and suspended over a stove. In a few hours the curd is dry and hard like scraps of bone. This may be soaked when desired for food for calves, fowls or other stock or ground into milk powder. From two and a half to three pounds are secured from 100 pounds of milk and it must be fed with great prudence because it is exceedingly rich in protein, that most expensive and desirable food element.

Mottles in butter and white specks are sometimes confounded, and by some are considered the same, but there is a difference. Mottled or streaky butter is caused by an unequal distribution of the salt, but white specks have a different cause or causes. Sometimes, when the milk is set in shallow pans, they result from the cream drying on top, so there are small portions that are so hard they do not churn into butter. These particles do not take the color like the rest of the butter and the specks are thus caused. This may be remedied by carefully straining the cream when it is put into the churn. Another cause of white specks is this: When some milk is skimmed off with the cream, as is usually done in the case of deep cold-setting, this milk settles to the bottom, gets overripe and forms a curd, which will be so hard as not to break up in churning and will not run off with the buttermilk but will remain with the butter as white specks or flecks as they are sometimes called. This can be remedied by not letting the cream stand so long before churning, or by frequent or thorough stirring of the cream during the process of ripening. These hard, white particles can also be taken out by straining the cream.

The Shoddy live stock association will have to revise its bill of exceptions if it would cover all the bogus ingredients that go into the manufacture of all-wool clothing. Take for instance the item of mungo which consists of rags ground into powder. Ingenious machines have been invented which blow this dust into the yarn and later press it into the cloth. The powder increases the weight of the cloth, gives it a firm feeling and fools the customer into thinking he is buying something that will wear. The old time miner, aiming to cheat a tenderfoot into purchasing a claim, was wont to load a shotgun with gold dust and discharge it into the ground—which the intending purchaser was then at liberty to pan out and find this gold. The miner who thus salted his claim was forced to be more honest than the mungo-using shoddy swindler, for the miner's dust was at least good gold, not brass filings.

The Montana State land law is unique. It provides for the sale of so many acres annually and so much of that quatum as cannot be sold shall then be offered under lease to bona fide settlers of the State. A short time ago State Registrar Long offered 56,000 acres for sale. Of this amount 1520 acres were sold outright at $20 per acre and the rest was promptly leased at figures running from $40 to $570 per 640 acres. About 200 settlers took part in the bidding and most of them got a slice. Some of the land leased is said to be worth $200 per acre, but as an upset price is marked by the State appraisers on each parcel this sum was in no case reached. The appraising of the lands by sections or as the appraisers may decide, even down to single acres, was arranged for in the constitution to prevent collusion among bidders, and it seems to have had the desired effect.

PEDIGREE IN PART.

Sired by SIDNEY 2:19 1/4, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05 1/4 (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Battle dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 430, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18 1/4. Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21 1/4, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals, two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:15, first quarter in 0:40 1/4, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."

WALTER S. MABEN.

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902.

JOTTINGS.

"SWEET MARIE WILL NOT BE RACED on California or Eastern circuits this year," is the statement sent the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN by wire this week in response to an inquiry made. There has been considerable talk among horsemen here as to whether the swift daughter of McKinney would be raced over the California circuit, and whether she is eligible to start in the slow classes. There are many here who believe that her mile in 2:13½ made at a Los Angeles matinee last year while not a record, is a bar, and that it will prevent her starting in anything slower than the 2:14 class. Her mile in 2:11½, made in the third heat of a matinee race on Saturday, the 3d of last month, is neither a record nor a bar according to the new rules adopted by the National and American associations, but the mile in 2:13½ was made before that law was passed and it is said under different conditions, so that it is a question as to whether it will act as a bar or not. However, Sweet Marie's mark will in all probability not be up for consideration before any association or board this year, as her present owner, William Garland of Los Angeles, has repeatedly stated that he has no intentions or desire to race his great mare except in matinee contests, and that as long as she is his property she will not be raced for money. As Mr. Garland has been twice offered $6000 for Sweet Marie and declined the offer on both occasions, there is very little likelihood of his parting with her or of her appearing in any of the contests on the California circuit this year. This will be regretted by many who confidently believe Sweet Marie could trot to a record of 2:10 or better were she to be raced, and her appearance on any track would be a great drawing card.

Those Stockton folks are all right. They have announced a fair and race meeting this year, the latter under the auspices of the Stockton Driving Club, and they are already booming it with many-colored printed matter and all sorts of advertising. The Breeders Association having decided on a $2000 stake for 2:24 class trotters, the Stockton club has wisely concluded that a $1500 purse for pacers will be a drawing card and bring a big entry list. It was given out this week by the Stockton press that this stake would probably be for the 2:20 class. A few such stakes as The California and Raisin City at Fresno, and this stake at Stockton will bring out a lot of good horses this year and make the racing season the best this State has seen in years. It is never advisable for a fair association to announce more big purses than it can afford to give, and the plan of giving $1000 purses all through the program, as has been tried here by several district associations lately, generally ends in disaster and a deficiency for the directors to go down into their pockets to make up. The better plan is to give one or two big stakes for the classes in which there are certain to be enough entries to fill the stake well and give less money for the others. By less money I do not mean purses of less than $500, as that amount is small enough for any association having main circuit ambition to give for any class. But it makes a big difference in the expense account at a meeting in a small town whether the association pays out $200 or $400 net on a race. It can, in most instances, afford the lesser but not the larger amount.

Budd Doble purchased a stallion from Douglas Cone of Red Bluff a few days before starting East with a carload of trotters, and the probabilities are that the veteran reinsman has found a 2:10 trotter. Doble and his brother, Henry, were crossing on the ferry between San Francisco and Oakland and happened to meet Mr. Cone. The latter told Doble he had a McKinney stallion that was a sure trotter that he wanted to sell and spoke so highly of the horse that Budd promised to take a look at him if opportunity offered. After reaching the city however, and bidding good day to Mr. Cone, he thought little of the matter until Henry suggested that he had better run up to Red Bluff and look at the horse. Budd said he had heard of so many world beaters recently and looked at them only to be disappointed that he hardly thought it would pay to take the trip even though Mr. Cone had generously offered to pay railroad fare and all expenses if the stallion was not just as represented. Henry finally prevailed on his brother to go to Red Bluff with the following result: He found there a good looking bay stallion nearly 16 hands high and liked his appearance. He said he would like to drive him and the horse was hitched up and taken on the track. A scraper and clod masher had been run over the mile course that morning, but for fast work it did not present a very favorable appearance. The stretch looked pretty good, however, and Mr. Doble mounted the sulky jogged the horse a little and let him step one mile in about 2:30. He was charmed with his gait which was as regular and steady as clock work and so even that he required only the simplest of booting and no extra weighting. After the horse was cooled out he concluded to drive him the next mile in about 2:20 and if the horse was equal to it, stood willing to pay the price asked. The horse was feeling fine, and stepped to the half in 1:11, and then Doble eased on the lines a little and the third quarter was trotted in 34½ seconds. At the three-quarter pole he "clucked" to him once and he went away like a free-for-all candidate, coming the last quarter in 32½ seconds so handily that Mr. D. was afraid Cone would raise the price before he could dismount and make the trade. There are never any strings on Cone's propositions, however, and the horse is now across the mountains with the rest of the Doble string. On breeding alone this son of the mighty McKinney should be one of the gamest of the fast ones, as his dam is old Mary Lou 2:17, the chestnut mare by Tom Benton that the late John McCord of Sacramento used to campaign on the circuit here along with that other all-day trotter and own brother Shyluck 2:16½. There was another fast and game brother, the pacer Ned Winslow 2:12½. They were all out of Brown Jenny by David Hill Jr. 17,139, the next dam Old Brown Jenny by Black Hawk 767. All of this Brown Jenny family were fast, honest and game, and this son of Mary Lou should be able to race one heat or a dozen and be fighting among the leaders at the finish. He has been appropriately named Kinney Lou and if raced will be one of McKinney's new 2:15 performers before the summer is over.

At the Occidental Horse Exchange last Tuesday, auctioneer William G. Layng sold forty-six head of trotting bred horses from the Alisal and San Marcos ranches of Pierce Brothers in Santa Barbara county. Of the forty-six head, not over a dozen were broken, and as I saw the unbroken ones being knocked down at prices ranging from $40 to $127.50, I marveled at the fact that such horses were brought to the salesring and sold like cattle, as not one but would have fetched twice the amount had the auctioneer been able to announce that it was broken to drive. There were mares by Bay Rose 2:20½, Almonition 2:24, Will Tricks (own brother to Brino tricks 2:13½) Beau Brummel 2:16½, Alonzo Hayward 2:30, and other well bred stallions, some of them out of mares by Director 2:17, Anteo 2:16½ and Nutwood 2:18½. Mr. H. W. Meek of Haywards was a bidder and paid $127.50 for a bay gelding by Bay Rose out of Belle Isle by Piedmont. This gelding was a big, topky fellow, as handsome as a show ring prize winner, was seven years old and unbroken. Mr. Meek will have a $500 horse in him when he gets him gentle to drive. While but very few of the horses sold were anywhere near fashionably bred, they were as good looking as any lot of green horses I ever saw. All were in good flesh; they will make serviceable horses for the road or light express business.

On Monday next, June 2d, entries will close for the twelve harness races to be decided at the Napa fair, and the six early closing stakes of the Breeders meeting at Fresno. If there is any trainer in California who has not one or more horses to enter at both these meetings, he ought to close his stable doors and make no pretensions to train race horses. There has never been a time in California when associations were doing as much to make harness racing popular and to provide good programs for horse owners. The purses are most generous. Napa's twelve range from $500 to $800 and aggregate $6800. The Breeders give $2000 for trotters of the 2:24 class, $1000 for 2:20 class pacers, with four additional purses of $600 each. It will give a half dozen additional ranging from $600 to $1000 as soon as these stakes close. There will be seven or eight more of the district associations and the State Fair in line, but these two mentioned, the Napa association and the Breeders close first, and it is to them I want to call particular attention. Both should have big entry lists, and if such results are had, other associations that have not yet announced programs will be encouraged to be generous with purses in all classes that stand a fair chance of filling well. Napa is making special efforts to have a high class meeting this year and is making every arrangement for the accommodation of horsemen. The harness races will be held during four days of the fair and running races will not be permitted on the same days the harness horses appear, neither will bookmaking be permitted on harness races. Associations that are thus careful of the interests of harness horse owners should be patronized by them, and I hope to see Napa get a rousing entry list. It is the same with the Breeders. This is the only organization on the Pacific Coast that is devoted entirely to the interests of breeders and owners of trotting and pacing horses. Its enterprize this year in inaugurating a $2000 stake for trotters of the 2:24 class, to be called "The California," is a new departure, and one that has met the approval of everyone. If it fills well and results in a good race, which it undoubtedly will, the Breeders will very likely increase the size of the stake next year and make it one of the fixed and leading events of the California circuit each year. No horseman in California should permit Monday, June 2d, to pass without making entries in the Napa and the Breeders stakes. This is the opportune time when, if everyone will do his part and get in and help all he can, harness racing can be given a boost in California that will put it and everybody connected with it in better shape than has been the rule for years.

At the Alameda track the other day, a half dozen amateur horsemen were congregated and indulging in the customary Mount Pelee variety of conversation about their favorite animals. One, especially, was very warm in the praise of a trotter he drives and told a marvelous story about taking the horse right from pasture, hitching him to a cart and driving him a heat, without a break in it, better than 2:40. "I always thought that horse was rather rank when first taken from pasture," said a listener. "He generally is," was the reply, "but I didn't have to do a thing but talk to him all the time, and he acted quiet and steady, and never offered to break." "Well, Doc," rejoined the other, "that accounts for it. You probably had him so tired from the talk that he did not have life enough to break." The committee then rose and said they would take what the Doctor ordered.

Bert Webster, one of the best men in the horse business, who made Bonnie Direct 2:05½ and turned him over to Tom Keating ready to win the Chamber of Commerce Stake, reached here last Wednesday from Cleveland, where he had been with Chas. Griffith's string and got the top price of the Blue Ribbon sale. This string averaged $1024, the highest average for the same number of any consignment. Mr. Webster tells me it would have been higher, but when the Diablo gelding, Welchman, was unloaded from the cars at Glenville he slipped and fell with one hind leg between the car and the platform, and when he was led into the salesring that leg was as big a barrel and all skinned up. At that Welchman brought $185, but Bert says he would have sold for over a thousand had the accident not occurred, as he had shown a mile in 2:20 before leaving Pleasanton and was in good shape to show plenty of speed, which was the thing buyers at Cleveland wanted. Mr. Webster says Cleveland is the greatest horse town he has seen for a long time, and that there is not near enough speed to satisfy the demand. Buyers were there from all parts of the country ready to pay for speed that could be shown. "They don't care for a curb or a splint or a few blemishes over there," said he, "if the horse can show the right kind of a clip for a mile. The driving clubs are doing much for the horse business everywhere." Mr. Mr. Webster left for Pleasanton on Thursday and is thinking seriously of getting a string together for the California Circuit. "Purses like those are better than bigger money over East," said he, after looking over those advertised by Vallejo, Napa, Woodland, the Breeders and Ventura. "Any man that has a horse to race should not hesitate to enter in such purses, as there is good profit to be made by winning them."

A correspondent writing from Dayton, Washington, states that Thos. Ronan, of that place, who bred the mare Anzella 2:10½, has good prospects ahead in the horse line. He owns five trotting bred stallions: Antrim 5918, the sire of Anzella; Alexis, son of William L.; Arrowmax; Selwood, son of Antrim; Young Jim, another son of Antrim; Atlanta, son of Meredith, besides 150 head of good broodmares and young horses. Mr. Ronan has made some good sales lately, selling two to Dr. McLaughlin, of Dayton; two to Dr. Stewart, of Walla Walla, and three to Dr. Wilber.

If you have a trotter in training that is eligible to the 2:24 class don't fail to make an entry in the "California Stakes," $2000 guaranteed, for the P. C. T. H. B. A. meeting at Fresno. Remember entries close next Monday, June 2d.

Make your entries for the Breeders meeting at Fresno and see that they are mailed in time to be post marked not later than Monday, June 2d, which is the date of closing.

"The Raisin City Stakes," $1000 guaranteed, for 2:20 class pacers at the Fresno meeting of the P. C. T. H. B. A. closes Monday, June 2d.

Live Stock at the State Fair.

Prof. W. L. Carlyle, Prof. of Animal Industry of the University of Wisconsin, and in charge of the U. S. Live Stock Experiment Station at Madison, Wis., has been secured by the California State Agricultural Society to judge all classes of live stock at the coming State Fair.

Prof. Carlyle is an authority on live stock, with a natural reputation. The most favorable results to dairymen, cattle and other live stock breeders have resulted from his department. The saving to dairymen alone by his investigations in regard to the proper care and handling of milk is estimated at not less than $800,000 a year in Wisconsin alone.

Studies in cheese making have engaged so much attention in his department that the celebrated Wisconsin curd test was devised, with the result that wherever adopted it has secured the user almost entirely against loss, amounting in some cases to an individual saving of from $10 to $15 per day.

The investigations made by his department in swine feeding have also been of great importance, showing that a better product can be obtained by intelligent feeding, and proving that under the system adopted that the bodies of the animal fed under his system carry a higher rating of lean to fat.

The industry of feeding sheep for mutton has been greatly promoted by his department and has now grown to a large and profitable industry in his State.

Experiments on the best and most economical feeding of beef cattle to secure the best commercial returns have received considerable attention with very satisfactory results.

Live stock breeders from all over California should exhibit their stock and visit the fair, for it is seldom that they have had the chance to have their stock passed upon by so well known an authority, who will also gladly extend to visitors any information in regard to all lines of animal industry on which they may desire to have his opinion.

The Board of Directors propose encouraging the live stock exhibits on a more extended scale than heretofore given by this society. New educational features and attractions will be introduced and every dairyman, live stock raiser and farmer is invited to visit the fair. They will see the best and highest types in all classes of live stock and the latest and most progressive ideas of development pertaining to agricultural interests.

The premium list is now being carefully revised and will provide for additional classes of live stock of every description.

The poultry exhibit will be on a larger scale than ever held in California, provision being made for over one hundred and twenty-five classes of poultry.

Racing in the Far North.

Undoubtedly the racing held at Dawson on May 27th this year holds the record for contests of speed between horses nearest the North Pole. There is telegraphic communication now between Dawson and the outside world, and the following dispatch was sent out last Tuesday:

Seven thousand Americans and Canadians, from a radius of several hundred miles, congregated here and linked the Stars and Stripes with the Union Jack in honor of the late Queen Victoria's birthday. The celebration continued over two days and was a success in every way.

The big events were the horse races for the Queen's plate and the Merchants' sweepstake. Both were over a distance of a half mile. Black Alder, a well known Pacific Coast horse, won both events. Nellie Bly, brought in over the ice from Portland, was second.

In the sweepstake Alder won by a nose. Time, 48½ seconds.

In the plate Alder was ridden by Bert Collyer, a newspaper correspondent, and carried 116 pounds. Bly, Shay, 112. Bly was the favorite. It is estimated that $20,000 changed hands. The pony race, twelve entries, was won by Little Jean, Collyer up.

The Two Year Old Futurity.

As shown by the conditions given on another page of this issue, a payment of $25 must be made June 1, 1902, on each two year old (trotter or pacer) expecting to start in the two year old divisions of Kentucky's Futurity for foals of 1900, which is guaranteed to be worth $20,000. Of this amount, $5000 is allotted to two year old trotters and $1000 to two year old pacers, to be divided as follows:

Trotters—$3000 to first, $1000 to second, $500 to third, $200 to fourth and $150 to nominator of dam of first, $75 to nominator of dam of second, $50 to nominator of dam of third and $25 to nominator of dam of fourth horse.

Pacers—$500 to first, $250 to second, $150 to third, $100 to fourth.

Los Angeles News.

Los Angeles horsemen and trainers have no longer cause to complain of the condition of the Agricultural Park track, say the Herald of last Saturday. The pump again is in operation and plenty of water already has had the effect of improving the track considerably, besides restoring the trainers to a normal frame of mind. They are able to train their charges with safety, which was impossible during the water famine incident to the breaking of the pump.

Many fine prospects are being worked each day by the trainers at the local track. William Durfee has a good prospect in his eighteen months old colt, Electro Mac by McKinney out of a dam by Electricity. This colt stepped a quarter yesterday morning in 35½ seconds. G. W. Ford of Santa Ana has several colts sired by the stallion Neerout in training at the local track, which he believes will make a good showing on the California circuit this season. Mr. Ford prefers the Los Angeles track to the Santa Ana race course for training his fast ones.

S. E. Kent has a number of good prospects in training for the California circuit.

I. C. Mosher, the veteran horse trainer and owner of Oregon, who has been in Los Angeles during the winter months, has taken up a permanent residence in Los Angeles, having purchased recently a handsome residence. Mr. Mosher brought with him from the North his stallion, Cour de Leon 2:19, by Dexter Bradford. This stallion held the Pacific Coast record as a two and three year old, distancing a large field of older horses over the kite-shaped track in Washington several years ago. Mr. Mosher also brought the pacing mare, Scappoose 2:13, sired by the one-time champion pacer, Roy Wilkes 2:06. Four or five two and three year olds, sired by Cour de Leon, out of standard-bred mares also are to be found in his stables.

Joe Desmond has sold his sorrel two year old by Monterey 2:09, to a Chicago party. This grand colt will go East soon in charge of Charles Clark, who trains Graham Babcock's horses.

McKinney's greatest son, Zombro 2:11, will be shipped to Portland, Ore., June 1, by his owner, Mr. Beckers, where he will be placed in the stud.

Isaac M. Lipson is preparing at the local track two fast pacers for the California circuit. One is Egletry, a brown mare by Ketcham, and the other, Beaumont, a bay stallion by Bob Mason, son of Echo. Both horses should make a good showing this season.

C. F. Bunch of San Jose, will race his four year old trotter, Thomas R. by Iran Alto, at the fall meeting in Los Angeles. Mr. Bunch gave his speedy trotter his mark of 2:15 on the Los Angeles track.

Zolock, by McKinney out of Gazelle, will not be raced this year. His owner, Ben Davies of San Bernardino, has withdrawn the fast pacer from all stakes, owing to a death in his family.

American Horses Abroad.

Reports from abroad show that American horse flesh is rapidly growing in demand in foreign markets. During the last six years Great Britain alone spent $35,000,000 in the United States in the purchase of horses, independent of the $600,000,000 which she spent for mules. Last year not less than 75,000 horses were shipped from this country to England.

Until 1895 the exportation of horses was not an important item in our foreign commerce, but since then it has grown into something enormous, and Great Britain is only one of the many foreign countries whose recognition of the superiority of American horse flesh is substantially attested by large purchases. During the last six years our shipment of horses to other countries have been as follows: South Africa, 37,465; Great Britain, 22,608; Canada, 8,438; Cuba, 4,436; China, 2,317; Philippines, 1,578; Japan, 1,535; British Columbia, 795; British West Indies 199, and others scattering.

Germany, France, Russia and Austria are likewise included among the number of foreign purchasers of American horse flesh, but they have just commenced to make purchases and have only invested up to this time in trotters. They have been charmed with the graceful movement as well as the rapid speed of our American horses, and the small purchases which they have so far made may prove the entering wedge to larger ones.

Generous Purses for Fall Races.

Large purses will be offered by the Los Angeles District Agricultural association for its fall meet this year. Two $1000 purses, one for a free-for-all pace and the other for a free-for-all trot will be hung up, and several $700 purses also will be offered in the interests of light harness racing. The purses for the running events will be generous.

Freeman G. Teed, secretary of the association, now is at Elsinore Springs for a short stay. Before going to the springs he announced that upon his return he would issue the programs for the meeting.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

The annual meeting of the members of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will be held at the office of the Association, 36 Geary street, San Francisco, on Monday, June 9th, 1902, at 8 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors for the ensuing year, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting. In the interest of the Association it is greatly to be desired that a quorum be present at this meeting.

E. P. HEALD, Pres. F. W. KELLEY, Sec'y.

Membership in the P. C. T. H. B. A.

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association gives harness races exclusively. It is an association of owners of harness horses. It is not organized for profit, but to promote harness racing. It declares no dividends, but when it makes money at a race meeting it hangs it up in purses and added money to stakes to be given at its next meeting. It has disbursed over $125,000 in purses and stakes for harness races since its organization. It receives no State aid, but one of its by-laws require that owners of horses entered be members of the association. The membership fee is $25, which includes the annual dues for the year of joining.

If you want to enter in the races closing June 2d for the Fresno meeting of the association and are not already a member, send in your entry blank with notice that you wish to join the association and your entry will be accepted.

A Few Words from Vance Nuckols.

CLEVELAND, O., May 17, 1902.

MR. EDITOR—I will try to tell you how the California horses looked to us here at our Cleveland sale. The sale is just finished and was a success in every way, which I believe was mostly due to that king of all hustlers, Mr. Ed A. Tipton. The Palo Altos looked well, and from the pleased expression of Mr. Frank Covey's face I think the prices were satisfactory to him, which he told me were 40% better than they were last year. Mr. Griffith's horses, in charge of their trainer, Bert Webster, showed and had speed to burn and sold well. Our friend, Sandy Smith, I think had the best looking lot of horses that I ever saw collected in one bunch. They were all in extra good flesh, knew their lessons well, staid on a trot and went good gaited, and it looked to me as if Mr. Spreckels had just the right man in the right place. Mr. Spreckels was here himself. I believe his first visit to Cleveland, said he was well passed with the sale, thought our track and surroundings were of the best. Millard Sanders arrived a few days ago with his handsome wife and boy, and from the looks of the boy I think he is getting his bread buttered on both sides. Dollie Dillon seemed much improved on the last year's form, the rest of his stable are in excellent shape, and if they can race half as good as they look they ought to win him a trunk full of money for him to spend next winter.

VANCE NUCKOLS.

Decoration Day Matinee.

There promises to be an immense crowd at the Oakland track this Friday afternoon when the first race of the matinee program provided by the Golden Gate Park Driving Association is called. Four races are on the card, as follows:

First race, 2:40 class—Walter Wilkes, Lady Larsen, Joe Bonney, Cuba and Bondy C.

Second race, 2:30 class—A. B. P., Velma, Dan Alden, Clara, Echora Wilkes and Wave.

Third race, 2:20 class—Dody Gray, Cicero, Della McCarthy, Miss Gomet and Alsandy.

Fourth race, free-for-all—Orilla J., Mack, Imp, Sable Le Grande, Steve S., and Puerto Rico.

These horses are all very evenly matched and a good contest is expected in every race. The first race will be called promptly at 1:30.

Heading for Napa.

Hans Frellson has concluded to move his string of fourteen trotters and pacers from Pleasanton to Napa. The Napa track is attracting the attention of trainers from all parts of the State, owing to its fine condition for working horses. Lessee Arthur Brown is making it a very agreeable and pleasant place for horsemen. There must be at least fifty horses stabled at the Napa track and more are going there within the next few weeks.

When an unbroken seven year old gelding sells for $127.50 at auction the market for harness horses may be said to be good.

Jackson's Napa Soda untangles the feet.

Good Prospects at Denver.

"The California owners will not have the good time at Overland this year to which they have been accustomed," writes the correspondent of the Chicago Horseman. "In past years the strings that came over the Sierras claimed everything before the start, and usually made good after the judges had watched the noses slip under the wire. This year the quality of the home horses is above that of any other, assuring the far Western gentlemen of a race every time there is a start. Among the Californians who have already sent in their entries are James Wallace, with Glideaway, a Saraway colt that has shown speed for two years, but has avoided being marked, and a number of young ones; W. G. Durfee, with a string of young horses; Charles Clark, with Toggles, a green pacer named Estabella and some young ones. Salt Lake will be represented by Ed Johnson, who will have the trotter Emma Foote. J. Wildig, C. E. Luce and F. K. Wilson are also coming over from the Mormon capital.

The horses at Overland are beginning to get down into the short figures in their work. Last Saturday Agnes Lee May, who is the apple of Ed Gaylord's eye, made the fastest mile that has been driven in Colorado this year. She paced in 2:13½, going so easily and so prettily that her owner is sure she is the coming horse. Her mark is 2:17½, so that she is eligible to some of the slower of the fast classes, but she is not likely to start in many races. Mr. Gaylord holds her for his own individual use. Though she will not be raced, she will be sent against the wagon record. Last fall at Memphis, Mr. Gaylord gave her a trial half-mile in one minute. He is sure she can go the full mile at the same speed. He handles her himself in all her training and will hold the reins whenever she starts.

Mr. Gaylord intends to invade the Eastern races this year with a stable of seven performers, leading the lot being the game little trotter Yarrum. The horse was named for Murray Howe, now secretary of the Memphis track, and has a mark of 2:19½. His owner is certain that the little brown horse can shade 2:10. Up to date the little horse has had some unfortunate accident near the opening of each racing season. He is to be campaigned this year to get a good mark, if he can escape the hoodoo that has followed him through his career. There is no disposition to blame his hard luck upon the name that was chosen for him. In Mr. Gaylord's stable are seven horses, each of which has either a record of under 2:20, or has been sent a mile at or under that mark in a trial.

Charley Mac 2:11½; Leigh Crawford, a four year old green trotter, sired by Charles Derby, dam Abanteo, by Anteo, and Frank Dale, a four year old trotter, by Charles Derby, dam Pippo, by Stiletto. Dale secured a mark of 2:30½, at the Overland meeting last summer, winning the first heat in the three year old trot. As his driver, John Blue, was turning him about after winning the heat, some one raised an umbrella directly in front of him. The horse reared and fell over backward, striking his temple on a post of the fence. For a time he was unconscious, and the large crowd thought he was dead. With difficulty he was revived and taken to the stable. Though he recovered in the course of a week or two he was not again raced last summer.

Confianza, a three year old trotter, secured a mark of 2:41½, as a two year old at Overland last year. She is by James Madison out of a dam by Steinway, and is expected to show the trotters miles in about 2:15 before the season is very old.

George E. Bennett is an immense green pacer by Alex Button, and is known as "the Honolulu horse." Early in the spring he developed a soreness of his muscles that threatened to put him out of the game for the year. When Dave Rabould took charge of the Gaylord stable there was already an order out to have Bennett turned to pasture. Rabould refused to recognize the order, used a liniment he had upon the sore muscles and now the big fellow is going sound and fast."

No Heat Betting at Brighton Beach.

Secretary C. A. McCully, of the New York Trotting Association, last year introduced the innovation of sending horses to the stable that did not win a heat in three. It is now reported that instead of permitting books to be made on the heats at this year's Brighton Beach meeting, there is a strong probability of allowing only betting on the results of a race. In addition to having a tendency to lessen the "laying-up of heats evil," this plan will also give the small bettors an opportunity of playing their favorite.

This plan has been agitated very frequently, and many of our best horsemen have been quoted as being in favor of the same, and if it is given a trial at the Brighton Beach meeting, the result will be watched with much interest. — American Sportsman.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—I send you a picture of my fine bay mare Lady Keating (Vol. XVI.) by Stam B. 2:11½ and suckling bay colt, left front and left hind foot white. He is Lady Keating's first foal, and Lady Keating is the first mare by Stam B. 2:11½ to foal a colt. His sire is Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, sire of the world's champion trotter, John A. McKerron 2:06½ to wagon. Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ is by Guy Wilkes 2:15½, sire of Fred Kohl 2:07½. The colt's dam, Lady Keating, is by Stam B., four year's record 2:11½; he by Stamboul 2:07½, the handsomest stallion in the world, that sold for fifty-four thousand dollars. Lady Keating's dam is Abbie Woodnut, the dam of Diawood 2:11 and Abdine 2:17 by Woodnut 2:16½, sire of Baywood 2:10½. Woodnut 2:16½ is a full brother to Mannette, the dam of Arion (2) 2:10½, (4) 2:07½, that sold to Mr. Forbes for one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. He sired Nico 2:08½. Guy Wilkes' full brother

Wm. L. sired Axtell (3) 2:12, that sold for one hundred and five thousand dollars. This colt has the blood of three greatest stallions of their day—Guy Wilkes 2:15½, Stamboul 2:07½, Woodnut 2:16½; these three stallions sired speed. For this royally bred fellow I claim the name of J. O'Kane.

Yours truly,

MRS. E. W. CALLENDINE.

Rules for Breeding Mares.

The following rules, suggested by Prof. Cossar Ewart, of Scotland, who has made the subject a matter of thorough study, are worthy of the consideration not only of stallioners, but of every farmer who is interested in getting a large per cent of colts, and should be incorporated in the handbills posted by keepers of stallions and be made a matter of contract between him and the farmer:

1. Mares which have been indoors during the winter, and which are to run at grass during the summer, should be acclimated to the change before being served. This is well understood by horsemen, who generally follow the above suggestion, which provides for the mares getting accustomed to the changes in food, temperature and surroundings. It is well known by all practical horsemen that digestive troubles are quite serious in their effects on the pregnant female.

2. When any signs of being in season are detected in the mare she should be removed from mares believed to be already in foal.

3. Mares, more especially excitable ones, should be served in the evening and kept shut up apart from other mares or geldings over night, and should, until all signs of heat have disappeared, be kept from any chance of teasing by other horses. In the case of valuable mares, it would pay the breeder to retain a competent veterinarian to tide over the excitable periods, when a calumet, both constitutional (such as chloral or opium) and uterine (as black haw), might with benefit be prescribed.

4. Each mare, when bred, should be carefully watched from week to week, and every ninth or tenth day be tried until the critical period (end of the seventh week) be passed.

5. Mares in poor condition should not be bred, but be gotten into condition by the addition of grain to the daily ration.

6. For at least two months after service the mares should be neither excited, overheated nor chilled, neither overfed nor stinted from their usual allowance, and any drugging, except under professional advice, should be at all times sternly deprecated.

Millard Sanders' String at Cleveland.

The Cleveland correspondent of the Chicago Horse Review writes as follows about Millard Sanders' string when it reached the Glenville track: "Millard Sanders arrived from California with the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's stable Friday, May 9th. The horses shipped through without accident or sickness and all look ready for the races right now. Sir Albert S. 2:08½, California's 1901 pacing sensation, has had many callers since his arrival. He could scarcely be accounted a handsome horse, but has splendid legs, a stout conformation and an oily way of going. He worked a mile in 2:14 before leaving home and stepped the last quarter in 30½ seconds. Millard is well pleased with him as are the others who have seen him race and work. Dolly Dillon 2:07 would scarcely be recognized by those who saw her last fall. She has filled out greatly and certainly looks good. She stepped a mile in 2:14, last quarter in 31 seconds, before leaving home. I would not be surprised to see her get a mark of 2:05 this season. Anzella 2:10½ was added to the stable the past winter. She is an exceedingly handsome mare, wears light shoes and quarter boots only. Her fastest work this season was a mile in 2:13½. Bonsilene 2:14 is another impressive mare and has been a mile in 2:14 this spring. Nora McKinney 2:17 is also a recent addition to Sanders' string. She is pronounced one of the handsomest of the get of her celebrated sire and has a great turn of speed besides, and has stepped several miles around 2:14 this spring. B. S. Dillon 2:25, the pacing member of the stable, was entered in last week's sale but showed so well before leaving home that Sanders withdrew him and will try to secure him an entry in the Chamber of Commerce purse at Detroit. He is by Sidney Dillon, dam the great broodmare Biscari, by Director 2:17. Lou Dillon, a four year old by Sidney Dillon out of a mare by Milton Medium, paced a mile in 2:14½, last quarter in 31 seconds, before leaving home, but will not be raced this year. Bavard, a three year old by Directum, dam by Director, is entered in the Hartford and Kentucky Futurities and in the three year old stake at Oakley Park. This youngster worked a mile in 2:24½ before coming East. The Santa Rosa stable is one of the strongest that has been brought from the Coast since the palmy days of Monroe Salisbury."

A Muscular, Active Horse.

There is now and always will be a good demand at paying prices for the active, muscular horse of power and endurance. It matters not what breed he is, if he possesses these properties, with style and good personal appearance, he is in demand. The horse for this age of business and pleasure must be a business horse. There is no room for the laggard; a stupid loafer is just as detestable in a good feeling animal; he must be a wide-awake, stylish, active, good feeling animal; he must be a horse that moves off with spirit and energy; a horse with a business air and appearance that at once is attractive and pleasing to the eye. The broken down, overworked condition in the horse comes soon enough, and is an evidence of decline and inability in the animal to do his best. This condition greatly lessens the selling value of the horse. It matters not whether it is the draft horse, the coach horse, the saddle horse, the driving horse or the common plug used for delivery and all purpose work, the demand is for the sound, muscular, active animal of endurance. It therefore behooves the breeders and raisers of horses to discriminate closely in quality of the progeny of the horse stock on the farm, and raise nothing but the very best of whatever variety is selected. It will not pay to raise weaklings and hot-house colts.

A Standard Remedy.

Many articles offered for sale to-day will have a short-lived success. This also may be said of many proprietary medicines. Many patent nostrums endeavor, by the aid that powerful agency, advertising, to pose as remedies until time has demonstrated their worthlessness. Time lays away in oblivion every year hundreds of cure-alls which at their birth seemed big with promise. When the work is done, it is effectually done. The field is cleared. Shams are suppressed and buried; the meritorious survive, and they stand out with all the greater prominence like truth in falling error.

The above line of thought, as suggested and naturally given a turn in the direction of veterinary matters by the reappearance in our columns of the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure. It is upwards of a quarter of a century now, possibly thirty years, since the writer, as a boy, recalls having seen the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure painted on his father's stable door in Western Pennsylvania. It was then, as it is to-day, the one approved horse remedy in that region, and year by year it has widened its influence and gone with the horse to the settling up of every part of this country and to many foreign parts. This has only been possible because of its intrinsic worth. The Spavin Cure was not originally quickly prepared and hurriedly advertised for immediate gain. Dr. Kendall made a study of the horse. He knew its ailments. And the preparation grew out of his knowledge of the horse's needs. It embodied what was known to be valuable for the treatment of the many injuries and ailments to which the horse is liable. Probably at first the commercial spirit had no consideration in its preparation. If such is true it argues for the good of the remedy. It is purely an article of merit and has the better stood the test of time. Certain it is that Kendall's Spavin Cure has witnessed the rise and fall of hundreds of horse remedies, while it still stands the standard remedy of its kind. Its properties are peculiarly adapted to the cure of so great a number of horse injuries and diseases that the bottles marked Kendall's Spavin Cure have rightfully found their way into nearly every stable in the land. It is equally effective for inflammation, bruises and soreness of any kind in the human body. Ask your druggist for Kendall's Spavin Cure, or write the Dr. H. J. Kendall Co., Enosburg Falls, Vt., to-day for your book on The Horse and His Diseases. They send it free if you mention this paper.

There are purses for all classes of pacers offered by the Napa association. The purses are six in number and for $500 each. The Napa association always pays its purses, promptly and in full, and will hold one of the best meetings on the circuit.

Canadian horsemen are confident that Harold H. 2:04 will reduce his record several notches this year. He is owned by J. S. Swarts, of Wingham, and driven by Al Proctor. Harold H. has started twenty-seven times and won twenty-three first moneys.

Beau Ideal by Dare Devil stepped a mile recently at Memphis in 2:23½, and it is said that Geers thinks him a sure-enough 2:12 trotter. Another of the get of Dare Devil, the four year old mare Nonpareil, worked a mile for Geers in 2:20½, last half in 1.07½.

The California—$2000 for trotters eligible to the 2:24 class—is worth winning, as the winner will get a thousand dollars, quite a sum for a green trotter to earn. Entries for this race close Monday next, June 2d. It will be trotted at the Breeders meeting at Fresno this year. Don't fail to have an entry if you own a trotter that is eligible and will be able to beat 2:20.

Belle, the dam of Gaff Topsail 2:16, has foaled a filly by Sidmoor that measured 43 inches in height the day it was foaled. Mr. Ott, of Pacheco, the owner of Sidmoor, was so pleased with the filly that he purchased it and has leased Belle for another year to breed to his horse. Belle is by Alcona out of a mare by Jim Lick, next dam a thoroughbred mare by Billy Cheatham.

Sam Casto has a two year old by Captain Jones, son of McKinney, that he calls Gee Whiz and says the name fits him like a glove. The colt is a trotter and a regular flyer. Captain Jones will have a number of fast ones in the list before the northern circuit ends. Lady Jones, a two year old filly by him, owned by John Pender, stepped an eighth in 16 seconds at Salem recently in her third workout.

Gaff Topsail 2:16, has served 36 mares this year and has now been put in training at the Vallejo track for the California circuit races. A two year old filly by him owned by Ed Kavanagh, who is also the owner of Gaff Topsail, is one of the best young prospects in Solano county. Mr. Kavanagh will probably start this filly in the district stakes for two year olds at the Vallejo and Napa fairs this year.

Frank Dulmaine, one of the most popular citizens of Grass Valley, has recently been appointed a director of the Nevada county agricultural district and is enthusiastically in favor of a big fair and race meeting being held at the Glenbrook track this year. Mr. Dulmaine will make a valuable member of the board, as he is actively energetic in everything that pertains to the progress of his home county.

The Memphis management has decided to open five important stakes on July 1st. Turfmen will thus have full opportunity to size their horses up before making their entries—an innovation that has been frequently discussed. All of the winter closing trotting and pacing stakes filled to their projectors' satisfaction and it is certain this move on the part of the Memphis association will prove successful in every way.

John W. Slaven, administrator of the estate of the late Thos. E. Keating, has filed his final account in the Probate Court of Alameda county. Of a total of $7545.72 received there has been paid out for claims against the estate the sum of $5182.60, leaving a balance of $2363.12 to be distributed to the legatees. The estate is less than the aggregate of the bequests made so the devisees will be compelled to accept pro rata legacies.

The Contra Costa Driving Club is the title of a corporation that has been formed for the purpose of purchasing land at Concord on which to build a race track and fair grounds. Five directors are provided for and the following have been chosen for the first year: Wm. S. Wells, Martinez; F. W. Foskett, Concord; P. J. Horgan, Concord; W. S. Burpee, Walnut Creek; Geo. A. Wiley, Martinez. The capital stock of the corporation is $10,000, divided into 2000 shares of the par value of $5 each.

Mr. Y. Malarin of this city purchased last week from H. P. Brown of Salinas, a seven year old gelding by Diablo 2:09½ out of a Prompter mare that has the speed to give the dust to some of the best on the speedway in Golden Gate Park. The gelding is an ideal roadster and is afraid of nothing, and has shown a trial of 2:18 pacing.

Clancy Brothers of Seattle, Washington, have purchased the McKinney gelding, Cornelius D., that was raced on the California circuit last year and are entering him through the North Pacific Coast circuit in the slow trotting classes. He was a speedy horse last year but rather unfortunate. In five starts he was second three times, once third and once fourth.

Henry Titer's good luck in purchasing horses at the auction held by his employer, J. Malcolm Forbes, continues to be good. Last fall he paid $310 for a yearling by Arion, dam Mrs. Jack by Athanio. Recently, at the Readville track, this colt astonished many of the trainers there by stepping an eighth in 17 seconds to cart, which was the more remarkable as the colt had been turned out all winter and was harnessed for the first time this year only two weeks previous to this performance. The colt's name is Heron, and is well engaged in the futurities.

"Det Bigelow made a purchase last week," says the Woodland Mail, "which he considers a very good one. He bought a four year old Diablo mare from her owner, a man living at Rio Vista, for $1000. Mr. Bigelow has been training the mare on the Woodland track for the past few weeks, and though she is hardly broken yet, she has shown some remarkable bursts of speed. The other day she did a mile in 2:16½, finishing the last half in 1:06 and the quarter in 0:32½, showing a 2:10 gait. The mare's breeding on her dam's side is not known by our informant. Wm. Murray says that the mare is worth $3000."

Among those consigned to the Blue Ribbon sale from Palo Alto that contracted distemper and had to be withdrawn from the sale was Princess Elden, full sister to the great mare Eleata, and a greater prospect than the M. & M. winner at the same age. She was withdrawn from the sale and sent back to California with five others that were suffering from the disease. Her withdrawal lowered the average of the Palo Alto lot, which, while 40 per cent higher than last year, would have been still higher had Princess Elden been sold, as she was one of the choice ones of the consignment.

Mercury 2:25½, bay gelding foaled 1895, by McKinney out of Tempest by Sultan, was one of the high priced ones sold at the Blue Ribbon sale at Cleveland. He brought $2000 and was purchased by G. M. Schneider of Columbus, Ohio. Mercury is a big, sixteen hand horse of good habits and fine disposition and took his record over a half mile track. He has never been raced on a mile track and is expected to get into the 2:15 list this year. His second dam is Belle Mason, a thoroughbred mare by Williamson's Belmont that won races at two mile heats, and produced Bob Mason, sire of Waldo J. 2:08 and Fred Mason 2:10.

A green trotter that can go through the main California circuit and win will be able to earn quite a pile of money this year. At San Jose there are $500 purses for the 2:40 and 2:25 classes; at Vallejo $700 for the 2:30 and $600 for the 2:24 classes; at Napa $800 for the 2:40, $700 for the 2:30 and $600 for the 2:24 classes; at Woodland $750 for the 2:30 class, at the Breeders meeting at Fresno $2000 for the 2:24 class and $600 for the 2:40. There are programs yet to be announced by the State Fair, Stockton, Bakersfield and Los Angeles, which will contain purses for the green class trotters, ranging from $700 to $1000 each. A trotter that can win one race a week on this circuit in the slow classes will be able to place about $4000 net to his owner's credit at the end of the season. The Southern Coast Circuit and the Northern California Circuit also offer good purses for this class.

J. M. Nelson went East last week with a string of trotters and pacers. His car was destined for Minneapolis and he will probably race through the Mississippi valley circuit. The best horse in his string probably is Dan W. 2:17½. This gelding is much stronger and heavier than he was last year and should be a good horse in his class in almost any country. A full brother to that fast trotter Clay S. 2:13½, which Mr. Nelson has been handling a few months, is a likely trotter and a mark of 2:20 or better should be within his reach. The mare Princess Airlie and a young stallion by Alexis are both trotters of considerable promise and will be entered in the green classes. In the car with Nelson's horses were Sola 2:14½ and China Maid, a green pacer, both by McKinney. They were sent East with Nelson and may be raced by him. Ho Yow, the Chinese Consul at San Francisco, recently transferred the possession of these mares to Mr. Stearns, of this city.

Diablo 2:09½ will get a new 2:15 performer this year in the big chestnut gelding Imp, owned by the well-known insurance man, Mr. C. E. Parks of this city. Like the majority of the Diablos, Imp is improving with age and gives every promise of being quite a race horse. Unlike the majority of the Diablo tribe he is a long-legged fellow, and heretofore has been a little rough gaited, but he has steadied down and is now quite a smooth article. Last Sunday Mr. Parks gave him three heats over the Alameda track, the first in 2:20, the second in 2:17½, last half in 1:07, and the horse was pacing at his own will, not being urged in the least. Imp took a record of 2:19½ at Vallejo last year, and it is not out of reason to expect him to reach 2:14 or better this season. Mr. Parks uses him as a business horse in his buggy the most of the time, racing him at the driving club matinees and giving him occasional workouts as opportunity offers. Imp is as game as a pebble but is usually a little too anxious, a fault he is getting over however.

A LOS ANGELES PAPER denies that there is a movement to organize a jockey club in that city to give two months' racing during the winter.

SWEET MARIE, matinee record 2:11½, will not be raced on the circuit this year. Her owner, William Garland, states that he will only race her in matinees.

ENTRIES for the Burlingame Horse Show number 175 and the affair which opens Friday, May 30th, and lasts two days, promises to be a great success. The thoroughbred, harness and hackney stallion classes are to be judged Saturday morning.

SALINAS will give a good meeting this year during the week from August 20th to 23d inclusive. There are eight purses ranging from $300 to $500 already advertised. Entries close July 1st. Look over the advertisement of this meeting. Salinas is one of the most pleasant places in the State to race.

CHAS. F. PRICE has resigned his position as General Manager and Secretary of the California Jockey Club. Mr. Price's relations with the club have been most pleasant and his resignation was tendered only because he desired to remain in the East in another position. He is at present presiding judge at Latonia.

THE GREATEST BARGAIN offered breeders in years is the mare Bob, or Lady Ophir as she is called, the dam of Klamath 2:07½, and two more in the list. She can be purchased for a song, and it is not the price of a Patti or a Melba song either. Write to Charles A. Durfee, 8 Magnolia avenue, San Jose, about it.

SECRETARY CAMPBELL, of Oakley Park, sends us a list of entries to the rich stakes offered by his association for the Grand Circuit meeting. All filled with large lists with the exception of the 2:09 pace, which has been declared off. A 2:09 class pace will be opened, however, later on. The prospects are excellent for a great meeting at Oakley this year.

GOLDEN GATE PARK DRIVING CLUB will hold its annual matinee at the Oakland track to-day. There are four races in addition to the cup race and a very large crowd will be in attendance to witness the contests. The club's races are always popular, and while as a general thing few high class horses are raced, the contests are usually close and create much enthusiasm.

VENTURA offers two $1000 purses for free-for-all trotters and pacers. These are larger purses than any association in California has offered this year for the same classes. The meeting will open August 6th. Entries close July 1st. There are eight more purses of $500 each, for trotters and pacers; five for runners of $200 and two for $250. Read the advertisement.

SANTA BARBARA will hold its annual fair and race meeting this year from August 12th to 15th. There are six purses of $250 each for harness horses, equally divided between the trotters and pacers. A good program of running events is also announced. The complete list of purses offered will be found in our advertising columns to-day. Entries close July 1st. Send them to Secretary Brastow, Santa Barbara.

HON. JESSE D. CARR will sell all his standard bred horses at auction the 26th of next month. The sale is to be held at the salesyard corner Market and Van Ness avenue, between the 20th and 30th of June. There are about forty broodmares in the consignment that are well bred and excellent individuals. This is the time to secure mares of this character, as they will be very scarce for several years to come. The yearlings, two and three year olds are great prospects. Catalogues will be issued.

MR. C. A. HARRISON, proprietor of the Hotel Rosslyn of Los Angeles, is in San Francisco this week on a flying visit and his time is occupied in shaking hands with his hosts of friends. Mr. Harrison is a most enthusiastic lover of the harness horse and always owns a few good ones. He says he has a very strong desire to win The California $2000 stake at the Breeders meeting this year with his black horse, Printers Ink. If there is anything in a name Mr. Harrison's horse will be "in the money" sure.

THE SALE OF HORSES from Pierce Brothers' Santa Barbara farms, which took place at the Occidental Horse Exchange, last Tuesday, was largely attended and good prices were obtained. Although there were but very few horses among them that had ever worn harness, the average was about $68, showing that the market here is good just now. There were many compliments paid Mr. Layng on the improvements he has made in fitting up his mart for the sale of horses and other live stock. The accommodations are first class.

SANTA ROSA STOCK FARM, where Dolly Dillon 2:07 and many other fast ones were bred, will hold a sale of standard bred horses at the Occidental Horse Exchange on Tuesday, June 17th. These horses are all in fine shape and are the best bred and finest looking lot that have been consigned to auction in this State for a long time. There are stallions, mares, colts and fillies by Diablo 2:09½, McKinney 2:11½, Sidney Dillon, Director 2:17, Direct 2:05½, Boodle 2:12½ and other great sires out of some of the best bred mares in California. Here is an opportunity to get the very best at your own price.

THE LAST CHANCE to enter in a colt stake this year is offered by the California State Agricultural Society, which closes the Stanford Stake on June 1st. It is for foals of last year (1901), and will be trotted at the State Fair in 1904. The entrance fee to this stake is $50 and $300 is added to the stake by the society. Entries close June 1st, at which time the small sum of $5 only must be paid. This stake is growing in value each year and promises being a very rich one in 1904 so that breeders and owners can hardly afford to be out of it. The way to win is to enter first, and the best way to add value to a colt or filly is to name it in good stakes like this one. A new feature in connection with the Stanford Stake is that a special stake will be opened in 1904 for colts and fillies originally entered that develop a pacing gait. If you have a trotting bred foal of last year enter it in the Stanford on June 1st. It will pay.

BOW BELLS IS DEAD, and the wonderful family of Electioneer-Beautiful Bells has lost a shining member. He was foaled in 1887 at Palo Alto Stock Farm, took his record of 2:19½ in 1892, and has been in the stud since. His list of standard performers contains the names of sixteen trotters and nine pacers, and his fastest are Matin Bells 2:06½, Billy Andrews 2:06½, Bellewood A. 2:07½, Bel Esprit 2:12½, Ringing Bells 2:13½, Janie T. 2:14 and Boreal 2:15½, sire of the great Boralma 2:07. Bow Bells was owned by the late Marcus Daly for several years and at his death was sold at auction in New York. He brought $5100 and was purchased by Mr. Samuel McMillan, of New York, who sold a half interest in him the following day to Andy Welch and John Madden for $5000. The death of Bow Bells is a great loss to the breeding interests. He was one of the best of the greatest family of trotting sires ever produced. He was a powerfully built stallion, standing 16.1½ hands, was of very handsome conformation and imparted these qualities to his get. During the three years he was at the Bitter Root Farm he was bred to many very choice mares and has doubtless left progeny that will add greatly to his already brilliant reputation. The cause of his death was the bursting of a pulmonary blood vessel.

DR. SEWARD WEBB, the New York multi-millionaire, made a success of his California saddle horse scheme inaugurated a short time ago in Santa Barbara county, this State. On his farm there he began the education of a number of horses for use as saddle animals. They were mostly by trotting bred stallions out of ordinary mares, many of the latter being descendants from the mustang stock of early California. Dr. Webb selected animals of proper size and conformation for the purpose for which they were intended and were nearly all broken when he purchased them. After some education by a young woman rider, who taught them to jump, they were sent to Dr. Webb's farm at Shelbourne, Vermont, for the finishing touches of their education. The horses, when led into the salesring at New York last Tuesday, were all sound, good mannered, broken to ride and to drive single and double, and were what one might call finished saddle horses for park use. There were sixteen head in the consignment and they brought a total of $14,485, an average of $905 each. The highest price paid for any one horse was $1600. It was the education of these horses that brought the price and while there was in all probability little profit made, the prices show that there is a demand in New York at good prices for horses that are fitted for park and city use.

THE CALIFORNIA CIRCUIT FOR 1902 is assuming proportions that will place it among the leading circuits of the United States this year and make it stand second to none but the Grand Circuit. Over one hundred thousand dollars in purses and stakes will be hung up for harness horses and if all the smaller district programs are counted, the sum will exceed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Purses on the main circuit will not be less than $500 and from that up to $2000 is offered for one race. There is no State in the Union where as much money will be given for harness races this year, if we except the big Grand Circuit cities, as will be given right here in California. An Eastern horse owner stated in the writer's presence this week, that programs like those offered at Napa, Vallejo, Woodland and the Breeders meeting, if duplicated in any State east of the Mississippi, would attract a tremendous entry list. Horses that can trot in 2:12 and pacers that win heats several seconds better than 2:10 are raced all over the East for purses of from $300 to $500. The Great Western Circuit, which looks big from here, and which will be raced over by several California trainers, does not compare with the California circuit as to the size of purses. At Davenport, Iowa, one of the principal places on that circuit, there is no purse over $500. At Joliet, Illinois, another place on this circuit, $600 is the biggest purse; there are two of them, one for 2:10 trotters, the other for pacers of the 2:05 class. It is the same all through the Mississippi Valley. $500 purses are about the best that any of the associations there hang up. California is a pretty good place for horsemen. The only trouble here is that the associations are a little slow in making announcements. However, they may get a faster move on in the future.

Kentucky's Futurity for Three Year Olds.

The conditions governing Kentucky's Futurity $20,000 for foals of 1899, (3 year olds now), show a payment of $50 due on June 1st, 1902. Of the above amount $6000 was won by the two year olds that trotted and paced for it during the October, 1901, meeting. The remaining $14,000 will be trotted for during the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association's great ten-day meeting, October 7 to 18th next, and will be divided: $10,000 to first horse; $2000 to second; $1000 to third horse; $500 to fourth horse; $300 to nominator of dam of winner; $100 to nominator of dam of second; $75 to nominator of dam of third; and $25 to nominator of dam of fourth horse.

Inferna 2:24½, one of the best bred young stallions in America, will be sold at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm sale, June 17th, at the Occidental Horse Exchange, in this city. He is by Diablo 2:09½, dam Biscari (dam of Stambold 2:18½ and three more in the list) by Director, second dam Biscari (dam of six) by Harold, third dam Belle (dam of Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood, etc.) by Mambrino Chief 11, fourth dam by Brown's Bell founder, etc.

While Village Farm sent a consignment of fine horses to the Blue Ribbon sale, they averaged less than either Mr. Spreckels consignment or the Palo Alto horses. Village Farm's horses averaged $378, the Spreckels horses $437, and the Palo Alto consignment $460.

Reading Character in a Horse.

Almost everybody, man, woman or child, should understand the salient points of a horse's character and be able to form an estimate of an animal's disposition after some study of its habits and general features. In fact, no one can become a good driver until he knows how to judge the animal he is to guide. To be able to distinguish a horse of a gentle disposition from one inclined to be tricky or vicious is indispensable when hiring a mount or driver from a livery stable.

The eye and the ear are the two principal features to be closely regarded as the indexes to the tractability and gentleness of the animal.

A clear eye of moderate size should be sought after, as indicating obedience and intelligence. A horse having a set, staring eye is almost sure to shy and to be foolishly frightened without cause. As in man, breadth between the eyes indicates good judgment. Large, full eyes always belong to a kindly-natured animal, just as small eyes drawn up at the corners indicate a cunning horse, never to be depended upon under the most favorable circumstances.

The ear should be regarded with much care, as its attitude and movements telegraph the workings of the animal's brain to the owner or driver. Horses having a restless, moving ear are high-strung and nervous, and inclined to scare unless closely watched. Sometimes a restless ear indicates poor eyesight. Animals throwing the ears far back are inclined to nip and bite, and are particularly ugly to their own kind, hence never should be hitched near other horses.

Horses which habitually hold their ears in one position usually are dull, stupid creatures, slow of gait and not to be hurried by any amount of coaxing or urging. Oftentimes deafness or difficulty in hearing can be determined by watching a horse's ears, which will remain immovable and undisturbed when any sudden noise occurs, plainly indicating that the animal is unaware of any unusual sound.

Some trainers of horses have pet theories regarding the color of a horse having something to do with his disposition; claiming that chestnuts and sorrels are likely to be high-strung creatures, and giving gray horses credit for docility. An eminent veterinary would argue otherwise, claiming that "investigation along this line has not led us to believe that there is any reliance whatever to be placed in opinions formed upon such a theory. It is also contended that color has much to do with the comfort of the animal when exposed to the sun's rays, especially in the summer season, but our observations have not demonstrated the truth of this supposition, as it has been clearly shown time and again that dark horses are able to do just as much work without showing fatigue as those of a lighter color. This may be accounted for by the fact that the coat is a non-conductor within certain limits, so that it probably makes little difference what color it is so far as the temperature of the parts beneath is concerned."

Few Declarations for Brighton Cup.

The only declarations from the Brighton Cup are Captain Sam Brown's Garry Hermann, William C. Whitney's Endurance-by-Right and Elkhorn, James R. Keene's Port Royal, Green B. Morris' Autolight and A. L. Aste's King Bramble. The withdrawal of these horses has not detracted from the merit of the long distance classic, which is richer in promise this year than ever before. The list of eligible candidates is a strong one, embracing as it does James B. Haggin's great horse Watercolor, F. C. McLewee & Co.'s Gold Heels, Frank Farrell's Blues and Bonibert, Walter Rollins' sturdy campaigner Herbert, Perry Belmont's Flywheel, R. T. Wilson's (Jr.) Dixieline and Carbuncle, J. A. Manahan's The Rhymer, H. J. Morris' Surmise, The Osceola Stables' Maid of Harlem, winner of the Champion Stakes of last year; Jack Follansbee's Roehampton, L. V. Bell's Baron Pepper, Mr. Whitney's crack three year olds Yankee and Goldsmith, Green B. Morris' Watercure, and among the other good horses Hernando and Argregor. While Mr. Whitney and Green Morris have made declarations, it will be noticed that the pick of their candidates still are eligible for the pioneer cup race of the new turf era. The Brighton Cup will be worth about $8000. It has been won by such great horses as The Friar, Hamburg and Ethelbert, each the property of a millionaire, and it is said that Mr. Haggin is ambitious to win it with Watercolor. There is some doubt about Watercolor's ability to negotiate a cup distance against horses of the first order, but if he should win the Brighton Cup he will have set the stamp of class on his career.

The table printed above gives, at a glance, an idea of the limits to which the battle for supremacy on the New York speedway has forced the enthusiastic millionaire amateurs who daily drive on the great course for the glory of holding the ribbons over the winners.

Until a short time ago the man who owned a fast roadster that won a fair percentage of the brushes indulged in was content to own a single horse. Now, so keen has the growing competition for the honors become that not single roadsters, but whole stables of the fleetest animals obtainable, from three to twenty in number, are maintained by men whose fortunes are written in five and six figures, and the value of the horses which are seen constantly on the road amounts to much more than a quarter of a million dollars.

The owners' names are well known wherever the standard-bred is admired, and not one but will, at any cost, buy any horse whose record and ability are likely to carry them into the front rank of speedway drivers.

Champions of the road come and go as well as in any other competitions in which the element of chance is an important factor, and it is this uncertainty and constant change that fascinates the wealthy horseman and leads him to another effort to capture the high honors.

At present New York horsemen possess the grandest collection of light harness horses in the country—thanks to the Speedway—and besides the fortunes that are invested in the blue blooded stars of the turf, it requires a small fortune to maintain them for racing purposes. Nathan Straus, who was one of the first Speedway drivers, and for a long time swept the famous driveway clean with his handsome chestnut trotter Cobwebs 2:12, has found the great son of Whips a trifle too slow for many new aspirants, and he has wisely added to his possessions some promising new material. His bay pacer Quadriga 2:08 and the speedy bay trotter Alves 2:09½ are both rapidly coming to the front, and Mr. Straus is forever on the lookout for another Cobwebs, whose road record has never been equalled.

Few persons are aware of the care given to the Speedway racers to fit them for their grueling road struggles. Mr. Straus only recently opened a new stable in Harlem, which he had expressly built for his "pets," where they receive the best of care and attention from Trainer Sullivan and experienced handlers.

E. E. Smathers is another one of the road brigade who never hesitates to pick up a good thing, regardless of the cost. Only last winter Mr. Smathers went into Madison Square Garden determined to send Lord Derby 2:06½ to his stable and he secured him with a bid of $12,500. Queen Wilkes, the dainty little mare that is considered the fastest trotter on the Speedway to-day, also cost Mr. Smathers a good sum, but it is safe to say that the New Yorker has received more than his money's worth out of that little bundle of nerve and muscle.

A. B. Gwathmey is said to have paid $5000 for Tudor Chimes last fall to pole with Tiverton, and there are many others willing to do the same providing the goods are delivered.

Of the many prominent speedway patrons, however, it is doubtful if any has so much at stake in horseflesh as C. K. G. Billings, the Chicago millionaire, who now makes his headquarters in this city. To begin with, Mr. Billings owns the largest individual string of wagon horses—about twenty in number—which he uses for his own pleasure on the speedway and at the amateur race meets. It has been said that Mr. Billings' sport costs him $100,000 a year, but it would appear that this is a much smaller sum than is actually expended.

David La Mar, the Wall-street broker, who is ready for all comers whenever he appears on the road, has a collection of light harness stars that are valued well up in the thousands. They include such well known performers as the trotter Sally Simpson 2:11½, Teto 2:14½, King 2:13½ and the pacer Nathan Straus 2:09½. M. C. Harrison has a good trotter in Axtello 2:15, and with one or two others to give him a let up now and then, Axtello would be a hard one to beat by any of the stars.

Charles Lloyd and his handsome prize winner Malzour 2:15½ is a hard combination to beat in the 2:15 class, and the black, with speed, conformation and style, is one of the most valuable steppers on the road. In fact, Mr. Lloyd values him above money.

John F. Cockerill, president of the Road Drivers' Association, has three speedy ones in Swift, Rival and Phoebe Childers. Swift has proved his claim to championship, but Rival and Phoebe Childers have been given little work this season.

Fred Gerken, who owns last year's speedway champion, The Monk 2:08, believes he has a $10,000 stepper in the handsome bay, and he is having him prepared for the Grand Circuit this season, with a view of carrying off some rich prizes. He will be returned to the speedway in the fall, when Mr. Gerken intends to have him in shape to race against all comers. It is not expected that the honors will be so easily decided as they were last year, as the horses seem more evenly matched than ever before.

The Blind Trotter.

There is much speculation among trainers as to just what will be the outcome of Scott Hudson's experiment of taking a blind trotter down the Grand Circuit. It is the bay horse, Rythma, a son of Oakland Baron out of a mare by Strathmore. The horse was bred by Douglass Thomas, in Bourbon county, and worked a mile last season over the farm track at the Thomas place close to 2:10. That the son of Oakland Baron is a speed sensation no one doubts. What he will do when he gets bumped in a big field is the question that trainers are thinking of. Hudson has entered Rythma extensively down the circuit in the green classes to which he is eligible. Rythma is taking his work daily over the Lexington track and goes as nicely as if there was no such thing as blindness. Many of the Lexington, Ky., trainers are of the opinion that Hudson is taking a long chance with a blind horse. They argue that some fellow with a grudge will bump Rythma going around the turn in a big field, and that the blind horse will lose his head instantly and develop a tendency to run away. "Hudson ought to get him in a race that he knows the horse can win," said one trainer, "and then get him out in front of the field and bring him back and let him out ahead of them until he gets used to the company. A race or two like that ought to do the trick. Give the horse a little schooling of this kind, which will inspire his confidence in the man with the reins, and Rythma ought to be bringing back some of the money next fall."

Fifty Thousand Dollars.

This is the aggregate amount of money offered by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association for its early closing or fixed events, entries to which close on Monday, June 2d.

Aside from the direct pecuniary profits accruing to the "best horse" in any of these "turf classics," the increased value of the winner is very material, and therefore we are at a loss to understand how any owner can afford to fail to send his nominations to Secretary E. W. Shanklin before the time of closing.

The classes are arranged to suit horses of every degree of speed, and will be so carded that each horse can have an opportunity of contesting in two or more races during the ten days of the meeting, with from three to seven days rest between.

The Fisherman's Ill-luck.

An angler cast his braided line
Fast by a brooklet's grassy edge;
Alas, his hook caught in a root,
His line was tangled in the sedge.
When it was free he cast again,
Hopeful a spangled trout to snare,
Alas, a worthless bull-pout came,
Struggling, convulsive in the air.

An angler by a crystal lake
Sought eager for a black bass prize;
Alas, upon his hook impaled,
A writhing sunfish meets his eyes!

An angler by the river's bank,
Whose golden willows cast a shade,
Hoped there a salmon, large and bright,
Would snatch the glittering lure displayed;
Alas, a humble pickerel
His only prey for rod and reel.

An angler by Floridian stream,
Zealously sought the tarpon king;
He cast his line with matchless skill,
His reel did hum, his line did sing;
There came a dash, a mighty splash,
He thought the kingly fish his game,
Alas, 'twas channel bass that came!

An angler by the ocean surf,
Cast for a blue fish far his line,
Or for a Spanish mackerel,
Careering thro' the foamy brine;
Alas, a dogfish rises there,
The sole reward for skill and care;
Or sculpin or the long-tailed skate,
Seize greedily his tempting bait!
In ripples of the breezy bay,
He sought the weakfish for his reel;
Alas, those darlings failed to bite,
He only caught a slippery eel.

Deep Sea Life and Its Wonders.

To the devotee of rod and line intrinsically, the recreation, and sport derived, from lifting a fish out of the water is not the whole sum of the salt water water angler's ambition. The habits, "habiliments" and methods of reproduction of the comparatively small number of fishes which are found in lakes and streams is a subject of study and recreation to many studious anglers. This latter field—or rather water, however, falls into insignificance as compared to the possibilities of study and research pertaining to the denizens of salt waters.

According to Prof. Charles F. Holder, a scientist and sportsman—to whom coming generations will feel largely obligated for the introduction, as a sport, and successful application of rod and line tackle in the capture of several varieties of deep sea and ocean fish—there is a plethora of salt water life that is marvelous to the ordinary or careless observer:

Those animals of the deep see which live habitually in water just above the freezing point, in darkness that is profound, are among the most grotesque and singular of living beings. The fishes, so far as known, are of small size; but this does not prove that there are no large animals in the deep sea. The method of taking deep sea forms precludes the capture of any except the small and very sluggish ones which lie in the deep ooze, but the time will come when a large dredge will be invented in which the monsters of the deep will be taken, as there are few naturalists who have given the subject any attention but believe there are in the greater depths some gigantic animal which is occasionally seen by those who go down to the sea in ships. The many and oft recurring stories of the sea serpent cannot all be visions, pictures of the fancy. Many of the supposed sea serpents are whales, lines of birds, or patches of sea weed, but it is the consensus of opinion among conservative naturalists that there is some gigantic animal in the deep sea yet unknown to science which occasionally comes to the surface, showing portions of its form, to the amazement of the mariner who may chance to be in the vicinity.

As to the nature of these unknown animals we have several suggestions. Some years ago a fisherman on the Georges Banks off the Newfoundland coast, or in that vicinity, brought up a remarkable fish twenty feet in length which was entirely new to him. Considering it a mere incumbrance it was thrown overboard, but the catch was reported and aroused great interest among naturalists; so much that a large sum was offered to the fishermen to fish it up again, which they tried to do without success. The fish was a veritable young sea serpent, and if such a fish attained the length of fifty feet it would well compare with the accounts of sea serpents which are reported so often. Since this occurrence several eel-like sharks have been taken; long, serpentine-like creatures that when large must be the sea serpents of the deep sea, and have convinced observers that the tales which have aroused the credulity of people are not without foundation, and that this mysterious realm conceals strange and gigantic forms which only rarely rise to the surface.

The eel-like sharks found are in some instances luminous, emitting a strange light over their entire surfaces—the light givers of the deep sea.

Another denizen of the deep is the so-called ribbon fish, several specimens of which the writer has seen on the shores of Santa Catalina Island. This creature is one of the most beautiful of all fishes. It resembles a white or silver ribbon, slashed with black. A long fin extends its entire length, and over the head forms a number of plumes or pompons of a vivid red that in long specimens might easily be taken for a mane waving to and fro. That this delicate ribbon fish attains a very large size is generally believed, as good-sized specimens have been captured. Some years ago a fisherman was hauling a net on the coast of Scotland, when it was found that some heavy weight was holding the net back. Additional help was obtained, and a dozen men finally hauled in a monster fish which was estimated to weigh 800 pounds. It was a gigantic ribbon fish, 30 feet or more in length, so long and heavy that it required the efforts of half a dozen men to carry it along the deck. It was a veritable sea serpent, and extending from its head were tall deep red or scarlet plumes, like fins, which formed a sort of "mane," frequently described as being seen on the typical sea serpent. If these fishes attain a length of 30 feet, there is no reason why they may not exceed this, and it is very possible that some of the "sea serpents" which have been observed at various times were gigantic ribbon fishes which came up from the deep sea and moved along with undulating motion at the surface.

During the past year a large specimen of this deep sea wonder was washed ashore at Newport Beach, California, where it was destroyed by a Mexican ignorant of its value. The fish, which was 25 or 30 feet in length and estimated to weigh 500 pounds, was seen at first in the surf, presenting a remarkable appearance as its silvery folds rolled over and over and flashed in the sunlight. The finder waded into the surf and, with much difficulty, hauled the struggling ribbon fish out upon the sands.

How deep the ribbon fish lives in the sea is unknown, but it is supposed to come up from the very great depths where almost profound darkness reigns.

One of the most remarkable as well as gigantic animals of the deep sea is the giant squid—a fantastic tidbit of the sperm whale. The size to which these animals grow, their strength, and their hideous appearance places them on a par with many of the weird and grotesque creatures of a past age. The squid undoubtedly attains a length of nearly, if not over, 100 feet, and pieces have been taken from the stomach of whales which suggested animals far beyond this in size.

No more hideous creature can be imagined. The body is barrel-shaped, the tail like an arrow head, the eyes as large as saucers, black and white, hypnotic, and staring. The arms are attached to the head and are ten in number, from ten to twenty feet long in extremely large animals, while two are from thirty to fifty feet in length, depending upon the size of the individual. The short arms are provided with extraordinary suckers their entire length. The two long ones have them only at the extremities, and they form virtually a pair of pincers, which are shot out thirty or more feet like a flash of light to seize unsuspecting prey, which is then hauled among the shorter arms and held powerless to escape. The mouth is small, but is provided with two large parrot-like beaks. This weird creature, weighing tons, with a power of changing its color like a chameleon, and in some species luminous, lives in deep fjord-like bays and probably in the deeper regions of the ocean, as it is rarely seen except when wounded. A number of years ago an epidemic appears to have overtaken these animals and numbers were found at the surface in Newfoundland waters—one, fifty-five feet in length, giving the man who discovered it a hard struggle. The hideous animal threw its arms over the boat, holding on with its vice-like strength, emitting clouds of ink, which permeated the water in every direction. It was finally secured, towed in, and anchored in the surf, where it lay until the tide ebbed, tossing its arms aloft, filling the water with ink—a terrifying spectacle.

The capture of nearly all the giant squids has been sensational. The French man-of-war Albatron sighted one some years ago lying upon the surface. A boat was lowered, but the captain was loath to allow his men to attack it, fearing that some one would be killed or injured by the flying arms or be hauled down into the water. Finally a harpoon was thrown into it that killed it. When the animal was hauled aboard, by its mere weight it fell apart, yet there was no doubt but that it could have held two men in each arm and drowned them very easily in the open water.

So uncanny a creature might well inspire horror among seamen, but there is every reason to believe that they are very timid. The writer measured one of these animals which proved to be 45 feet in length; and at the Island of Santa Catalina once observed a school of squids, from 8 to 10 feet long, rush in upon the rocks, chased by large fishes. One of these curious creatures was placed in a large tank, where it lived for several hours, giving a remarkable exhibition of color changes. It threw its long arms about the edges of the tank with a grip almost impossible to dislodge, while over its body flashed tint and color changes fairly dazzling. The prevailing hue was reddish brown, becoming vivid, then fading away to pale gray, suggestive of the possibilities of concealment of this strange animal. The writer has seen them poisoning over a white sandy bottom almost invisible, then when over a dark bottom they took on a darker shade also almost invisible to any lurking foe. When attacked the animal shot away, tail first, like an arrow, discharging backward at its enemy a cloud of ink which filled the water for many feet about—a protective measure at once effective and sensational.

The question of large animals of the deep sea is one of the problems of the future, and doubtless in the years to come some trap will be devised which will bring to the surface of the deep sea, which in form and shape will be as remarkable as the smaller animals which are known to be the light beacon of these abyssal regions of the ocean world.

Protect the Blackbirds.

A herald of good tidings is the slogan signalled by the San Jose Mercury: "The blackbird, which was at one time almost universally despised, is growing in favor with fruit growers, who now realize that the bird is an active pest destroyer." We have advocated tolerance and protection not only for the blackbirds, but for numerous other maligned, and none the less, feathered benefactors of the husbandman and the community at large. Let the good word of genuine protection grow apace so that the sprout may take root and attain a large, sheltering growth as the tree of rational and true protection.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

There is now in use a luminous gun sight. It is of English invention. A tiny incandescent lamp, fed from a single storage battery concealed in the gun stock, is mounted within a shield at the muzzle of the gun, and a faint ray of light calculated to indicate the position of its source, is exposed in the direction of the shooter's eye, and this is sufficient to enable him to obtain the required alignment with the back sight and with the target, be it animate or inanimate.

Sabin Ostrander, who died some twelve years ago, near St. Marys, Pennsylvania, aged ninety-six years, was probably the last of the original frontier backwoodsmen, and was never seen without his gun on his shoulder and two or three dogs at his heels. He had always lived in the woods, and hunted while the Indians still had hunting grounds in Pennsylvania and Ohio; and in all his long life of exposure and hardships he never had a day's sickness until in June, three months before he died. What an amazing record this is. Not one man in a million can approach it. The reason is plain, Ostrander's life was simple and natural, ours is most false and artificial. The disease that cripples and kills many people, the old hunter never suffered from—indigestion.

The sea-lion is generally supposed to be a worthless beast; but he is far from being so. Indeed, the uses he is put to would surprise you, Mr. W. F. Shattuck claims. He is quite numerous in many places along the Pacific Coast and hunters make fair wages in his pursuit. The weapon used is a good rifle, and he is tumbled over usually while basking on the rocks; although when killed in deep water the carcass floats to shore in a short time. The hides sell from one to three cents a pound—those of the big bull being used for belting and bring the lower price. The cow and calf skins make an excellent glove leather. The whiskers or "feelers" are very tough and wiry—varying in length from four to five inches—and are used by the Chinese ladies for hair ornaments, they stringing bangles and cheap jewelry thereon. The very long ones are worth about 75 cents each—the prices ranging down to about two cents. When sold in bulk they average from 10 to 15 cents each. The galls, used for medicine by the Chinese, are also highly prized. One young hunter of my acquaintance, several years ago, shipped to San Francisco 10,500 pounds of hides, 2300 whiskers and a lot of galls—netting him quite a large sum. Sea-lion hunters also pick up an occasional sea otter, the skins of which range in price from $150 to $400—an unusually fine one sometimes reaching $500. The friend here alluded to was lucky enough on one occasion to be one of a hunting party that killed nine sea otters in one day. They surrounded a whole "rookery" of them near Cape Blanco. Some of them were pups, but the lot brought about $1300. This was, of course, phenomenal luck, as weeks or months will sometimes pass without the hunter securing a single pelt.

Fire Building in the Rain.

Concerning the proper way of building a camp fire, is a subject worthy of some little consideration. Given favorable conditions and plenty of fuel and matches, and any one can easily and quickly start a respectable blaze. There is nothing difficult about the ignition of combustible substances—merely a case of "touch and go"—pile up the shavings and paper, and scratch a match and "there you are!" But starting a fire in the darkness or rain, or both! That is quite another sort of a proposition. You have been walking hard for hours, striving to get back to camp, to rejoin your companions or to reach shelter. You have struggled manfully along until darkness has fallen around you. The earth is soaked and the trees dripping with moisture and the rain is dashing in your face and running in rivulets down your limbs underneath your clothing. Further progress is impossible, you must halt right where you are, and, if possible, make yourself comfortable for the night; and your first needs are light and warmth. On such an occasion as this, one dry match is worth a thousand that are wet but how few are the young hunters who have provided any way of keeping their matches dry through four or five hours of driving rain! The manufacturers who devote their lives and energies to the task of supplying sportsmen's needs, have never yet catalogued a sure-enough waterproof match-box; but the one who does will never be forced to create a demand for his wares. Waterproof match-boxes are among the crying needs of the hour. Every sportsman should have one. Uncle Sam could find a place to-day for 200,000 of them, but we are all doing without because there are no waterproof match boxes on the market. Some sportsmen have used an ounce round vial which answers the purpose, but it is unnecessarily heavy and clumsy to carry, and is besides always liable to be broken. Some of these days one may take a tumble, and "come to" with a pocketful of shattered glass, and be lucky if the damage extends only to the vial and its contents. It is singular why some enterprising manufacturer does not turn out a light, aluminum case with a long screw top, which would hold fifteen or twenty matches and keep them good and dry. Something like Cushman & Dennison's ten cent oilers, only twice as big and with a plain top instead of the oil tube.

But let us suppose that your matches are all right, and that you are in the big woods, wet and miserable, and cognizant of the one fact that you want a fire and want it bad. There is plenty of fuel all around you, but you can hardly find it in the darkness, and if you already had it in hand, firing it with a match would be out of the question. Your greatest need is kindlings, and it is well to remember that any fallen twigs you may pick up will be water-soaked and worse than useless. Wood draws dampness from the earth, and a stick which is wet through to the heart will not burn. Furthermore, it is a waste of time to cut shavings from a stick, however thin, unless from a pine knot or a bit of hard wood that is thoroughly dry and thoroughly seasoned. While the rain is falling and the knife-blade is wet, it is impossible to prevent the shavings from becoming thoroughly soaked, and the flame of a match will blacken them and nothing more.

But now to tell you how to get your kindlings. As trees and bushes grow their lower branches die, and eventually drop off, but at any time you can find them, seasoned as hard as nails, still clinging to the parent trunk. So long as they remain on the tree no amount of rain can soak them through. A moment's trouble will secure you a double handful of little twigs from the size of a knitting needle to that of an eight-penny nail—the smaller they are the better—and you will be surprised to see how readily they will catch and how brightly they will burn. Add other small sticks as rapidly as you may without smothering the blaze, crossing them slightly, but only enough to permit a free draft. Don't make a "bird's nest" of your fire. Sticks, to burn well, must lie close enough together to keep hot.

A good deal depends upon the selection of a proper spot for fire building. Supposing you have been working in the darkness, as soon as a light has been secured it will be advisable to discover whether you had best move the fire to a more suitable place. A log or stump, whether sound or decayed, will, if the fire is started against it, help wonderfully in the way of making and throwing out heat. Be sure that you never fire a dead tree or stub which may possibly burn through and fall upon you. A green tree is usually safe, unless hollow. For a quick, hot fire start your little blaze at the root of a tree, adding first short sticks, then longer and larger ones, leaning them over the fire with their upper ends resting against the bark. Pack them as closely as you like; the fire will find its way through. Keep stacking on the wood until you have made use of all within easy reach, and you will have a blaze that will dry your clothing from top to toe before finally dropping to a bed of embers.

The secret of successful fire building lies in taking plenty of time and placing each individual stick where it will burn to the best advantage. There is a story of one clever woodsman who once, in midwinter, camped comfortably on a floating log, miles from dry land, collecting his fuel from the driftwood which had caught against neighboring bushes and was lodged high and dry; another tale of ingenious resource is related where a sportsman once ran across a couple of town lads who had pitched their tent in some cedar brakes and had wasted their last match in trying to light a heap of green limbs as large as your arm. To teach them a practical lesson in woodcraft, he removed the bullet from a 38-55 shell, replaced it with a pinch of rotten wood crumbled into bits the size of wheat grains, and in five minutes had "shot fire," into an old stump—thus solving the problem that had been troubling the boys for hours.

Canine Distemper and Its Cure.

Canine distemper has at all times been considered a very fatal disease and has been classed under various names. It resembles typhoid fever of man very closely, and occurs in the dog, cat, fox, wolf, coyote, hyena, prairie dog and monkey, and is highly contagious from one of these animals to another. The infecting medium being a very short bacillus, which is highly resistant. The disease may be transmitted from an animal of one species to that of another, and an infected kennel often remains the source of infection for many weeks.

It is more contagious for young than for old animals, partly because one attack generally confers immunity. About two-thirds of the animals that suffer from distemper have it while under one year of age. It may, however, be seen in very old animals. Puppies have been known to suffer with it as early as the second week. The period of incubation or the time from which the animal becomes infected until the first symptoms of the disease may be noticed is four to seven days. The germ of distemper is both fixed and volatile, that is, the disease may be contracted by direct contact with bacillus, or they may become dry and float around in the atmosphere.

The germ undergoes dessication by the atmosphere without losing any of its virulence. The discharge from an infected animal is very rich in bacteria. Hence the necessity of thorough disinfection. One attack usually confers immunity, but this may only be temporary, and the animal again suffers from the disease at some later period. It is most easily transmitted by cohabitation. The air may also be considered a common medium of transmission. Many predisposing causes may be mentioned in connection with the disease, but it cannot occur without contact with the germ of distemper. As predisposing causes we might mention cold, damp kennels, bad diet, dirty litter, or any condition that tends to weaken the animal; but these conditions only predispose to the disease in so far as they lessen the animal's resistibility to any disease.

It has been supposed that pure bred animals are more subject to it than mongrels, but this is not the case, as one breed is no more subject to a contagious disease than another. Many people imagine that a meat diet will produce distemper. This, however, is not true, but on the other hand is the best diet that a young dog could have, as a dog will starve to death on a purely vegetable diet.

Distemper is the most common disease to which the dog is heir, and occurs mostly during spring and summer, as the warm, damp weather is more favorable to the development of the germs.

Distemper consists of an inflammation of the mucous membranes of the digestive and respiratory organs. It may at times be accompanied by serious nervous troubles which are very complex in their nature. The first symptom noticed is possibly a profound depression. The animal suffers from loss of appetite, easily fatigued, very chilly, rise of temperature and dry, hot nose; discharge from the eyes and nose. This discharge, as the disease advances, becoming dry and crusted. It frequently becomes attached to the lids of the eye, and becoming very dry, irritates the surface of the cornea until a deep ulcer is produced. The animal exhibits an intense thirst. We may notice much vomiting, and will always notice a persistent cough as if the animal was choking. This cough, being due to a dryness of the mucous membrane of the mouth and throat. Thick, ropy saliva dribbling from the corners of the mouth. As the disease advances the animal suffers from a fetid diarrhoea. This may be either mucous or streaked with blood. The gait of the animal becomes very uncertain, and the discharges from the nose and eyes become yellow or green. Complete loss of appetite and the development of convulsions of either the entire body or certain groups of muscles are indications that little can be hoped for from treatment. Pustules may be noticed on the uncovered skin of the abdomen, these being about the size of a pea, dry up after three or four days, leaving a reddish brown crust.

Among the nervous symptoms we may first notice excitement or spasms, the animal very restless; convulsions of the muscles one leg, or any set of muscles. These symptoms being evidence of the appearance of chorea, and should the dog recover from the acute form of the disease these symptoms may frequently remain throughout his life. The duration of the disease is about six to eight days. About twenty per cent of the animals affected in the country die, while the mortality in the cities is more than twice this.

The treatment of distemper is very complex. Among the drugs that may be beneficial is sulphate of quinine in doses of three grains three or four times a day; sulphate of iron in the same size doses. Possibly the best drug in the treatment of distemper would be thermol in doses of from two to four grains three times a day. In the treatment of distemper attention to the diet and general sanitary conditions of the kennel is highly important. The dog should be given highly nutritious concentrated foods as beef extracts, gruels, chopped meats, bread and milk. It seems that the best treatment for distemper would be its prevention and this may be accomplished by the vaccination of all young puppies with distemper anti-toxin. This may be purchased from any first class drug store, that used being the distemper and influenza anti-toxin prepared by H. K. Mulford & Co. for the treatment of distemper in the horse. The dose for a puppy of about two months being about 3 C. C. injected beneath the skin of the abdomen every three months, increasing one C. C. at each injection until the dog has arrived at one year of age, after which time he will generally remain immune to the disease. The cost of the anti-toxin is about $1.50 for six doses. Pups that are vaccinated in this manner may be placed in a kennel where distemper is already raging and not contract the disease. Those that already suffer from it should be given 5 C. C. in the same manner. The anti-toxin should be injected with an ordinary black-leg syringe.

After a case of distemper has been noticed in a kennel the well animals should be removed to thoroughly disinfected quarters and the infected area thoroughly sprayed with a 5 per cent solution of creolin or carbolic acid, and all of the litter and refuse burned. New dogs should be quarantined for a period of ten days previous to their admission to the kennel.—Dr. W. S. McClure in Montana Stockman and Farmer.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Miriam J., Mr. George G. Gauld's handsome English Setter bitch, has been sent to Elko, Nevada, and will be bred to Dr. Wilson's Clipper W.

Champion Woodcote Wonder, so rumor bath it, will be seen on the Eastern circuit again. He has been shipped by this time or will be shortly.

Endcliffe Rebel and Reynard's Rascal, two very good Scotties, we understand were sent East after the Sacramento show. Rebel goes to George Thomas; Rascal will be returned to Nosegay Kennels at Webster Grove, Mo.

Mr. Albert Joseph has had rather an unlucky experience with his Bostons. Closely following the death of the handsome bitch, Lady Montez, comes a piece of hard luck in the loss of an entire litter out of Endcliffe Lita—seven puppies were whelped dead at Mr. Klein's kennels a few days ago.

We have a grand looking and well bred Bull Terrier at a bargain for a quick and ready purchaser.

"True Blue" it was generally announced would be issued during the April dog show in this city. This in response to inquiry from Victoria and Seattle. The address given in an "ad" in the catalogue of the Sacramento show, was "True Blue, San Francisco, California." We have heard nothing further. No, it is not known whether the new publication has "turned blue" or not.

Champion Juanita left here on a train last Saturday bound for Montebello Kennels, Germantown, Pa., where she will be bred to Montebello Caesar. Mr. Cunningham is sanguine of getting a litter of high class Great Danes. Juanita is one of the best we have had here. Caesar is a harlequin and will only be mated to produce color and type. We trust the "nick" will be a good one.

We have received several letters from out of town exhibitors and winners at the April show, who claim they have not yet been given their coin prizes or medals, nor have some who wrote concerning their wins, had any answer to their communications. We were under the impression that the prizes and medals were promptly awarded at the close of the show and during the days closely following.

Several local winners state also they have not yet received their cups. The manager of the recent show can be found at 624 Market street, this city, he is possibly in a position to give full information to all concerned.

Much dissatisfaction was created by the awards in Bostons at the April show here. The reasons for certain decisions were asked, they were explained, and much information furnished the exhibitors in regard to the points of Bostons. This additional voluntary information was either so frivolous or voluntarily distorted, possibly for a purpose, that the fanciers interested immediately took steps to get the proper advice from some of the leading gentlemen experts, breeders and exhibitors in the country. The expose is a sweeping and unanswerable one and will next week furnish interesting reading. The material for the story having been received too late for elaboration this week.

Champion Ivel Rustic it seems is billeted for an Eastern trip. He will be placed in charge of George S. Thomas. Possibly "Billy" may eventually find congenial quarters at Dreamworld. Apropos of Billy's departure reminds us of a story going the rounds, in which Billy was the principal actor in a rather sensational mishap that at one time was thought would end the old dog's career. Billy and his mate had the run of a long verandah roof which extended around two sides of the building where his master resided. The dogs enjoyed the airy and sunny promenade and were quite a picturesque looking sight as one or both of them would be taking an airing or siesta daily. One day, however, Billy got too near the edge and over he went, a drop of about fifteen feet. When he was picked up, so the story goes, it was thought he was very near to making his last gasp. Careful nursing and prompt treatment brought him around again in time. He has since shown now and then by a lameness and wobbling gait that his escape from permanent injury was a close one. Mr. Greenebaum's Lady Bethel was served by Ivel Rustic before he purchased her.

The California State Kennel Club, through its attorney, Charles T. Hughes, has presented a claim against the Sacramento Street Fair Club for $750, alleged damages incurred by the bench show, one of the features of the recent street fair in the capital city. A financial statement by Secretary M. Coffey shows that the show was not a paying one. The net gate receipts were $244.80; entrance money on dogs, $260; advertising in catalogue, $200; total, $704.80. The expenses aggregated $1000.

During the progress of the street fair an iron cage or large cell was located adjoining the bench show. A large, wide platform, upon which was located several individuals, one of whom posed as a backwoods justice of the peace, was in front of the jail. This institution was run in the interest of a fraternal order and for revenue only. Mock policemen seized any one of the audience or individuals from the throng of pleasure seekers and rushed them to the "Eagle's Jail." There was a quick trial, conviction and a fine imposed by the J. P. In most cases the amounts squeezed out of their victims were trivial. In the case of certain State officials and prominent citizens they had to come down handsomely. The fear of arrest and "squeezing," it is claimed by the bench show officers, kept many people who were anxious to see the dog show away from that vicinity. Whether the claim will stand or not, it has been presented and will be advocated seriously. Personally we believe the dog show was materially set back by the buffoonery in the next show.

AT THE TRAPS.

The California Wing Club live bird shoot is the only scheduled local event at the traps for to-morrow.

The Millwood Gun Club shoot last Sunday did not have the usual attendance of shooters on the grounds at Manzanita station. George Collins was the winner of the John K. Orr cup for May. F. Newlands, Jr., won the cup for April. William Arnold was the winner of the monthly badge, the second time he has won in that event. W. H. Price has three wins of the monthly badge to his credit. In the cup race, each monthly winner drops out of the race, the winners will contest in a final race for permanent individual possession of the trophy. Armand De Courtieux recently joined the club, shooting with the members for the first time last Sunday.

At the Capital City Gun Club shoot in Sacramento last Sunday Vetter and Adams were the only winners of bars. Vetter broke twenty-four straight, then missed his last bird, which gave him a silver medal in the champion class.

Adams with twenty-two breaks took a silver medal for the second class.

Besides the events below there were quite a number of team shoots, during which Newbert succeeded in making a run of forty-one breaks.

Holling from Dixon was in attendance, as was also Englehart from Winters, both of them doing some good shooting, Holling breaking forty-six out of fifty. The shooting was on the Kimball & Upson grounds. Following are the scores:

Club shoot, 25 blue rocks—Wittenbrock 15, Trumpler 16, Just 21, Stevens 16, Englehart 19, Vetter 24, Adams 22, C. Mathews 13, W. Smith 22, F. Raschen 19, Shore 20, De Merritt 23, Deuel 13, Black 19, Newbert 22, Cotton 11, Brown 18, Gusto 19, Jones 13, Shaffer 13, Upson 20, Blomer 20, Palm 18, Holling 22, Gusto 16, W. E. Mathews 13.

20 blue rocks—Adams 19, Wittenbrock 19, Trumpler 16, Brown 10, Just 15, Englehart 18, Smith 13, Stevens 15, C. Mathews 6, Deuel 14, De Merritt 12, Shields 13, Cotton 9, Vetter 17, Shore 14, Raschen 9, W. E. Mathews 12, Newbert 17, W. Mathews 9, Leazer 9, Black 18, Brown 15.

The Golden Gate Gun Club had but an attendance of eight members at the regular monthly shoot at Ingleside last Sunday. This was an unusual showing of lack of interest. A number of members were out town, among them Major Hosmer, the president, whose adventurous experience and mishaps is detailed elsewhere. Whatever the cause, it seems that there is a growing indifference to the sport on the part of a number who are in a position to foster and encourage it.

The shoot Sunday was made agreeable by reason of the excellent number of birds supplied. There was not a bird refused by a shooter during the day, nor was there a single sitter trapped. The strong west wind blowing across the row of traps gave many birds an impetus of flight that put them outside of the center of the shot patterns easily, or brought the pigeon down crippled and made a safe second necessary. In the club race at fifteen birds Otto Feudner and C. C. Nauman shot straight scores. Feudner lost a bird dead out, but killed clean on a back score. The club added purse, $20, was won by Nauman (50% of it) and the balance divided by Feudner, Murdock and "Slade." After the club race six-bird pools were on the card. Three of these events were shot. The scores made during the day follow:

* Dead out of bounds.

The College City Gun Club of Berkeley will hold their initial trap shoot to-morrow on the county road, North Berkeley. The officers of the club are: C. C. Juster, President; G. H. Chick, Secretary-Treasurer; E. Kerrison, Manager; R. C. Reed, Captain.

Among the events listed for the day will be a merchandise shoot. In this race the shooters will be divided into three classes—first, second and novice. The handicap in distance will be similar to that followed in the big Clabrough-Golcher shoot on the 18th inst. The meeting promises to bring out a large attendance. The club has a membership of twenty-five, and will probably increase this number to forty within a week or two.

The grounds are fitted up with a cozy little club house, the five traps are arranged on the edge of a small plateau, the targets are thrown against a sky background. The location seems to be a very appropriate one and is sheltered from the winds.

The high guns in the Golden Gate Gun Club live bird shoots are: G. H. T. Jackson with two 15's and a back score to shoot up. M. O. Feudner scored 14, 14 and 15, losing two birds in three shoots, one dead out. C. C. Nauman made 15, 13 and 15. Dr. Derby has two 15's, he started in the April club shoot, however. W. R. Murdock grassed 15, 13 and 14 birds.

In the California Wing Club shoots so far this season the high guns are: M. O. Feudner with three 12's. G. H. T. Jackson scored 12, 12 and 8. C. C. Nauman made 11, 11 and 11. W. H. Williamson shot 11, 10, 12. Ed Donohoe 11, 11 and 12. J. J. Sweeney two 11 scores and a back score to shoot. A. M. Shields 11, 11 and 10. P. B. Bekeart 11, 11 and 12. C. A. Haight 11, 12 and 11. E. L. Forster 10, 10 and 10.

A Salmon Fishing Adventure in Monterey Bay.

The salmon fishing in Monterey bay is excellent now, the big fish have made their appearance plentifully. While in the enjoyment of this sport last Sunday Harry B. Hosmer met with an adventure that for the time being placed him and his boatman in a position facing death by drowning.

Mr. Hosmer left the city on Saturday for Monterey; he stopped off at Pacific Grove staying there all night. Arriving in Monterey the next morning he found much difficulty in getting a boat. Finally he secured the services of "Mike" Noon, a long time resident of the picturesque old California town. Noon has the reputation of being one of the most expert boatmen and salmon fishers in Monterey. He agreed to get a boat and take Hosmer out fishing after he had taken his morning meal. In due time the two put out from the beach. The boat was a fourteen foot skiff, and sailed with a sprit-sail. Surely sailing out on the heaving billows of Monterey bay in such a frail craft would not have been ventured save by an angling enthusiast.

In three hours trolling, however, six fish were caught, some with sardine baits and the others with a No. 6 Wilson spoon. About this time the voyagers were seven miles away from Monterey and two miles outside of the lighthouse—sailing at sea on the broad expanse of the Pacific ocean. Weather indications were having a tendency to lead the anglers to believe that a return to Monterey would be the proper thing. Hosmer suggested going about and sailing for port, the boatman assented; just then Hosmer got a strike and hooked a fish that commenced to fight. The boatman jibed the skiff to sail back, the sheet was tied fast; the result of such carelessness was that the cockleshell of a boat capsized and the two men were floundering in the water, each having a grip on the submerged boat. The boatman got rattled and climbed on top of the overturned skiff; she at once commenced to sink. When the boat came up again, which she did in a few seconds, Hosmer, who was cool (he had hold of his rod with the fish still on all this time), despite the proximity of Davy Jones' locker, directed affairs—telling his companion that they could keep afloat for a couple of hours anyway and would surely be picked up by that time. That he was a true prophet was proven by the appearance of a fishing boat, the occupants of which had noticed the mishap and were hastening to the rescue.

Noon was taken out of the water; the boat had been righted although gunwales under; everything in the boat had been spilled out. Hosmer had a grip on the bow of the skiff. A rope was thrown to him from the rescuing boat. The Italian was so excited that he had thrown a rope that was not made fast in the boat. Hosmer noticed this before letting go his precarious hold on the swamped boat. Just then the skiff overturned again. Hosmer was struck on the head by the mast and was entangled under the sail. It was then he let go his rod, on which he had maintained a tight grip all the time. After struggling to extricate himself from under the sail, he found when he came to the surface that he had two turns of the painter around his neck. By this time the other boat was again close enough and Hosmer was hauled aboard by the fishermen, who themselves, hardy and venturesome toilers of the deep, had, during the brief time of helping the distressed men, done their timely work with blanched faces.

Hosmer upset the gravity of his rescuers by a jocular remark the moment he was seated on the thwart of the saving boat. Spying his pocket flask floating among some dunnage from the wrecked skiff, he pointed to the shining object and told them to complete their good work and save a friend of his, which they did, and a friend to the wet men it proved.

The fishing boat, with the water-logged skiff in tow, then made her course for Monterey. A transfer was shortly after made to a gas launch, the sportsmen aboard willingly lending their aid to unfortunate brother anglers. Hosmer lost two fine rods and reels and all of his tackle. One of the fish that he had taken weighed over twenty pounds; his scales could not register more than that number of pounds. The trip back took two hours; the two wet men were thoroughly chilled and exhausted when they were landed.

The call was a close one and Hosmer and his unfortunate companion are to be congratulated upon their escape so opportunely.

Fish Lines.

Striped bass fishing in the vicinity of Sheep Island was fair this week. In this water the spoon has been useless, clam bait being the only effective lure. J. A. Farriser, C. B. Hollywood, E. A. Cunningham, Chris Johnson and F. W. King caught nine fish near the island on Sunday, the largest weighed eleven pounds.

To-morrow the close season on striped bass for one month will commence.

Trout fishing in the Big Sulphur, near the Geysers, is excellent just now. The fish are generally nice sized ones and take the fly greedily. One enthusiastic angler, Mrs. Bert Wyman, sent down an order for nine dozen assorted flies, which Frank Marcus was commissioned to select. The average catch, daily, at the point mentioned, has been forty and fifty fine fish. It seems as if this pleasant outing location has been overlooked.

California favorite hot weather drink—Jackson's Napa Soda.

In view of the present extremely high prices for nearly all stock food, nearly every farmer and stock breeder feels a strong desire to find some good substitute for grain or some article of food which will fatten cattle without costing nearly as much as the marketable meat. The land is full of such substitutes, or at least of those which profess to do more than natural foods at less cost. The New Jersey Experimental Station has been making some exhaustive examinations of the different cattle foods on the market, and in the bulletin recently issued, giving a summary of the result, there is a note of warning that should be heeded. It is impossible for manufacturers or any other people to find substitutes for grain, corn meal and hay, which nature produces so abundantly, that will give anything like the same results in feeding. The so-called substitutes may be clever combinations of the natural foods mixed with many so-called waste products of mills and factories but it is more than doubtful if they are of any special value to the farmers. At any rate, many are frauds when the prices asked for them are considered, and no farmer should use them until he knows pretty nearly what they contain. Then he is very apt to go into the market and do his own buying and mixing.

The bulletin is a sensible one and should be perused carefully by those who have been misled into believing they can save money in buying substitutes for good, natural, animal foods. Most of the substitute foods are composed of cottonseed meal, gluten meal, linseed meal, malt sprouts, brewers' grains, wheat, bran and corn in some of its many forms. These likewise constitute the foods which the farmer feeds to his stock, and he cannot purchase them any cheaper in the form of food mixtures. It is true that by making a mixture in which the cheapest foods predominate he can get a ration that will be cheaper than any of the highest priced single foods. But will he gain anything thereby? Will not the difference be shown in the lack of gain in the animals?

2:09¼

PEDIGREE IN PART.

Sired by SIDNEY 2:19¼, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna

N. 2:05¼ (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Battle dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4340, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18¼.

Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21¼, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals, two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:16, first quarter in 0:40¼, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier. WALTER S. MABEN."

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him

(Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902,

JOTTINGS.

There is considerable talk about the sale of Uncle Jesse D. Carr's horses, which is to be held on the 26th of this month at the old stamping ground, corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue, where so many high class horses have passed under the hammer in the past. Fred H. Chase & Co. have made a ten strike in securing this sale and there should be lively bidding when the horses are led out. Mr. Carr has always bred to good stallions and as he started with good mares, he has some first class stock to show. He has never had much training done, as his time has been too much occupied with other things, but he has bred some fast ones for all that. Years ago he bought the stallion Mambrino 1789, a son of the renowned Mambrino Patchen 58. This horse was bred by Dr. Herr and after Mr. Carr purchased him began to figure in the pedigrees of fast ones. He died years ago, but his name is prominent in the Year Book as the sire of Lady Ellen 2:29½ and Maud H. 2:21. His daughters produced Helena 2:11½ and eight more in 2:30, and his blood is considered a good thing in a trotter to make him stay the route. Mr. Carr bred his famous old mare Gabilan Maid by this horse to Electioneer and got Nina B. Her sister, Lady Ellen, he sold to Governor Stanford and she has produced four in the list. Nina B. Mr. Carr bred to Boodle 2:12½ and got Boodle Jr., a very handsome stallion that he has been using in the stud in the last few years with splendid results, his colts being a very uniform and handsome lot, as anyone can see by attending the sale. Mr. Carr's mares have been bred to other stallions besides Boodle Jr., and the catalogue will show that McKinney 2:11½, Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, Hambletonian Wilkes and other great producers have been patronized by the Gabilan Stock Farm. This mingling of the Mambrino Patchen, Williamson's Belmont and Electioneer blood with the best of the younger generations cannot help but produce good results, and buyers who attend this sale will stand the best kind of a chance to get mares that will produce speed and colts that can show it as soon as worked. There are some very handsome two and three year olds to be sold and horsemen should not miss the opportunity to get them.

If anyone who takes an interest in horse breeding will keep his eyes open when visiting the training tracks this year, he will find that for uniform good looks the produce of Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ are right up in the front ranks of standard bred horses. I don't know as I ever saw a homely one sired by this great stallion. One Sunday, a week or two ago, while at the Alameda track watching a workout by a couple of trotting mares that will be raced this year, I saw a stranger go by driving a very handsome and up-headed gelding that was pacing close to a 2:20 clip. The driver left the track before I could get an interview with him, but one of the "regulars" told me the pacer was by Nutwood Wilkes out of an Anteeo mare and was "a good one." This Anteeo mare was sold by Martin Carter four or five years ago to T. W. Barstow, of San Jose, and had this colt by her side at the time. Mr. Barstow sold the colt to Dr. Bull, of Alameda, who drove him on the road and in turn sold him to Mr. Lomax, a blacksmith of Alameda. The Doctor, who formerly owned Much Better 2:07½, did not consider the Nutwood Wilkes colt a Star Pointer and Mr. Lomax got him at a bargain. He shod him to suit his own ideas, began driving him on the Alameda track and before anybody realized that the horse was a prospect began showing speed that looked like race horse quality. The horsemen in Alameda say that Mr. Lomax could give his horse a record of 2:20 or better right now and that 2:15 is not too fast a mark to predict for him if he is trained and raced. That he is a handsome and smooth gaited fellow everyone admits that has seen him.

Cyrus Lukens, who writes most entertainingly on trotting horse affairs, gets his figures and facts in the wrong place sometimes. Not long since he printed a list to show that first foals were the best, but the editor of the Chicago Horse Review dug up a lot of statistics in regard to the matter that made the Lukens' theory look like the proverbial thirty cents. In the last issue of Trotter and Pacer, Mr. Lukens says: "For so small a mare as Beautiful Bells, as she cannot be more than 143 she has bred well to Electioneer." How he ever got the idea into his head that Beautiful Bells was under fifteen hands I cannot conceive, but I do know that he is about three inches out of the way in his guess at the height of the greatest of all broodmares. I saw Beautiful Bells in a paddock at Palo Alto less than two months ago and unless she has shrunk since she is fully up to the 15.2 as her height is given in the Palo Alto catalogue. She is not a small mare, but one of average size, and there is nothing strange about her breeding well to Electioneer. In this connection I will say that her last foal, Monbells by Mendocino, is one of the grandest looking young stallions ever bred on the farm. He is 15.1½ hands high, handsome and good gaited, and his mark of 2:23½, given him simply to show that he has speed and to give the old mare another performer, could be beaten by him at least five seconds under favorable circumstances. While Chimes is a wonderful sire and a great horse, I am very much inclined to agree with Superintendent Covey when he says that Monbells, the last of the foals of Beautiful Bells, is not only her last but her best.

Answers to Correspondents.

M. W., Hanford—Please give breeding of the black mare Moano by imp. Idalium, dam Chartreuse. Are there two mares by that name?

Moano is by imp. Idalium, full brother to Sir Modred and Cheviot. Her dam is Chartreuse by Emperor, second dam Wauculla by imp. Hurrah, third dam Surprise by Ringgold, fourth dam Daylight by imp. Glencoe, fifth dam Darkness by Wagner. Moano is five years old, having been foaled in 1897. There are two mares registered under the name of Chartreuse. The other is by imp. Charaxus out of Eolee by Eolus. Moano was owned by Barney Schreiber and ran in his name as a two year old, but she was bred by Mr. A. B. Spreckels, we believe.

F. M. D., Vallejo—What is the breeding of the gray mare Rosette by Alcona Clay 2756, and how is that stallion bred?

Rosette is by Alcona Clay, dam Rose by General Taylor, second dam Ruth Ryan by Lodi, third dam Eva Bulwer by Bulwer, fourth dam Emma Taylor by imported Glencoe. Ruth Ryan was the dam of Strathearn, sire of Plunket 2:13½. Alcona Clay 2756 is by Alcona 730, dam Madonna (dam of Madonna Russell 2:25½, Alcona Jr. 2:24 and Del Rey 2:24½) by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22, third dam by Joe Downing. Alcona 730 was by Almont 33, dam Queen Mary by Mambrino Chief 11.

Calaveras Fair.

SAN ANDREAS, May 26.—At a special meeting of the Agricultural Association of Calaveras held here to day it was decided to hold the fair and have five days' racing, beginning September 30th, and closing October 4th. The Stockton Fair finishes its racing program September 27th, and this gives horsemen ample time to reach San Andreas, as this place is on the circuit. From here they go to Sonora and Modesto.

A Great Stallion for Australia.

Mr. Dugald Taylor, superintendent of Truganina Stock Farm, Melbourne, Australia, is here on a visit in the interests of Mr. John Robertson, proprietor of the farm and one of the leading trotting horsemen in Australia. Mr. Taylor has been visiting the leading stock farms in search of a first class stallion and was delighted with those he saw, but there was one horse that he determined to buy and after seeing him trot an eighth in fifteen seconds he looked no further. The horse is known to fame as Owyhee and earned a record of 2:11 on the Eastern circuit a few years ago and won over $10,000 in purses, although never having been started in a stake.

The colts and fillies by this horse at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm are as fine as any foaled at that celebrated nursery of speed, and while it was with reluctance that Mr. Taylor's offer was accepted, Mr. Boyd has this consolation: he has a full brother to the horse, and in far-away Australia Owyhee will doubtless lead all other trotters and sires. Owyhee is one of the finest types of a trotting horse in California, if not in the United States. He resembles the Mambrino Patchen family in conformation; in action he is a line trotter, and one of the boldest going, gamest and most intelligent ever driven. His breeding is as follows: Sired by Chas. Derby 2:20 (sire of Much Better 2:07½, Derby Princess 2:08½, Diablo 2:09½, Owyhee 2:11, Cibolo 2:13½, Little Better 2:11½ and fourteen others in 2:30 list); dam Ida Wood, dam of Babe Marion 2:17½ by Simmons 2:28, one of the best and greatest sons of Geo. Wilkes 2:22. The second dam was Ida W. by Mambrino Patchen, the king of broodmare sires; and the third dam thoroughbred.

Owyhee, in his last campaign through the Grand Circuit which was in 1899, made a wonderful showing in the hands of the lamented Tom Keating. Out of nine starts he won seven first moneys, was once second and once third, and in three races he met and defeated a majority of the best trotters in his class in America. The following year he was retired to the stud and the young colts and fillies by him are grand lookers.

The price paid by Mr. Taylor for this stallion was $5000 and he is well worth every dollar of the money, as he will be a show ring winner in Australia as well as a race winner as it is the intention to enter him for premiums on the track and in the show ring.

Mr. Taylor has also purchased through W. G. Layng the handsome four year old mare Zehambra, owned by Messrs. Bennett and Goodall. She is a daughter of Chas. Derby 2:20 and Peronella by Prince Red; second dam Caroline by Yosemite; third dam Phaccola (grandam of Lena Holly 2:17½) by Silverthreads; fourth dam Minnehaha (dam of Beautiful Bells 2:29, etc.) by Stephen's Bald Chief; fifth dam Nettie Clay by C. M. Clay, Jr., 22; sixth dam by Abdallah 1; seventh dam by Engineer II. Few better bred or handsomer individuals ever left California than these. They will leave for Australia on Spreckels Bros.' steamship next Thursday.

Still Further Improvements.

There is to be no halt in the march of improvements at the Brighton Beach course. In addition to the club house, now about completed, the new paddock and new field stand and other improvements, President Engeman has decided that the steeplechase course needs tuning up. He has instructed track Superintendent Clare to proceed with the work at once. The course will receive a coat of top-dressing and will be resodded. New jumps will be built and everything that is possible will be done to make the course more attractive to the owners of cross-country horses and those who admire racing between the flags. President Engeman's action in planning these improvements is a recognition of the wondrous change which has been wrought in this branch of the sport by Messrs. Howland, Follansbee, Hitchcock, Alexandre and their fellow members active in the affairs of the Steeplechase and Hunt Association. There was a time when cross-country racing was viewed with suspicion, but that time has passed. Bettors now wager on jumping races with as much confidence as they would bet on a flat race, and it has come to pass that no holiday program is complete without a race through the field or over the sticks. A hurdle race or a steeplechase is an event extraordinary to the holiday visitors, and while doing everything possible for the horsemen and the regular patrons of the sport, Brighton also proposes to cater to the holiday element and thus win new supporters for the turf.

One week from next Tuesday is the day set for the sale of horses, mares, geldings and fillies from the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 246 Third street, San Francisco.

J. E. Swarts, Wingham, Ont., owner of Harold H. 2:04, will campaign a green horse this year called Eldemar by Simmocolon, that is said to be very promising. He is credited with a trial of 2:12½ last year.

Zomboyette, the three year old filly by Zombro out of a mare by Silver Bow, worked a mile at Los Angeles last week in 2:20. She is headed for first money in the Occident Stake this year, in which she is entered.

Ed Geers is at the Cleveland track with his stable of campaigners, which were shipped there last week from Memphis. Seven which were trained at Memphis are missing, as Geers has shipped them home to Buffalo.

Mr. C. C. Christie, owner of The Roman, paid a visit to the Memphis track last week, and saw Dick Benson drive this son of McKinney, a mile in 2:13 all by himself. The gelding has not made a break this spring.

Sylvanway 2:10½ by Steinway is in M. B. Smith's stable at Charter Oak Park. The mare hasn't raced for two years, or since the accident she met with in a workout, but she is showing fast quarters and is going apparently sound.

The recent reported sale of Eula Mac (3) 2:17½ by McKinney 2:11½ fell through and is declared off.

The old mare Moonstone 2:09, now thirteen years old, and who made her record seven years ago, is in training again.

The Cornelius D. that is being entered through the North Pacific Circuit is not the horse of that name by McKinney. The McKinney horse is still in Walter Maben's string at Los Angeles and is being entered on the California Circuit.

Lady Larsen was driven a mile in 2:28 at Oakland last Friday immediately after the race in which she finished third. Harry Patrick was up behind her and said that with a good day and track the mare could trot a mile better than 2:25.

Abdine and Wayboy, two California bred pacers now owned at Honolulu, were worked out together at the track there two weeks ago and finished noses apart in 2:20. The annual race meeting, held on June 11th each year, promises to be the most successful ever held there.

An Eastern paper makes the statement that it costs $300 to ship a horse to Cleveland. This is a gross error. It costs less than one-third that sum per head where a carload is shipped. Of course, if a horse has a palace car to himself his owner must pay for the luxury.

Up to the time of his departure from Memphis for Cleveland, The Abbot had not worked a mile better than 2:10. This horse is said to be in superb condition, and from all that can be learned it is quite likely that Geers believes him capable of at least equaling his record.

There are few three year olds in training this year in California that will be raced outside their stake engagements. The three year old purses offered by the Breeders Association failed to fill. Owners are not racing two and three year olds any more except in stake engagements.

C. D. Jeffries, as agent, has bought from Thos. S. Griffith, of Spokane, the pacing gelding J. P. Adams, trial 2:12; the trotting mare Gayson, trial 2:18; the trotting gelding McKinley Jr. 2:21, and the Zombro-Altamont stallion Gyr Falcon, that is showing miles in 2:40 with a few weeks' work.

Lou Crellin, of Pleasanton, sold the handsome pair of black mares by Charles Derby that were pictured in this paper two weeks ago. Major Banning, of Los Angeles, it is reported, paid $1600 for the pair. They were young mares, one being three and the other four years old and very evenly matched.

L. L. Ormsby, Boise City, Idaho, reports that his mares, Lyla 2:27, Altateil and Lady Alfred, which were bred to Zombro last year, are all safely in foal. The first two are full sisters to Chehalis 2:04½, while Lady Alfred will be remembered as the winner of the 2:15 trot at the Oregon State Fair last fall.

Daniel Mahany, superintendent of Hon. Frank Jones' Maplewood Farm, Portsmouth, N. H., has taken Eleata 2:08½, Idolita 2:12, and ten other horses to Granite State Park, Dover, N. H., where they will be trained by Hiram Tozier. It is said that Ben Walker will be the farm's race driver this season.

An automobile in tow of a buggy was a novelty noticed in town Sunday. The machine was from San Francisco and became disabled near Menlo Park. A young man and his best girl, out this way for a buggy ride, are richer by several dollars for consenting to towing the disabled machine back to the city.—San Mateo Leader.

Col. Kirkpatrick has received word that his fast pacer, Clipper 2:06, is working nicely at Indianapolis and eats better than he ever did in California. When in training here he was usually a very dainty feeder and began losing flesh as soon as the racing season opened, but he has a good appetite now and eats everything placed before him.

Alderman Dudley S. Valentine, of New York City, purchased on the 28th of last month the pacing gelding, Coney 2:02 by McKinney 2:11½, and paid the sum of $7000 cash for him. Mr. Valentine stated that he would at once place the horse in the hands of trainer Edward Lockwood, to be raced on the Grand Circuit in the free for all classes this year.

Dreamer 2:14½ is the property of Thomas W. Lawson, proprietor of Dreamwood Farm, and is a member of Mr. Lawson's racing string now in training at Dover, N. H. He is a horse possessed of a wonderful turn of speed. He made his record when three years old, and in a work-out stepped a half in 1:04½. Last year he was troubled with sore feet and did not race.

Millard Sanders opened out Dolly Dillon 2:07 at Cleveland last Friday for the first time arriving from California and the flying daughter of Sidney Dillon trotted the last quarter of a 2:18 mile in 30½ seconds, the last eighth in 15 second.

W. L. Snow has removed his horses from Hornellsville, N. Y., to the State Fair track at Syracuse, where he will finish their preparation for the season's campaign. In addition to the pacers Hal B. 2:04½, Charley Hayt 2:06½, Fanny Dillard 2:06½ and Council Chimes 2:07½, he has the trotters Red Princess 2:12½, Eula Mac 2:17½ and several others, including the fast green mare, Julia M. by Zombro 2:11, that was recently purchased at the Cleveland sale by A. H. Miller, of Buffalo.

Trainer James Gatcomb now owns the whole of the noted pacer Audubon Boy 2:06. Gatcomb owned a third of the horse, the other two-thirds being owned by James Hanley, of Providence. Mr. Hanley wished to own the whole of him or else dispose of his interest and wrote to Mr. Gatcomb and stated the amount which he would give or take. The latter elected to buy and sent Mr. Hanley a check for the amount. The sale was made on the basis of a $10,000 valuation, the same amount which they paid for him last season.

Boodle Jr., a grandly bred young stallion owned by Hon. Jesse D. Carr of Salinas, is one of the most promising young sires in California. His colts are very uniform in looks and size, being strongly built and very smoothly turned. Boodle Jr. will be brought to San Francisco and shown during the sale of Mr. Carr's horses, which will take place at the salesyard corner Van Ness avenue and Market street June 26th. Boodle Jr. is by Boodle 2:12½, dam Nina B. by Electioneer.

Mr. G. W. Wempe, of the well known firm of Wempe Bros., box manufacturers, has gone to Europe for a sojourn of several months. Mr. Wempe will be in London during the coronation of King Edward and will make a long stay in Germany, where he will doubtless attend all the trotting meetings, as he is an enthusiast in that sport. He left instructions to have all the payments kept up on the entries he has in the Breeders Futurity and other colt stakes. May he have a pleasant trip to the land of his birth and a safe return.

Several trainers left Hanford for Fresno last Saturday with their horses, as the track at the last named place is in fine condition for training and more suitable for making speed over. Among those who made the change were S. Walter with Mabel C. 2:31, pacer; S. A. Eddy with the green pacer Dr. W. and two more unmarked sidewheelers, Dan Leggette with the pacer Anis Hanscomb 2:28, L. Morris with Lady M., a pacer without a record, and J. Depoister with the trotter Peter Jackson 2:41 and a three year old pacing colt. These horses are all being trained for this year's races.

Mr. C. E. Truesdell writes that he is now located at Centralia, Washington, with his stallion Native State 2:16½ by Star Sultan, and has already bred him to ten mares with twenty five more booked so far. The breeding season does not begin as early in Washington as in California and Native State will have a heavy season in all probability, as he is a grand individual and is much admired by the breeders of that locality. Mr. Truesdell took with him Gift, the dam of You Bet 2:11½. She has a chestnut filly by Zolock that is entered in the Breeders Futurity. He also has the Palo Alto bred mare Zenoide by Piedmont.

Jimmy Dwain has charge of the Salinas track and is keeping it in excellent shape for training horses over this year. Last week on workout day, Mr. Vanderhurst's Diablitia by Diablo was worked out there with Mr. B. V. Sargent's black filly by a son of Sidney out of a sister to Keno 2:23½. Diablitia was in front at the wire in 2:22. Larkin W., a three year old by Boodle Jr., was given two heats, one in 2:37 and another in 2:32. He is one of the most promising young trotters in that section. Bruno 2:16, Mr. C. Z. Herbert's stallion, has made a good season at the Salinas track, and will now be put in training for the circuit races. There are about twenty trotters and pacers in training at Salinas.

A very handsome little miss with a royal lineage made her appearance at Martin Carter's Nutwood Stock Farm last Sunday. She is a bay filly by Mendocino, sire of Idolita 2:12½ as a three year old, and others, and her dam is a full sister to the great champion matinee stallion, John A. McKerron 2:06½ by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, second dam the great broodmare Ingar by Director 2:17, third dam Anna Titus, another great broodmare by Echo 462, fourth dam the Tiffany mare, dam of Gibraltar 2:22½, and Annie C. 2:23½, and therefore a great broodmare, although her pedigree is untraced. There is Electioneer, Director, Nutwood and Wilkes blood in this filly and Mr. Carter prizes her very highly.

The Walla Walla correspondent of the Rural Spirit says that William Hogoboom is training quite a number of good ones at that place, among them being Montague by Roscoe, a very promising colt. He has shown a 2:30 gait and is still coming; a two year old, D. E. Knight, full brother to Daymont 2:10½, who is a hammer; Hallie Hinghes and Helen Reed, both by Pricemont, and entered in the trots and paces for youngsters. Both are very promising and going nicely; Teddy, colt by Diablo-Elmorene, entered at Seattle, has a good way of going and will make his name remembered; Daymont will soon be in training; Linmont 2:23½ is doing a good business in the stud and looks big and strong. He is by Almont Medium and the sire of Daymont 2:10½; Temperance is being trained for the running path and takes his work nicely; Jack O'Rourke, a young thing by Francisco, is taking nicely to harness; Chas. H. by Linmont and Mignonette are doing very well.

OAKWOOD PARK STOCK FARM.

Beneath the shadow of Mount Diablo, at the head of the San Ramon Valley, where the rays of the rising sun kiss the dewdrops as they fall from the flower-bedecked valleys and hillsides, lies one of the most beautiful, picturesque and best-appointed stock farms in this or any other State in the Union, known as Oakwood Park Stock Farm. This magnificent place derives its name from the majestic oaks which adorn these grounds. As they meet the gaze of the visitor on entering the farm these mighty monarchs of the forest, placed there by Nature's handiwork, spread their mighty arms over a vast territory of this large domain. Here in summer the charming avenues shaded by evergreens and lined by deciduous fruit trees, the orchards, the orange grove, the vineyards, the flowers and rare exotics, the beautiful summer residence, the lake, the paddocks, stables built of oak, ornamented by polished wood, all embellished with an air of grandeur, present a scene beautiful to behold.

But it is not those giant oaks, nor yet those green fields; neither is it the sublime, surrounding grandeur of those orchards, groves, summer residence, stables, or aught else, that inspires this article, much as we may admire them all. It is that to which our innate feelings turn as we wend our way to that large paddock where stands the illustrious grandson of the old Hero of Chester, Steinway. As we look this old-time champion over we are reminded of the many conquests his immediate descendants have achieved. There he stands, with head still proudly erect, yet his swayed back, his bended knees, the waning lustre of his eye are certain reminders of the mile stones of advancing years. But, like the aged patriarch of old, he can point with exultant pride to the achievements of his immediate progeny. And well he might, for his heritage is heralded the world over wherever the trotting horse is known or recognized. His mighty sons, Charles Derby and Klatawah, have won for their illustrious sire an imperishable crown. Recognizing in this old-time champion the qualifications of a great racehorse and sire, himself a champion in his day and class, we do not marvel at his siring champions. His son, W. Wood, was champion in his day, gaining a four-year-old record of 2:07. And what of the great Klatawah, the holder of the world's three-year old record, 2:05½, a record, in our opinion, that will remain unbeaten for years to come. His daughter Cricket was the first mare to enter the 2:10 pacing class. Agitato gained another world's record of 2:09½ as a three-year old.

As we enumerate some of the notable descendants of this great sire, with pride we mention his celebrated son, Charles Derby. This distinguished son of the great Steinway, himself a great racehorse, with his very limited opportunities, has proven himself one of the greatest sires of this age. Among his produce are Much Better 2:07½, Diablo 2:09½, Derby Princess 2:08½, Cibolo 2:13½, Flare Up 2:14, Ed Lafferty 2:16½, Owyhee 2:11, and a host of others equal if not their superiors in speed and beauty.

Diablo, the great Diablo, is unquestionably Charles Derby's greatest son and has produced Clipper 2:06, Sir Albert S. 2:08½, Diodine 2:10½, Daedalion 2:11, Diawood 2:11, Tags 2:11½, and many more.

Having briefly sketched the stallions of great celebrity here, we will now review some of the celebrated matrons on this great breeding farm. The first grand matron to attract attention is the beautiful mare Katie G. by Electioneer. This is the dam of Chas. Derby 2:20, Klatawah 2:05½ and three more in the charmed circle, and if she produced none other but the former two, Derby and Klatawah, she is entitled to entree in the foremost ranks of the greatest matrons of the American trotting turf.

The next to command admiration is the great Bertha. This magnificent individual is by Alcantara, the great son of the mighty Geo. Wilkes. This mare came into prominence in her younger matronly days as the dam of Diablo, four year old, 2:09½; her next produce being Elf 2:12½, Ed Lafferty 2:16½, J. F. B., yearling record 2:26½; this latter colt we had seen pace a quarter as a yearling in 31½ seconds and we then predicted for him a record breaking future and advised his retirement until of mature age, but unfortunately our advice was not heeded—he was slaughtered in his infancy. Kawooskum, Demonio, Bertha Derby, Don Derby 2:13½ and about four others, all gems of the brightest order, must inevitably place this grand matron in the category of celebrated dams, and when the temple of fame is erected in memoriam of producing dams, let the name of Bertha be inscribed thereon. Tone by Ferguson is another mare who is entitled to more than passing notice as the dam of Agitato, three year old, 2:09½, a world's record when made. Flash by Egmont, dam of Javelin 2:08½, Flare Up 2:14 and several others of fine quality. Algerdette by Allendorf is another matron of queenly stature and the dam of several in the list. Addie Ash, dam of Cibolo 2:13½ at four years; Mia Louise 2:15½ and many others. May by Anteo is a beautiful specimen of matronly appearance. This mare is the dam of Babiola, of whom great things are expected this season. She is being trained and has already shown extraordinary speed and is looked upon as one capable of entering the select circle before the season closes this year. The great Electioneer is also represented here by his daughter Lunado, the dam of Sylvanway, three year old record 2:10½, and is also the dam of Darkway, recently sold to Eastern parties for the sum of three thousand dollars. It is expected of him to earn fame on the Grand Circuit, where he is destined to shine, as he had shown two minutes speed for his purchaser. Clytie 2d, dam of Neerut 2:12½, who sired Neeretta 2:09½, that was subsequently exported to Europe. Bella 2d, dam of Dr. Hammond, trial of 2:07; Maggie McGregor by Robert McGregor, who earned the title of monarch of the homestretch, and who stands to-day as sire of the champion of all champions, the great Cresceus. Of Maggie McGregor we would be recreant to our convictions if we did not place her, too, amongst the greatest speed producing dams of the present age. W. W. Foote earned a two year old record of 2:15, and her ill-fated and unlucky son Algregon 2:11, had fortune been more kindly disposed toward him, we have no hesitancy in stating, would have ranked in the foremost class of the pacing celebrities of the present day.

Space here forbids the details of the hundred highly bred and celebrated matrons owned on this great farm; of their produce we can but give merely passing notice. Their produce is in almost every State and Territory in the Union; their fame is scattered even in European countries, even to far-off Australia—and pity it is that more of the product of this great establishment had not fallen into the hands of those whose pride and pleasure it is to develop speed, for had it been so, Oakwood Park Farm would have been as celebrated to-day as a speed producing establishment as any farm on the American continent.

The magnificent farm was founded about twenty-five years ago by the late Dan Cook, whose pleasure and ambition it was to make this place famous as a horse paradise, and how well he succeeded is related above, but the fates were against him. In the zenith of his greatness he was gathered to his fathers. He was later succeeded by his brother, the late Seth Cook. This enterprising gentleman had entered upon the career mapped out by his deceased brother, but again after a few years of devotion to his deceased brother's ideal he too was summoned and had answered death's call. Yet while these enterprising gentlemen lived it was their pleasure to establish on this magnificent farm the foundation of one of the greatest breeding establishments on the American continent, and how well they succeeded is a living monument to their superior judgment, first by procuring the choicest blood lines of the American trotting stock, and by transplanting here the foundation was thus laid which gives to Oakwood Park Stock Farm an undying name, and right here we will Gamble that to the keen perception and unerring judgment of the only Sam the great success of this breeding establishment is immeasurably due.

After the death of the brothers, Dan and Seth Cook, this property came into the hands of its present owner, J. F. Boyd, Esq. This gentleman, though entirely unknown to the breeding industry, grasped the situation like a veteran and with the assistance of able counsel carried out the object for which this place had already become famous in a manner reflecting unbounded credit even on one unaccustomed to this line of business. Under his ownership the place became famous. In the first year of Mr. Boyd's occupying of the place the great Diablo was ushered into prominence. Then came W. Wood, Much Better, Agitato, Algregon, Klatawah and a host of others bringing name and fame to this great establishment. The achievements of the wonderful produce of this farm was heralded the length and breadth of this great land and large prices realized at public and private sale. We cannot here refrain from eulogizing the master minds that conducted the business of this great concern and brought it to a successful issue. But alas, for fate, in the zenith of his hope, while his family was growing up into promising youthful manhood, with the brightest hopes encircling his household, we are reminded of the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death. Two of the brightest gems of his household, with only the interval of a few months, were summoned to that bourn from which no traveler returns. With all the brightest hopes and ambitions, with all that opportunity could afford, beloved by all with whom they came in contact, a rude blast had swept them and they had fallen over an early grave. Poor Seth and Jack, over your grave we shed a silent tear, silent because we witnessed the heart burning grief of your beloved parents, for right well we know from your estimable character and the admiration in which you were held by those who knew you best, had you but survived the ordeal, that on your shoulders would have rested the mantle of responsibility to perpetuate the laudable objects for which this enterprise had been established.

For the future of this great industry we have some forebodings of an adverse character. Mr. Boyd, through grief for the loss of his beloved sons and the pressure of other business, and not caring to accept the weight and responsibility of conducting the affairs of this great farm wishes to be relieved and, we are informed, has placed it on the market, to be sold to the highest bidder. We have been an occasional visitor to this farm for about fifteen years and we are loth to believe that its owner can part with it. Still if it is the decree of fate we reluctantly accept it, but had we but the means we would own it before the setting of to-morrow's sun. This beautiful place contains about six thousand acres of beautiful mountain and valley land highly adapted for pasture and farming purposes, and still better for the purpose for which it had been adapted—its beautiful barns, paddocks, race track for training purposes and all the concomitants necessary to make it that which it is—beautiful Oakwood Park Stock Farm.

Valuable Roadster Injured.

Dr. E. J. Weldon has had his valuable road mare Elevator so badly injured in a runaway yesterday noon, that it is doubtful if she will ever be available for speeding purposes again. In fact, there is no assurance that her life will be saved, although Dr. McGowan, the veterinarian, who has the mare in charge, believes that he can save her life.

The accident occurred in the vicinity of Eighteenth and G streets. Frank Farley had Elevator out for exercise, and she got the best of him and ran away. Farley was thrown out and so badly bruised that he was taken to the Receiving Hospital. The mare fell and ran one of the shafts of the vehicle to which she was attached into her body under the forearm to a depth of fourteen inches.

Dr. Weldon received an offer of $500 for the animal a short time ago and refused it. Other horsemen value the animal at $1000.—Sacramento Record Union.

Elevator will be remembered by horsemen as the mare by Don Marvin with which Dr. Weldon finished third in the Stanford Stake at the State Fair in 1899, in which race Direct Heir was permitted to start under protest made by Dr. Weldon, that he was not eligible to the race, who also protested Dr. Frasse's Sister as she started in hoppers. The case was taken before the Board of Appeals, which decided that Elevator was entitled to second money, the protest against Direct Heir being sustained and that against Dr. Frasse's Sister being overruled.

Do Ants Have Horses Too?

Not long ago a French explorer, M. Charles Meissen, in travelling through Siam observed a species of small gray ants which were new to him. To his surprise he noticed among them from time to time an occasional ant which was much larger than the others and moved at a much swifter pace, and each of these larger ants, M. Meissen saw, always carried one of the gray ants on its back. This discovery led him to watch their movements closely. He soon saw that while the main body of gray ants was always on foot, they were accompanied by at least one of their own sort mounted on one of these larger ants. He mounted and detached himself now and then from the line, rode rapidly to the head, came swiftly back to the rear, and seemed to be in command of the expedition.—Little Chronicle.

A man who has every chance to know says that the reason that the European market is not as good as it was is not so much due to high prices as to the number of gold bricks which have been sent across the water as the real article.

Golden Gate Park Driving Club's Races.

Owing to the fact that there were many counter attractions, and possibly to the additional fact that for the first time for several years an admission fee was charged the public, the Golden Gate Park Driving Club did not have as large an attendance at its race meeting as has been usual on Decoration Day. However, there were a couple of thousand people present and the day's sport was very good, though a poor track and a heavy wind prevented any fast time being made. The meeting was held at the Oakland track. There was no bookmaking, but mutuals were sold at $2 each on the heats and an auction box provided for speculation on the result. Not a ticket was sold in the auction box, but at times the ticket seller was kept very busy handing out the pasteboards at $2 each on the heats.

Four races were on the card and all were won in straight heats, the winners being pacers in every instance.

In the first heat of the second race Jerry Doran started the Nutwood Wilkes pacer Dan Alden, a roadster owned in Oakland, that but for the fact that he hits his knees hard enough to be heard a hundred yards, would be able to pace in 2:15 or better. Dan Alden went away like a whirlwind, but under the continual knee banging became very tired and was staggering in the stretch. In trying to keep him in front Doran allowed the horse to get in front of the fast coming Velma, driven by H. Miller, and their sulky wheels locked. Dan Alden was a head in the lead as they crossed the wirelocked fast and then Miller's sulky was overturned and he was thrown out, but not injured. Velma galloped a half-mile and was caught by Dr. Dalziel, the efficient Marshal of the day. The heat was properly given to Velma and she won the race easily in the next.

The free-for-all was a rather tiresome affair, as the horses scored a dozen times before they got away. The race was won by Sable Le Grande, but it was little credit to him, and the affair left a bad impression on the spectators. All the other races were good contests with everybody trying, but this one looked bad. Had Mr. Parks been able to control his pacer Imp, that was badly rattled by the continued scoring and ran away, he would probably have upset the combination which was alleged so loudly after the race that a fight or two took place. The summary of the day's events follow:

First race, 2:40 class.

The Missouri Horse Market.

What is considered to be one of the largest contracts for horses ever entered into in the United States was closed in South St. Joseph, Mo., recently, when a firm agreed to supply 12,000 horses to be delivered at the rate of 500 per month for two years. Many sorts and varieties are included in the specifications, but it is thought that the most of the animals will find their way into the British army service.

At the last special sale of high class horses held in East St. Louis prices were very strong and all desirable offerings elicited the keenest sort of competition. Pairs sold as high as $1350, paid by C. L. Bacon, New York. A six year old trotting roadster with around 2:30 speed sold for $700 and a score or more commanded from that figure down to $500. It was frequently stated during the auction that it was very little of a horse that could be obtained for less than $300.

At a special sale of horses held recently in Omaha and lasting for two days the demand exceeded the supply. Medium to best drafters offered made from $150 to $234; 1500 pound export chunks sold up to $160, expressers to $175 and lighter and plainer sorts down to $120 to $150. Toppy single drivers sold to $300 and surrey horses to $150. In all instances Chicago prices were paid and the sale was considered the most satisfactory ever held in Omaha.—Breeders Gazette.

The President's Family Enjoy Riding.

The Roosevelt family are all enthusiasts in the sport of horseback riding. The President misses, rain or shine, but one day a week—Sunday—to sit upon the back of his favorite horse, Bleistein—unless Bleistein is sick: the President never is. At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon Sergeant Mark P. Wilson, of Troop K, Eleventh Cavalry, who has been assigned as orderly to the President, appears at the south front of the White House, the private entrance, mounted on his own horse and leading Bleistein. He dismounts and walks the animals up and down until 3:50. At that moment the President runs briskly down the steps and jumps into the saddle.

Sometimes he trots his horse out the gate, but generally he walks past the admiring crowd and lifts his hat with measured dignity. His orderly rides about fifteen paces directly behind him and always carries a loaded 44 at his side. That is the program when the President rides alone. As he goes far out into the suburbs and takes the loneliest roads he can find, to get away from the turmoil of the city for a brief span, it is well that he is attended, for if only an accident should occur there would be otherwise no one to bring in the tidings. But the President is often accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and by friends. On such occasions there is no attendant orderly.

While Miss Alice Roosevelt is a superb horsewoman, and when in New York and Oyster Bay rides considerably, she has never yet ridden in Washington. Theodore, Jr., is never seen riding in Washington. Master Archie, however, on his little Shetland Algonquin, accompanied by a groom, appears about semi-weekly. He never rides with his father because his little mount cannot keep pace with Bleistein, and when his father gets beyond the city limits he likes to do a little fast riding. He is not as sensitive about the gaze of the public as is his father.

He mounts his steed in the midst of a crowd in the south grounds, the public side of the White House. Nor does he mind being "snapped," while his father has given instructions to keep all "kodakers" away from his gate, and when he discovers one "laying for him" politely presents the side of his head.

A little, low brick house behind the Army and Navy Building and opposite the Corcoran Art Gallery is—though no one would ever take it to be—the President's stable. It was built in 1869, and has served many Presidents these many years, with no improvements or enlargements, and barely painting and repairs.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

CONDUCTED BY

WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C. V. C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses, cattle or dogs by sending a plain description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

J. B. O., Merced—I have a mare that sprained her forward ankle about five weeks ago and she is still lame in the ankle now. What treatment would you recommend? Please answer in your veterinary department of your valuable paper.

Answer—If the ligaments of the fetlock joint be sprained and the fever has by this time entirely disappeared from the part, but the mare still lame, blistering and rest would be the treatment. In giving advice for a lame horse without seeing and examining the animal, there is often dissatisfaction, due to a wrong diagnosis. I would therefore advise you to have the mare examined and prescribed for by a qualified veterinary surgeon, if there be any located near you. If not, by your describing the appearance of the part, the condition of the lameness in walking, trotting, turning, backing, etc., the age of the mare, the way in which the lameness started, whether suddenly or gradually, and anything else that may assist in diagnosing the case I shall give you further advice on the subject.

J. J. M., Visalia—Will you please give me a remedy in your veterinary department for horses rubbing their tails. I have several horses in a clean stable that are well cared for that have taken to rubbing and in one case all of the hair is gone at root of tail. Have tried all known remedies without success.

Answer—Rubbing the tail may be due to rectal worms, irritation of the skin of the tail or quarters, nervousness in a horse that is not worked regularly, habit acquired from being kept in a small box stall, etc. Try and find out the cause and if possible remedy it. In any of these cases it is well to prevent the horse from further irritating those parts by putting him in a single stall with a scantling hanging horizontally on each side of him, about the height of his stifle, so that he cannot touch any part of the stall with his tail. Thoroughly wash the parts that are injured and apply carbolised vaseline to them. Look for signs of the causes mentioned above and report.

San Francisco, Saturday, June 7, 1902.

VALLEJO'S ENTRIES will close June 16th, one week from next Monday. Enter at Vallejo. It will be the best meeting ever held at the Navy Yard town.

A REVIEW of the catalogue of sale of Pierce Bros.' horses, which are to be disposed of at Wm. J. Layng's Occidental Horse Exchange in this city Tuesday, June 17th, will appear in our next issue. There will be draft horses from Yerba Buena Stock Farm, Inferna 2:24½ (chestnut stallion by Diablo 2:09½, out of Biscari by Director 2:17), several fine broodmares and foals, and from the Santa Rosa Stock Farm a consignment of standard-bred trotters that will surpass in breeding, looks and training any ever offered by these enterprising gentlemen.

THE STANFORD STAKE OF 1904 will have close to 80 entries, and the list will be published next week. Assistant Secretary of the State Agricultural Society Harry Lowden writes us as follows, under date of June 5th: "The Stanford to be contested this year is now worth $1200, with two more payments yet to be made. For 1903 it is close to $1600 and with future payments yet to come it will go over $2000 sure. In 1900 the total value was only $865, so you see we are pushing the harness stakes along. The Running Stallion Stake this year will, beyond a doubt, run over $6000. Some of the best colts of the State have declared to make their final payments. I look for over 20 starters, as 52 are now left in."

NAPA FILLED EIGHT PURSES out of the twelve advertised, those in which there were sufficient entries being the 2:40, 2:24, 2:19 and 2:15 trotting races and the 2:15, 2:20, 2:25 and green class pacing events. There are from eight to fourteen entries in each race, which is a better showing than has been made for an early meeting for years. Secretary Bell phoned us yesterday that the list would be mailed us in time to publish in our next week's issue. The classes that failed to fill were the 2:30 and 2:12 class trots and the 2:12 and free-for-all pacing events. Additional purses will be arranged and advertised and an effort made to provide races for the fastest classes at both gaits. Napa has done well and will have one of the greatest meetings ever held at the track.

LOS ANGELES announces its program of harness races in our advertising columns to-day. There are thirteen stakes, the smallest $600, the largest $1000. There are two of the thousand dollar stakes, one for the free for-all trot, the other for the free-for-all pace. The 2:14, 2:16, 2:19 and 2:23 class trotters are given $700 each, the 2:13, 2:17 and 2:20 class pacers are offered the same amounts, and there is a stake of $600 for the three year old trotters and one of like amount for the three year old pacers. A nomination stake of $700 is offered the 2:30 class trotters, and also for the 2:25 class pacers. The program is a most excellent one, and the purses aggregate very close to ten thousand dollars, the exact figures being $9600. Few associations this side the Mississippi river give as much money for harness races as is hung up annually by Los Angeles. The track there is one of the best in America, and it is about the last meeting of the year. Entries will close July 1st for these purses and owners should be certain that their entries are made and mailed in time.

SAN JOSE'S fair and race meeting will be held this year on the 3d, 4th and 5th of July. The new Board of Directors of the 5th Agricultural District hope at this meeting to be able to get out of debt and the chances are that they will do so. It is proposed to give one of the old time fairs, premiums having been provided for all sorts of products and the people of Santa Clara and San Mateo counties are being entreated to make a display of the districts products that will be a credit to it and them. The date of the meeting is one that should suit everybody, and on the day of the national holiday standing room will doubtless be at a premium at the beautiful park and race track owned by the San Jose association. There have been nine purses of $500 each arranged for trotters and pacers. The association makes the announcement that the money will be paid at the close of each race, which is an attractive feature as well as a very pleasing one for horsemen. Entries for these purses will close Monday, June 16th, and we hope that every horse owner in California will enter and assist the San Jose association to get on its feet. It has one of the hand-somest pieces of property in California, and one of the best tracks ever built. A successful meeting there will help the horse interests all along the line.

VALLEJO'S MEETING will open the main circuit on August 12th, and entries for the fourteen generous guaranteed stakes will close June 16th, which is one week from next Monday. The stakes for trotters are $700 for the 2:30 class, $600 for the 2:24 class and $500 each for the 2:19, 2:15 and 2:12 classes. All the stakes for pacers are $500 each, and the 2:25, 2:20, 2:15, 2:12 and free-for-all classes are provided for. Besides these, there are stakes for colts and horses owned in the district which make the aggregate sum hung up for harness horses nearly $7000. This is considered big money over East at any place not on the Grand Circuit and California horsemen should appreciate this fact. Vallejo has a splendid track, has one of the best climates for training horses in the State, and is known as the best betting town on the circuit. The Navy Yard being located there, where about two thousand men are employed, there is always a good attendance at the Vallejo races and all or nearly all like to speculate on the results. The Vallejo association is making a special effort to give a first class meeting this year and the excellent program prepared should meet the approval of horse owners and result in a large entry list. We ask every reader of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to look over the Vallejo advertisement in this issue and if a horse owner, to make entries in every class where there is a chance to win. A good entry list for Vallejo will encourage other associations that have not yet arranged programs to do as well.

ALL THE STAKES FILLED that were offered by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association for its Fresno meeting, with the exception of those for three year olds. This is a splendid showing for the first stakes of the year and show that "money will make the mare go." The California, a stake of $2000 for trotters of the 2:24 class, has no less than 22 entries, which includes about all the most promising green trotters in training here this year. The Raisin City stake of $1000 for pacers of the 2:20 class has seventeen entries, the 2:40 trot, eight, and the 2:30 pace, twelve. This is an average of fourteen entries to each class, which is an excellent and a most encouraging showing. Strange as it may seem, not a single entry was made in the three year old pace, and but four in the three year old trot, which made it necessary to declare both these events off. There must be at least two hundred three year olds being worked in California this year, many of them of great promise, but it is very evident that their owners do not intend racing them this year unless it be in the stakes in which they are already entered. But the aged horses are numerous enough to make a most successful circuit. It is true that none of the big stock farms are represented in the entries, but this will not lessen the interest in racing, and if the purses are won by "small breeders," an increased impetus will be given the business of breeding and racing horses. From every point the harness racing season of 1902 has a most glorious prospect. Let us hope that the district associations will get as large or still larger lists of entries to their programs and that the circuit will be a success from start to finish and reflect credit on all those who participate in it in any way. The horsemen have made an excellent start. Let there be an effort to make as good an ending.

Early Closing Stakes Fill Well.

Success has followed the announcement of the big early closing stakes for the Breeders meeting at Fresno. The California, a $2000 stake for 2:24 class trotters, has 22 entries. The Raisin City $1000 stake for 2:20 pacers received 17 entries. The 2:40 class trot, $600, has 8 entries and the 2:30 pace, $600, received 12 entries. This is an average of nearly fifteen entries to each race. The three year old stakes did not fill. Everything points to a very successful circuit this year. The entries to the stakes closed are as follow:

Prominent Amateur Trainers.

A short time since a writer in the New York Sun contributed a very readable article on amateur drivers, which in view of the great interest being taken in speedway and matinee racing at the present time, is reproduced as follows:

Go where you will to-day and you will find more interest taken in the trotter than in many years. When he lowered the trotting record of 2:02½, and the American, world's for that matter, race record of 2:03½, last season, the majestic, incomparable king of trotters, Cresceus, did much to restore to popularity the trotter. There is not so great a desire now to own a fast pacer as a few seasons ago, and unless Mr. Billings' Little Boy 2:01½, to wagon, cuts Star Pointer's 1:59½ this season, interest in the pacers will be confined seemingly to "class" pacers, that is horses that meet successfully their fellows in races down the line. At the big auctions here and in Chicago it is to be seen that there is more demand to-day for fast easily driven trotters than in years. In a way the Cleveland matinees and competitions of the past two seasons for the $2500 Boston challenge cup have accomplished this much-to-be desired end.

More men of wealth are becoming enthusiasts as owners of fast record trotters, that they can themselves drive at speed in amateur contests and impromptu road brushes, than of old. No one can estimate how greatly this has benefited the breeder, the trainer, the owner, the stabler, the harness maker, the blacksmith, the feedman and maker of speed vehicles. Harry K. Devereux of Cleveland is the leader. He is a prosperous young business man in his native city, has always been interested in horses of the pleasure-affording class, has kept away from the pool box and speculative department entirely, and has taken active interest himself, developing his horses' speed and encouraging his fellows along that line.

Somehow successful horsemen are shrewd business men, and Mr. Devereux has invested money in horses wisely and at all times well. He knows to a nicety a horse's capacity, has bought such as he fancied at rather moderate figures, and to-day were he disposed to sell any he owns could realize a very handsome profit.

Years ago he and John Splan became intimates, and he studied closely the veteran's methods. To-day he uses the same style of sensible check rein seen on Mr. Splan's harnesses. A face piece supporting the upper jaw bit, side check rein passing through runners at the rosette and buckled at the smaller bit, with an under jaw strap just taut enough to keep the mouth closed without cramping. His horse can move his head with every freedom and it is the very best style of check rein possible. Cresceus wears it and it is to be recalled that when he, too, began with fast horses Mr. Ketcham began in the Splan school at the Cleveland track.

Somehow horses, as a rule, wearing this check rein require less of booting, yet in Cresceus' case it is not so. He wears quarter boots, knee boots, arm boots, forward high shin boots, pass boots and scalpers behind. A year ago Mr. Ketcham thought to do away with the scalpers would be to increase Cresceus' speed, and he tried it only to find his horse touched, so they were replaced. Horses that go with the determination he ever evidenced need protection and in plenty. No one can find fault with his stride, however, and his head freedom, perhaps, has not a little to do with this.

Few amateurs have of themselves balanced their fastest trotters. They have had the benefit of trainers who fitted their horses perfectly for fast miles, then turned them over to the owner to drive at matinees. Mr. Devereux has been a busy man several seasons, and to his efforts as speedmaker much of John A. McKerron's greatness is due. He has left the early work to Charles Tanner, but Clevelanders all say that he gives his horses all their real work at speed throughout each season.

This close study and constant association with his horses is beneficial to any man who is at all interested. Many amateurs take to experimenting as to shoeing fast horses, and there the professional will ever excel them. He knows that a slight change of foot requires time to bring about and can wait. The man who pays the bills maybe tires of this waiting, and orders his horses to another speedmaker.

The man who is constantly changing foot balance and construction of the hoof is destined to not a few disappointments. Few who enter the field as self-trainers allow their smiths to exercise his talents at will. That the shoer knows well his specialty is best shown by the statement that the same man shod Star Pointer when he paced in 1:59½ made the set that Cresceus wore in his 2:02½ mile, and shod John A. McKerron when he trotted to wagon in 2:06½.

And yet six in every ten who have driven miles as fast as 2:20 or even 2:30 imagine that they are fully capable of dictating to their smith just how to prepare the foot and how to fashion the shoes. Good reinsmanship and skilled training are different entirely. The well conditioned horse can be frequently driven as fast by the owner, if he can but sit still and rate at all well, as by the trainer. The latter, as a rule, rarely drives the horses within seconds of their speed, and is content to let the horses step fractions at speed, calculating the reserve by the way the horse trots and the amount of tension at the bit end.

While Mr. Devereux is a wonderful horseman and John Shepard of Boston among the very best, we have in this city one of the very best amateur drivers, who would accomplish about as much as a trainer. Colonel Fred N. Lawrence has since boyhood been an experienced, skilled reinsman, a very careful and entirely expert conditioner, and of the most courageous stamp. He rode races on the Long Island tracks when a boy, has owned many trotters since and never paid sensational prices to obtain celebrities to retire to his stable. With the big mare Lottie by Look he defeated the cracks of the speedway. Tipwald 2:21½ he improved not a little. Clayton 2:14½, J. P. Baizer's star road trotter, was yet another he bettered. Then came Carlyle Carne 2:11½, a horse of sensational speed, but not first class in a hard race in high class company.

Given almost any fast trotter, Col. Lawrence would hold his own. He is one of the very few never to lose his head. It would be far better for the horses if owners could let the trainer, or even the caretaker, do the slow road work and never sit behind their horses until they had been "repeated" many fairly fast miles. Once they strike the road all well-laid plans as to "going slowly" are swept away the moment some one brushes alongside. "Just once would do no harm," and that series of brushes long before their horses are really ready does the injurious work, and knocks their chances endwise.

But Col. Lawrence, like Mr. Devereux, can always wait and give the staying up road work fully as nicely as the sensational moves under the watch. He has had experience and learned the lesson that "haste makes waste." He is never backward as to accepting suggestions from the trainers, whose close friend he is, and he never allows his horses to interfere with legitimate business pursuits. Col. Lawrence is among the very best road drivers of all America, and if his latest acquisition, Gracie Onward 2:12, does not go to the front as a star wagon trotter, not a few, especially in Kentucky, where she is best known, will be surprised.

In Pittsburgh the amateur movement has been pronounced. Few who are not acquainted there appreciate the number who have taken to driving fast horses at Brunots Island matinees weekly. There are such as Dr. Leek 2:09½, Rubber 2:10, Success 2:11½, Guy 2:12, Senator K. 2:13½, owned there, and men like Attorney General P. C. Knox, Harry Darlington, J. G. Bennett, all very wealthy, own, train and drive their trotters. As here and elsewhere, trotting interests have spread and much money has been circulated.

Men are to day buying young trotters, themselves superintending their education, hoping that as they advance in years they may become successful road and pleasure animals. Cost is the last consideration, and yet properly managed the wealthy man's stable need be no more of an extravagance than the more humble in life.

Mr. Shepard usually has paid high prices for his trotters—he never owned or drove a pacer—but last week in Whitewood 2:11½, he secured a 2:09 or 2:10 pole horse for but $1300. His business is so extensive that of necessity he gives over their training to James Golden, who for over twenty years has had charge of his stable stars. When, in fall, the horses are so conditioned as to trot out fast miles, Mr. Shepard takes them in hand and does his track driving. To-day, in the seventies, he is as ruddy and active, just as enthusiastic, as when a much younger man with horses. He attributes it all to his horses, and hopes this year to drive a pair to wagon to the world's record, below 2:12½.

Senator L. 2:09½, Altro L. 2:11½ and Whitewood 2:11½ are all he owns that are really fast, yet he keeps Riena 2:12½ in her old age, yet very satisfactory as a brush horse, turning her out in summer for grass and a long rest. With Senator L. and Altro L., two years ago, Mr. Shepard drove the Readville track in 2:12½, only a quarter of a second slower than the record. He would give more to accomplish the first pole mile in 2:10 with horses that he himself owns than to hitch Cresceus with any other and go in 2:05.

Mr. Hamlin, well known as breeder of so many 2:10 performers, is one of our very best reinsmen, yet all of his fast miles were behind his best horses at their best and trained to the hour by William J. Andrews, who was then head trainer at Village Farm. He drove Belle Hamlin 2:12½ and Justina 2:20 many years ago in 2:18, at the old Buffalo track; later he drove them miles as fast as 2:15, 2:14 and 2:13½.

Mr. C. K. G. Billings is a superb reinsman, yet he would not be as successful as an amateur trainer, as he always has had his horses "ready for the word," and has never had to wait, always having had so many at hand, one or more ready and waiting for his daily drive at speed. He has done amateur and professional interests much benefit in the few years he has been active as an amateur factor. At present he must own over 20 high class fast horses at Memphis and elsewhere, and can at any moment pay the asking price and secure a horse of his fancy. Over the Chicago snow path he for many years led all comers with horses from his West Side stable, and what he has accomplished as a skillful driver many, nearly all, know by this time. With Little Boy 2:06½, to harness, he has been miles in 2:01½ and 2:01½; with Free Bond 2:04½, he has driven a mile in just that notch here; with Lucille 2:09½, to harness, he has been a mile in 2:07; with Hontas Crooke 2:09, to harness, a mile in 2:07½ to wagon; Franker 2:21½, as a track performer, he has several times driven public miles down to 2:11, and in a losing heat at Memphis was timed alone in 2:10½. With Mr. Billings it will never be a case of self-training. His voluminous enterprises require all of his attention and he employs at a $5000 salary, Scott McCoy, a leading trainer, solely to train, prepare and superintend the stable.

James A. Murphy, formerly owner of Star Pointer 1:59½, is among our very best amateur drivers, and like Col. Lawrence, a capable conditioner. If in his youth and disposed to he could make his living as a trainer. He only drove Star Pointer once and then not faster than a four-minute clip. Had Mr. Billings owned "the Pointer Hoss," he surely would have tried his hand driving fast miles. Mr. Murphy owns the clever mare Zembia 2:11½, the fast pacer Rotha J. 2:12½, Wesley R. 2:10 and others.

America's really leading amateur as to having trained and driven one fast heat is little known. He drove for a purse and is not as truly an amateur as those mentioned, yet he is not dependent on his racing, being very wealthy. Clarence W. Marks, the Chicago shoe man, drove Joe Patchen 2:01½ a heat at Portland, Me., in 2:01½, beating the hopped sensation Chehalis 2:04½ that day. He also drove Split Silk 2:08½ her latter races; has had others very fast, among them old Major 2:11, and is a splendid reinsman and speedmaker. Starting with a 2:01½ pacer that is easy to rate and manage, however, gave to Mr. Marks decided advantage over Mr. Devereux and the others, yet he has long been a splendid fitter, practical handler, expert balancer and an all-around first class turfman.

Fresno Horses Sell Well.

[Fresno Republican.]

Fresno horses, both thoroughbred and trotters, are bringing good prices. Lee Blasingame has just sold for himself and others three thoroughbreds for $4330 and, as far as harness horses are concerned, the demand has been so great since the Fresno Driving Club was started that prices have taken a jump.

"People that talk about horses selling for a song," said Charley Schweizer the other day, "just better try to buy one. They'll find that it takes considerably more than a sheet of music to acquire a good roadster in this county. A check for a good fat sum is more like it. Our runners are in demand, too, and bring good prizes. The horse breeding industry of this county has nothing to complain of at the present time."

Charley Clark, son of Senator W. C. Clark of Montana, has come to live in California and is rapidly acquiring a racing string worth having. He has just bought the Burlingame residence, stables and kennels of Walter Hobart for a price said to have been $15,000. Last week he acquired by telephone the Owens brothers' mare, Flush of Gold. The entire transaction was conducted by long distance 'phone between San Francisco and Fresno by George Miller (trainer for Mr. Clark) and Owens brothers. The price paid was $3000, and Flush of Gold was shipped to the track at Emeryville of the California Jockey Club yesterday afternoon. Flush of Gold is five years old and is by Royal Flush, dam Gold Cup. She is a notable racer and has some good winnings to her credit, the Los Angeles Derby among others.

Lee Blasingame has disposed of two of the get of old Wernberg at good prices. They are J. H. Bennett and Porus. J. H. Bennett by Wernberg, dam Miss Goslin brought $800. He is a likely looking two year old. Porus is a three year old by Wernberg, dam Chevy Chase and brought $530.

The famous old "quarter-horse," Confidence, well known to old residents of Fresno, died on Wednesday night at Lee Blasingame's stock farm of old age. He had a great career, and, if he could have told it, would have been able to tell a remarkable story, for old Confidence began to race in this part of California when the race courses were cow paths, and kept right on running victoriously till the old trails had disappeared before the made roads and till finally races were decided on a real track.

In a turf career that ended only when he was in his thirteenth year, Confidence won 60 races out of 66 starts. He was strictly a quarter horse and not a distance runner, but still he won one race at a mile and another at six furlongs, while there were several half mile dashes to his credit. Old "Press" Bozeman owned and raced him for years until finally he became the property of Lee Blasingame.

"The old horse sired a lot of youngsters that proved fast at short distances," said Mr. Blasingame yesterday. "Among them was April Fool, with an unbeaten world's time record of 47 seconds for the half and 21½ seconds for the quarter."

When the Woods Turn Green Again.

There's a warm, warm wind comes from the South
With a promise and a song—
A song that wells from a rose-lipped mouth,
In cadence full and strong.
It whispers, whispers through the day
To the hearts of longing men,
That the time is coming on the way
When the woods turn green again.

When the woods turn green in the sunshine's kiss,
And dream o'er the lazy pool,
Where the dappled shadows, hit-and-miss,
Sway slowly, dark and cool,
And the long, long dawns bring the tune
Of the robin, thrush, and wren,
'Till they lullaby to the day-held moon,
When the woods turn green again.

When the woods turn green, and the sky's rich hue
Takes a deeper, truer shade,
And the blood-red poppies dot the view
In a pattern God has made,
Then the song the South wind sings so low
Will live on the hill and glen,
And its mellow notes into being grow
When the woods turn green again.

—W. D. Nesbitt.

Tragical Fate of a Noted Bear Hunter.

Last year press dispatches from Arizona told the story of the mysterious disappearance of a well known hunter and woodsman, John T. McCarthy. He was famed, far and wide, for his proverbially successful prowess in trailing and bagging a great number of every variety of the wild animals, whose chosen habitat was the almost inaccessible, wild and remote parts of Arizona and New Mexico.

The tragic sequel of McCarthy's passing from the sight of his devoted partner and friends is related by a correspondent of the Los Angeles Herald. The awful end of Arizona's most noted bear hunter is given in the following lines:

"The mangled remains of John T. McCarthy, Arizona's most noted bear and mountain lion slayer, trapper and naturalist, were recently laid at rest, in the last long sleep, at Phoenix, Arizona. His body was found after two months of untiring search by his faithful friend and partner, John Day, in a deep canyon where he had met his death in a terrible fight with a bear.

McCarthy's last camp was made along Clear creek in one of the most wild and broken parts of Arizona's rugged wilderness, where few white settlers have found their way. Canyon after canyon, deep and almost impassable, stretches away in every direction in such bewildering confusion and with so little difference in formation and appearance that a stranger would lose his way in a short time. Many who have made Arizona their home for years dare not wander too far from their camp when going through this wilderness, many have been lost for days at a time in what is known as "Clear creek country," and have been found by guides after a hard search nearly dead from fatigue and hunger.

Little is known of his last hunt. He left camp one evening alone, taking his shotgun along with him, saying that he intended to kill a few doves along the creek for breakfast, and for fear he might meet a bear, loaded up a couple of ordinary shotgun shells with smokeless powder taken from his 30-40 rifle shells. That was the last that was ever seen of him alive.

Some of his friends believed that Apache Indians had done away with him, as they owed him an old grudge for action taken against them for killing game while he was game warden of the territory, in preventing their slaughtering deer and antelope in and out of season, as had been their habit in years past. Some believed that his fearless feats in securing photos of wild animals had led him too far and he had fallen a victim to some fierce denizen of the wilderness in his absolute fearlessness.

For nearly two months searching parties of scouts and settlers were out hunting for him and at last they gave up in despair. Not so with his old time partner. Day after day, with dogged determination, this grim and silent man, a hero of a hundred pitched battles with wild beasts of the mountains, kept up the hunt for his friend. He knew that somewhere among the rocks and canyons McCarthy lay dead, for otherwise his faithful bear dogs would return to camp, unless they, too, had been killed. He knew, too, that McCarthy was not lost, for he knew every canyon and hill, and unless most desperately wounded, he would get back to camp in some way, as he had done before. It had been only a few years before, while hunting bear up in the White mountains, McCarthy had taken too desperate a chance with a bear, which resulted in his getting a broken leg from a vicious swipe of a bear's forepaw, besides several ugly gashes in his side. McCarthy came into camp, a distance of eight miles, with his leg bound to a sapling and walking with the aid of another. He had crawled part way when his wounds became too painful, but managed to get into camp, and in a short time was up again with as much fight in him as ever, with only a limp as a souvenir of his rough and tumble experience. It took him three days to get back to camp, but his rugged strength pulled him through.

Day's faithful and pathetic search was at last rewarded. Deep down in a canyon, where it was impossible to get except on foot, near a clump of scrub oak, on a shelving ledge of rock, lay all that was mortal of his friend. One brief glance at the scene told the story of his heroic struggle for life and his fearful death. His body was mangled and crushed out of all human semblance, his head was severed from his body, his gun broken in dozens of pieces lay near by and a short distance from it lay the body of a large black bear. The skin of a younger bear was found close to the scene, showing that he had killed one bear and had started back up the canyon side with the hide when attacked by the mother. McCarthy's method of slaying a bear was to wait until it was within a few feet of him, coming at him erect on its hind feet, with open mouth [as is their wont when attacking a human foe], then he would place the gun within close range of it and shoot it full in the mouth. [Smashing the spinal vertebrae at the neck or shooting the charge of buckshot through the back portion of the mouth and into the brain is a far easier way to reach a bear's brain than by shooting it in the head and thick skull with a rifle bullet—unless the ball were placed in the fatal spot. This system is a novel one and requires a coolness and intrepid courage possessed by but a few.—ED.] He had evidently attempted the same old feat with his shotgun, but it being loaded with smokeless powder, burst in his hands, giving the bear every opportunity to tear him to pieces before he could recover from the shock of the explosion and fight it off or kill it with his knife."

It is indeed to be much regretted that so brave a frontiersman and skilled hunter should have been ignorant of the simplest rudimentary knowledge in the handling of smokeless powder—providing the surmise of the writer of the foregoing narrative is correct. What make of powder used would cut no figure, as nearly every manufacturer prepares a powder specially for shooting in a shotgun or pistol and rifle. Poor McCarthy's oversight in this respect was fatal to him.

"There were few things that either of these two men did not know about the wild animals of the Southwest. They knew their haunts at every season of the year, as well as their many interesting peculiarities. There was little chance of an animal's escaping them when it once came in sight if they wanted it; every time they "threw down" on an animal you could rest assured that there was an end to it when the rifle cracked. So sure were they of each other that they often held each other's lives in their hands. Not long before McCarthy's untimely and horrible death he secured a fairly good picture of an ugly fight between a mountain lion and his bear dogs, in which all but one of his dogs were killed, while Day stood a short distance away with his trusty rifle in hand protecting his partner during the time he took the picture with his kodak. It was more chances than the ordinary individual would care to take, for a mountain lion, backed up against a cliff of rock with a half dozen dogs tampering with his temper, is no pleasant companion to associate with; but with a man like Day looking over the sights of a Winchester at the same object, McCarthy had no fear of anything happening except the sudden termination of the beast's life."

An amusing incident was told by McCarthy, in illustrating the sagacity of a mother bear, and one of the times that he was outwitted by old Lady Bruin to save her cub:

"It was along the foothills in the Apache country in the fall. I was tramping along back to camp in the evening when I accidentally came across a young cub, and I thought it would be lots of fun just to gather the little cuss in. He wasn't much bigger than a shoat, and his wallowing, wabby gait was funny enough for anyone to laugh at. I laid my rifle up against a tree and away we went, me 'n' the bear cub; I run him a few hundred yards and then gathered up the little kicking, squirming, woolley fellow and started back to where I had left my gun. The little cuss kept squealing all the way along, and it made me get in a hurry, for I had suspicions there might be an old lady lookin' for him in a mighty short time, and I wasn't mistaken, either. Before I got within a couple of hundred yards of my rifle here she came tumblin' along with her face wide open and hair standin' right straight up. I knew that there was going to be a heap of business transacted in that immediate neighborhood if I kept that cub. I wanted to get back to my rifle and get a shot at her and keep the little feller. I worked around with her coming straight at me all the time, but she kept in between me and the gun all the time, too. I didn't have a whole lot of time to maneuver in, either. I took a straight run away from the gun, hoping she would clear that neighborhood, but she seemed to know just as well as I did where the gun was and she would circle, keeping it between me and her, and all the time getting uncomfortably nearer me. At last I thought I'd better keep a whole hide a little longer and I let the little feller go. Away he went to her and I thought she would waddle back up the mountain again after she got the cub, so I could get my gun and do some hunting, but I'll be jerked sideways if she didn't keep circling close to that gun and keeping me going, then back up toward that tree again. That's the only time I ever came into camp without my rifle, and you'd ought to see old Day grin when I explained why I couldn't bring it in that night."

Hundreds of the wild animals of Arizona met their death from his famous rifle. In the last year he had killed over seventy mountain lions for the bounty of $20 per head given by the territory to rid the country of the vicious beasts.

Wild Game and Venison from Alaska.

The Pacific Cold Storage Company of Tacoma will endeavor to ship game from Dawson by means of refrigerator vessels and cars. It is proposed to find a market in the East for the cold storage game. It is more than probable however, that the game laws of many Eastern states will materially interfere with the contemplated plans.

The company recently shipped $200,000 worth of cattle, frozen beef, mutton and poultry to Yukon points. The largest part of the shipments are carried from Tacoma to St. Michael in refrigerator steamers, and there transferred to two refrigerator steamers operated by the company on the Yukon river. Last year and the previous year the company installed cold and warm storage plants at Nome, Rampart, Eagle and Dawson. During last winter game was very plentiful in the Yukon country—so plentiful, that the miners, it is claimed, became sick of Arctic hares, moose, caribou and ptarmigan, paying high prices for beef and poultry in preference to them.

The company's Dawson manager came to the conclusion that the Eastern cities of the United States would pay handsomely for this wild game which was going to waste in the Dawson market. He accordingly purchased all the moose, caribou and ptarmigan he could buy, and filled up the company's storage plant. Recently a cargo of game was loaded on the company's refrigerator steamer and will be taken to St. Michael, and there transferred to another steamer for Tacoma and then will be placed in cars for shipment East.

The outlook for a vigorous and enthusiastic field trial campaign this season can readily be surmised by a perusal of the announced meetings of twenty-four clubs. A number of field trial organizations are yet to be heard from.

Fox Terriers and Rawdon Lee's Book.

The fourth edition of Mr. Rawdon Lee's history and description of the Fox Terrier, published towards the close of March of the current year, will be welcomed by every lover of this most popular breed of the dog. At English shows, and many American shows also, whatever breeds may be represented, the Fox Terrier is always there and practically always also heads the poll in numerical strength.

There is no work on the Fox Terrier so expansive as that of Mr. Rawdon Lee's, writes John Brown in The Indian. There may be men who can write better, or who know still more, there doubtless are; but they do not happen to have taken the trouble to enlarge on a subject they have so much at heart. Mr. Doyle, whose knowledge is so extensive and whose diction is so charming, has written on the breed in a fragmentary way, so has Mr. Vicary, and so could Mr. Redmond if he only would, but it has remained for Mr. Lee to give a work so full of interest to the world. One of the great charms of Mr. Rawdon Lee's writing is that of his standpoint. He writes from the point of view of the sportsman, and not of the fancier. He does not disregard detail, but he can take a long distance glance as well, he is not always looking with his eyes on the ground. His earlier chapters, in which he traced so ably the rise of the modern terrier from the old colored terrier of past years, dwelling on a point so often lost sight of, have always been full of charm. There is nothing so fascinating to the true lover of the terrier as the tale of those old world little dogs, which worked so fearlessly, so gaily, and carried their lives in their hands so lightheartedly in the days when there really was work for the terrier in England. But if there was any fault to be found, it was that the history, up to and including the third edition, was not up to date.

It is difficult indeed to keep any monograph of a breed, which has progressed with such strides in public favor, up to date. But the fourth edition before us, enlarged in letter-press and illustrations, aims at, and partially fulfils, that want. All the new illustrations are admirable. They may, to some extent, be idealized portraits, but they are not mere ideals like the pictures in the author's more ambitious book. Indeed, there are terriers of the present day it would be difficult to idealize. I had recently an opportunity, for instance, of inspecting Mr. Redmond's gallery of portraits, and still more interesting kennel of actuals. There are people who will tell you that the paintings of the famous Totteridge terriers are gross exaggerations. And so they may be in a sense, but the remark is not necessarily a disparagement on the terriers. There are terriers at Whetstone House which need no flattery in their portraits. They are almost beyond flattery, if they could only be painted as they are, they need no more. I am not of those who hold with the reiterated complaints of deterioration in Fox Terriers. We agree with Mr. Doyle that the frequently expressed views that the prize-winners of the day are unworthy to rank with their predecessors, that the type has altogether changed, that the modern Fox Terrier is a new and fanciful creation, are the utterances of those who have given no special thought or attention to the subject. The champion of the day would have been hailed with delight a quarter of a century ago, and vice versa. Progress has lain in another way. It has lain in the enormous increase of show terriers. There are terriers running about the streets which would have been too valuable to be at large in days gone by. Owners of large kennels draft annually numbers of terriers, as just below the mark, but which might have been just good enough to win in the seventies. Champion Olive often stood out, head and shoulders, in quality above her competitors in the ring. Champion Duchess of Durham, possibly a better bitch, often needs to play her beauty for all it is worth. To use Mr. Doyle's own words, his metaphors are so full of force, "We have not moved either towards perfection, or further away from it along a straight line. Rather we have traveled over part of the circumference of a circle of which the standard of perfection is the center. We have gained some advantage and lost others. Neck, shoulders, and outline were points that we always aimed at; to-day we get them much oftener. We still try to get well sprung ribs and compact frames; we oftener miss them." If there is a fault in the modern system of breeding, it lies in the modern "waster." In the days when the terrier was more cloddy and compact, the rejections were often neat and fairly shapely animals. The modern thoroughbred "waster" is frequently a "waster" indeed. But a moment's thought will tell us this is only natural. The breeder of shire horses may find he often misses the necessary quality for the show ring and yet his products may be strong, serviceable animals; the failure in thoroughbreds is more pronounced.

The question of size is also a topic of the day, and there is no doubt that many champions of recent years have been too large. But Mr. Doyle tells us, with much point, that for some five and twenty years he has heard that terriers are getting larger. He believes that Buffet was fully equal to the size of most winners of the day, and that Brockenhurst Joe, who won the Challenge Cup in 1881, was the biggest dog, except perhaps Venio, that ever won it. Mr. Vicary, whose opinion is also entitled to respect, says that he finds more young terriers have to be drafted for being too small and toyish than for being over-sized. And at any rate we know that size is mainly confined to dogs; there has rarely been an over-sized bitch the recipient of high honors, for several years, and Mr. Redmond's Duchess of Durham, the champion smooth bitch at Cruft's in 1902, and his Dusky Gleaner, champion in wires, are both exceptionally small, the latter being the smallest champion we have ever seen. There is also no doubt that the objectionable bull characteristics, so often discernible in Fox Terriers of the past, have almost entirely disappeared. A very small infusion of this blood produces a very shapely, premaritely full-figured puppy. It appears, to the inexperienced eye, to overshadow the more lightly built, less furnished, pure terrier, but it does not last. At two years of age it is already beginning to exhibit coarseness of skull, or front, or shoulders, or boniness of muscle, and then its show career is over. The pure terrier almost improves with age. An eight years old Champion Donna Fortuna shows no loss of form.

The portion of Mr. Rawdon Lee's work dealing with the wire haired Fox Terrier was not so full, nor perhaps so interesting, as that which dealt with the smooths; but the present edition is a decided step in advance and we have the advantage of some valuable remarks from the pen of Mr. George Raper, one of the best judges in the world. The smooth terrier of twenty or so years ago was streets ahead of his wire confrere, but the two varieties occupy a level position now, and in special classes, where they compete together, no advantage can be claimed on either side. In such classes, the wire terrier has certain conditions both in his favor and disfavor. The rougher jacket is apt to hide defects, and to give a certain workmanlike wear and tear, cut and come again, appearance that the smooth Fox Terrier does not possess. But, on the other hand, a satisfactory condition of coat is harder to obtain. A wire terrier may be well nigh perfect in all points except that of coat, but if that fail, the failure is so striking to the eye that it debars its owner from high honors. Mr. Raper, whose exhibits are rarely deficient in this respect, ascribes his success to considerable inter-breeding with smooth blood. It used to be an axiom that breeding from parents smooth on one side and wire on the other, the puppies more often throw to the former, but Mr. Raper's experience is all the other way. He states that his well known champion, Matchmaker, with only twenty-five percent of wire blood in him, produces fifty per cent of wire hairs from smooth bitches. His champion, Raby Top-knot, has only about ten per cent of wire blood and rarely throws a smooth. Mr. Clear's champion, Jack St. Leger, was nearly smooth in blood. Many of the best wire haired terriers have owed a great measure of their success to the smooth blood in their veins. The wire terriers have shown marked progress in recent years, a progress for which the Meersbrook blood is largely responsible. As far back as 1894, Mr. Sam Hill possessed in Meersbrook Bristles, Lordship, Magpie and Sereneness four terriers which had not previously been excelled and which would take some beating at the present day; while at Birmingham in 1898, the open class consisted of Go Bang, Matchmaker, Knock Out, Rayston Remus, Meersbrook, Lordship, Tarras Gaffer, Grove Bristles and Barkley Ben, every terrier in the group being of the highest merit.

I can confidently recommend the work under reference to all Fox Terrier men.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Nairod Kennels lost on May 29th, a very promising St. Bernard bitch puppy, Glenwood Bonnie (Le King-Princess Rachel). This puppy's death will prove the loss of an exceptionally good young one, had she lived she would no doubt have been a fine brood bitch.

Woodlawn Eclipse (Tyke-Eclipse Blanche) a natty Fox Terrier, recently whelped eight puppies (two dogs) to Cairnsmuir General (Ch Go Bang-Ch Cairnsmuir Kismet). The bitch died after whelping and at present three extra good looking puppies are being raised on the bottle at Woodlawn Kennels.

To those who now have puppies to train, the following pointers, the outcome of experience is suggested: Do not let your pups get into the habit of barking violently, a most tiresome trick, coming of idleness and not enough outdoor exercise, and also sometimes hereditary.

Scold them, and keep a switch in the corner for a nip now and then; they will soon pay attention.

Take your pups out into the road early, to accustom them to curious sights and sounds, it makes all the difference at their first show.

Accustom them to follow you without lead early, also to have on a collar, and to lead nicely. This can not be done in a field or garden they know well, or they will scream and crouch, but in a road or quiet street, they will pay more attention to you.

Do not let your pups run after other dogs; in that way comes distemper, also fighting.

Train your pups to be well behaved when visitors come into the room; if not done early, then it becomes impossible, and they are a nuisance to your friends.

Carry a pup at first in crowded streets; it gains much confidence in this way, and soon minds no strange noises and sights much, if with you.

When bold enough, take it on a train, or you may have a pleasing time, the first day of a show, if they have never been by train before.

To put off beginning for too long, say ten months old or so, is to give you and the dog an infinity of trouble afterwards. You should begin from weaning time.

A neatly designed and convenient device for ascertaining correctly the pattern of one's gun has been issued by the Hazard Powder Company. The paper target is divided into eight sections, each section subdivided into three smaller sections, and has also 30, 24 and 12-inch circles to facilitate the counting of shot marks. The pattern is designed to enable a shooter to ascertain just exactly how well his gun is shooting to center from time to time, a record table being printed thereon for the purpose of registering the load used and other data necessary for a shooter to keep tab on the work he is doing with his gun.

For the information of a correspondent who signed himself trap shooter, we will state that a canvas, during the progress of the tournament, of the 109 sportsmen who took part in the merchandise shoot at Ingleside, on May 18th, showed that 90% of the shooters present used U. M. C. shells.

Doves are reported to be very plentiful in and around Sacramento county. The season for shooting doves will open on August 1st and prevail until February 1st.

The College City Gun Club inaugural shoot on the club grounds located in the North Berkeley hills, last Sunday, was a most flattering beginning of the career of the new organization. Forty shooters entered the principal event, a prize shoot. Among this list we are pleased to note a number of new shooters, and others comparative novices. The program was arranged to enable the less skillful shooters to get in on the prize distribution. These classes were segregated, thus bringing together, in each section, men who were about equal in shooting abilities. This idea of encouraging new beginners and bringing recruits into the ranks we have long advocated, and is a method that will not only revive, but give trap shooting a new impetus, and place the sport on the plane where it belongs. The main race was at twenty blue rocks, three classes, the first ten targets were shot at from the sixteen yard mark, the second ten were shot at under the following handicap: Shooters who broke 9 or 10 targets shot the remaining 10 at 20 yards; 7 and 8 breaks, 18 yards; 5 and 6 breaks, 16 yards; 4 breaks or less, 14 yards, high guns. In the first class W. H. Price broke 18 targets, and won first prize, a Remington rifle, the other winners in the class were C. Baird, W. A. Robertson, R. C. Reed, T. Thompson, H. S. Swales and H. A. Searles. In the second class, first honors were annexed by J. D. Gordon, followed in order of shooting merit by J. D. Hutton, W. S. Schmidt, J. Lasserot, R. J. Weir, R. L. Whiting, J. Johnson, G. H. Chick and Capt. Demerit. The third class winners were: J. Davis, D. Stoner, C. Fischell, J. Agee, C. Wright, C. L. Huggins,

C. Walker, J. C. Jensen, G. W. Meyers, J. H. Lasserot, G. McClain, Otto Putzker and O. J. Preston.

In a special race the prize was captured by Searles. In all about fifty guns were at the traps during the day, and over 3000 blue rocks were used.

The California Wing Club shoot last Sunday was well attended, as usual, both by club members and visiting shooters. Fifteen shooters entered in the regular club race at twelve pigeons, four back scores were also shot up. In this race "Slade" 26 yards, Dr. A. T. Derby 27 yards and G. W. Gibson 25 yards each made straight scores and divided the cup value and 70% of the club added purse. P. J. Walsh 29 yards, C. A. Haight 31 yards and J. J. Sweeney 30 yards, with eleven birds each, divided the balance of the purse, 30%. S. R. Smith, of Riverside, shot as a guest of the club. F. J. Stone, a clever Fresno trap shot who recently joined the club, shot up four scores, making respectively nine, ten, eleven and twelve. In six six bird pools he killed straight three times and also grassed clean in a twelve bird pool. Sweeney, who shot in four six bird pools, killed straight; his club score was marred by one bird falling "dead out." Feudner shot two straights in the pools; he also lost a bird "dead out" in the club race, shooting from the 33 yard mark.

In a half dozen six bird pools, the winners were: Haight, Justins, Smith and Sweeney; Haight, Justins, Sweeney, Walsh and Derby; Haight, Derby, Feudner, Stone and "Reamer;" Justins and Sweeney; Stone; Stone. In a twelve bird pool Nauman and Stone scored the only straights. The weather was pleasant and the birds strong; during the day nearly 800 pigeons were trapped. It is noticeable that at this shoot the straight scores were principally made by the short distance shooters.

The scores in the various events follow:

Club race, 12 pigeons, distance handicap, $25 cup, $50 purse ($20, $15, $10 and $5), high guns, 15 entries—

Some Interesting Notes on Boston Terrier Awards.

The Boston Terrier Meg was very unlucky at the May show in 1901—she had no chance to get into the competition. This year it was different as the following story shows. It seems now she was turned down either through ignorance or for other reasons—we hesitate to intimate any motives other than those actuating all fair minded sportsmen and fanciers, but under the circumstances it looks at least as if both Mr. Clayton and Mr. Klein, were either taking advantage of Mr. Graham E. Babcock's credulity or imposing upon good nature, to draw it mildly, when Meg was awarded three letters in novice and limit, and reserve in open; Endcliffe Betty and Endcliffe Venetta first and second in novice and open; Endcliffe Pride third in limit, Mr. Clayton, judge. Mr. Babcock and other fanciers interested in Bostons were surprised—for the lot of Eastern dogs were not then regarded here as anything remarkably good.

Mr. Babcock, as is usual with exhibitors whose dogs are beaten, naturally desired to know where his dog was inferior to those placed over her. Mr. Clayton, in response to inquiry, explained several points and differences in favor of the winning dogs, so we are informed. Comparison was at once made by several interested gentlemen and the differences described were either wanting or too trivial to influence a judge who understood the breed. Mr. Babcock, who is happily possessed of the quality of determination, was imbued with a rigid insistence of the recognition of any merits he was entitled to in a competition prompted by sportsmanship and his particular fancy. Upon calling Mr. Clayton's attention to the instability of his first explanation and in the presence of several gentlemen, the former insisted that his judgment was correct and exploited upon the fact that Meg's undershot jaw was in itself a sufficient reason for placing her below the other dogs—almost in fact a disqualification. In this Mr. Clayton was corroborated by Mr. Klein. Mr. Babcock and the others interested were not up on Bostons enough to prevail against this undershot argument, which temporarily was a settler and which then stopped all argument regarding Meg.

Not so with Eastern fanciers and sportsmen as the following extracts and communications will show. Mr. Babcock in investigating the matter, not being at all convinced that the many and plausible explanations of the two gentlemen mentioned were founded either upon fact or experience, to draw it mildly, wrote to different Eastern fanciers explaining the case and asking for expert opinions, for which he had originally sought receiving instead but the shadow for the substance. In response to Mr. Babcock's correspondence the testimony given below was forwarded. This is an arraignment of the judge's Boston Terrier awards that is convincing to the reader that Mr. Clayton's knowledge of Bostons is mediocre and Mr. Klein's corroboration, careless, to say the least, for he has been regarded as having some qualifications and knowledge wherewith to express an opinion upon some breeds of dogs.

In another letter to Mr. Babcock, and from an unimpeachable authority, the writer gives his opinion that he is "not surprised that Thomas' dogs won at your show." "Thomas does not show Bostons in the East, his entries of this breed can not be found in any catalogue, although he shows other breeds." "The kind of Bostons taken to the Coast would be immediately 'given the gate' East, and would be on the Coast, when passed upon by a judge who knows his business (in this we believe he is somewhat harsh on Mr. Clayton) such as * * *

* * * who occasionally get to the Coast."

Upon calling Mr. Clayton's attention to the instability of his first explanation and in the presence of several gentlemen, the former insisted that his judgment was correct and exploited upon the fact that Meg's undershot jaw was in itself a sufficient reason for placing her below the other dogs—almost in fact a disqualification. In this Mr. Clayton was corroborated by Mr. Klein. Mr. Babcock and the others interested were not up on Bostons enough to prevail against this undershot argument, which temporarily was a settler and which then stopped all argument regarding Meg.

Not so with Eastern fanciers and sportsmen as the following extracts and communications will show. Mr. Babcock in investigating the matter, not being at all convinced that the many and plausible explanations of the two gentlemen mentioned were founded either upon fact or experience, to draw it mildly, wrote to different Eastern fanciers explaining the case and asking for expert opinions, for which he had originally sought receiving instead but the shadow for the substance. * * * who occasionally get to the Coast."

At present several fanciers of Bostons here are much put out at the specious claim made, that Meg was properly placed way down by reason of defective muzzle qualities superinduced by an undershot jaw. What her particular merits in the competition were we will not advance here nor does it cut any figure. Both Clayton and Klein are authority for the undershot jaw fallacy; what their judgment in this respect is worth can be contrasted with the following opinions; the above and these we submit without prejudice:

"In the kennel journal reports of the San Francisco show I had noted your lack of success with Meg, and was on the point of writing you when your letter arrived this A. M.

As I know there is no bitch in California that can touch Meg, I was chagrined at the result until I looked to see who the judge was, when it was explained.

How Germs Get Into Milk.

In the first place a good many germs are living in the milk while it is yet in the udder of the cow, and in the next place, a good many more fall into the milk pail from those floating in the air, being caught in the streams of descending milk, says Bulletin 152, New Jersey Experiment Station. Still others are introduced clinging to the particles of dirt, dust, hair, chaff, etc., that becomes loosened from the udder and adjacent surface of the cow, and from the hands, arms, etc., of the milker, and in fly time from the whisking tail of the pestered animal. It is the presence of numerous articles of this sort which is responsible for the general practice of straining milk. But no strainer is fine enough to retain the small particles, and least of all the germs that have been washed out of the particles. In those dairies where the practice of keeping cows and stalls thoroughly clean has not been adopted, the dirt that most frequently gets into milk consists of particles of manure. The presence of even a little manure imparts to the milk the peculiar flavor called "cowey," as though it were the distinctive odor of this domestic species. But this flavor is quite distinct from the odor of new, pure milk (also found in the cow's breath, over which poets have raved in ecstasy). In these days of "modern dairy progress" the production of "cowey" milk is both inexcusable and reprehensible. Milk has a strong attraction for odors, and readily absorbs any predominant odor of the air, etc., it is in contact with, hence it is not strange that it extracts the odor of the dirt that falls into it. In fact, if the milch cow's food has any peculiar flavor it affects the milk. These various disagreeable flavors in milk are of less consequence than the fact that milk receives the germs that inhabit the dirt which gets into it. Of all dirt, manure is the richest in germ content, and what is even more important, it contains germs that are parasitic in the intestines and hence are liable to produce disease.

MONTEREY 31706 RECORD 2:09¼

PEDIGREE IN PART.

SIRE BY SIDNEY 2:19¾, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05¼ (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Battle dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4340, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18¼. Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21¼, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals, two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:16, first quarter in 0:40¼, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902,

Charley Morgan among his pets. 4. Head of Eden Vale 2:20, bay stallion by Eros 5326, dam Meta by Piedmont 2:17½. 5. William Halford with his race mare by St. Savior, dam by Wildidle. 6. Mr. V. Harrier of Vallejo with his roadster Bay Rum 2:16½. 7. JOTTINGS.

THE BEST TRAINING TRACK of a half dozen the writer has visited during the past two or three months in the section around the bay was the one at Vallejo last Saturday. It was very near perfection. Good footing, moist enough to be springy, a slight cushion on top to prevent concussion, and not a spot in the entire mile that was cuppy or broke under the feet of the trotters and pacers worked over it. Every shoe print clearly defined and the entire width of the track in order from fence to fence. It is a fast track and at the same time a safe one. If it is kept in the shape it is at present (and Jo Smith says it will be if he has to stay up nights to see it done), the opening of the circuit at Vallejo will see some fast time.

On Monday next ten stakes ranging from $500 to $700 will close with Secretary W. T. Kelly of the Vallejo association. I talked with Mr. Kelly a few minutes at Vallejo last Saturday and he is enthusiastic and pleased over the prospects for the best meeting this year that the Navy Yard town has ever had. The stakes of the Breeders Fresno meeting and the one at Napa, having filled so well it is pretty certain that Vallejo, which opens the circuit, will do likewise. The district association is working harder than ever before to have a high class fair and race meeting. The purses for harness horses are generous and numerous, and the premium lists for live stock, etc., are on the same order. Vallejo was never more prosperous than now and is growing rapidly. It will be one of the best betting towns on the whole circuit, as there are a very large number of enthusiastic horsemen there, and many of them enjoy backing their judgment with their money. I don't remember a race meeting ever held at Vallejo but the pool sellers were kept busy. Good odds and a run for your money will be the rule this year. If there is a horseman in California who has a horse that he thinks can win any part of the money this year he should have an entry or two at Vallejo as the purses are large, the terms liberal and the weather there in August very near perfection.

There was not a sick horse at the Vallejo track last Saturday, although some thirty or forty were being worked and probably twenty-five more were running in the infield. It is undoubtedly a very healthy place for horses and the cool breeze from the bay is just softened enough to be pleasant. Charley Morgan is working three horses there belonging to Capt. N. P. Batchelder of this city, and one is a Dexter Prince mare that the Captain paid but $75 for, yet is very liable to pace to a record of 2:10 or better this year. She wears nothing on her legs and is just the sweetest gaited thing I have seen for many a day. They call her Trifle and Morgan has her in perfect condition. He worked her four heats Saturday, the fastest in 2:21, and he was swinging back on the lines the whole mile every time so that Vic Harrier and Joe Cuicello with their trotters Bay Rum 2:16½ and Puerto Rico 2:18½ could keep up. Trifle will be entered in the races somewhere on the circuit this year so that she can obtain a record, as it is Capt. Batchelder's intention to mark her as low as possible, reduce the record of his stallion Eden Vale 2:20 by Eros, and then mate them. Eden Vale has one of the most intelligent and at the same time beautiful heads I ever saw on a stallion. He is a wonderfully fast horse, but has been greatly handicapped in his training heretofore and has had little chance. If he does not lower his mark under Charley Morgan's training I am greatly mistaken, as he has two minute speed.

Mr. Vic Harrier, one of Vallejo's substantial citizens, is the owner of Bay Rum and has in him a road horse that is hard to beat in any country. Bay Rum is now about fifteen years old, but has as much speed for a brush as ever in his life. He is now a gelding but was kept a stallion for years, and there are several of his get that will enter the list if trained. Bay Rum was bred by John Sanchez of Hollister and got his mark of 2:16½ in 1897 at Willows. He is by John Sevenoaks, son of Natwood 600. He is a big, tall fellow, rather a handsome roadster, as the photograph on the front page of to-day's BREEDER will show.

Joe Cuicello has a small but a select string of horses at Vallejo, and I understand he is soon to have two or three royally bred colts from Palo Alto Stock Farm. He worked Mr. Coffin's horse Puerto Rico 2:18½ the day I visited the track and the son of Sable Wilkes is improved over his last year's form. He has more flesh on his bones, goes stronger and worked the last quarter of a 2:22 mile in 32 seconds when Charley Morgan drove the pacing mare Trifle the same quarter in 31. I look for Puerto Rico to be quite a factor in the 2:19 and faster classes this year. He has a great burst of speed, but until this year has not been a stout, rugged horse. Cuicello is training a three year old pacer by Seymour Wilkes 2:08½ that is certain to make a great reputation for this son of Guy Wilkes whenever he starts in the races. He is a big, handsome fellow and has shown a mile in time fast enough to win money in the races this year. He is too good a colt, however, to risk against aged horses, and as he is not staked he will not be raced.

Joe Corey is training for William Halford the big stallion Donnybrook by Don L. 2:28½. This stallion is a full brother to the Joe Selby that took a wagon record of 2:26½ on last year. Donnybrook does not bear any resemblance to his brother, being a very heavy horse. All doubtless make a much faster one. He is close with a quarter better than 32 seconds at the trot. One of the smoothest going big studs I have seen a long time. Corey has him in fine condition, shows with pride a couple of his colts, one out of the Saporoughbred St. Savior mare pictured on the front page of this issue that is a very handsome one. Another that he was just breaking showed a splendid disposition and when harnessed the second time was driven a mile beside the cars and paid not a particle of attention to them.

Joe Smith, son of the veteran horse breeder, Thos. Smith, President of the Solano Agricultural Association, has ten head in training at Vallejo. In addition to his arduous duties with this band of trotters and pacers, Joe superintends the working of the track and its condition is a credit to his ability in this line. Among the fast horses he is training is Gaff Topsail

American Associations and suspended horses are permitted to start. While the association is thus a sort of maverick or free lance, its meetings are always well attended and more betting is done on the events than at many of the regular meetings held on district tracks. Several attempts have been made by some of the leading members of the club to abolish racing for money, but it meets with little favor, as a majority of the members are not men of large means and the chance of winning the long end of a purse has greater attraction to them than the pride of possessing a trophy. The leading members would do a wise thing, however, if they were to induce the association to take out a membership in the National Trotting Association and have all future meetings conducted under its rules. Then by placing judges in the stand to enforce those rules, the club's racing would be vastly improved.

The next legislature may be called upon to change Sam Gamble's name. Mr. Gamble was in the city this week marching and feasting with his fellow Nobles of the Mystic Shrine and told me that he seriously contemplating asking the legislature of California to permit him to change his name to Stam B. Excel Gamble. He says that Stam B. and Excel will have such a boom within the next few years that unless he gets his name changed, as he suggests, the public may lose track of and forget the manager in the rush. Every Stam B. colt that is heard from is trotting like a whirlwind and he predicts that when the young Excels begin to arrive they will do the same.

There has been considerable talk in the past of organizing a gentlemen's driving club in this city, and recently this talk has been revived. As yet, however,

E. Kavanaugh's ch. s. GAFF TOPSAIL 2:16 by Diablo 2:09½.

2:16 by Diablo. The nautical horse is just out of the stud, but I saw him step the last quarter of a mile in 31 seconds Saturday, so I guess he'll do as far as speed is concerned. Whenever Gaff Topsail makes up his mind that he wants to pace he can get a mark several seconds below his present record and I don't think 2:10 will stop him. He is proving quite a success in the stud, his colts all showing speed and having size and good looks. In Joe Smith's string there are quite a number of fast ones, among them the mare Trilby 2:23½ by Mambrino Chief Jr., that he has entered in The California $2000 trot at Fresno and is pointing her to win. One of the handsomest youngsters in Joe's care is a two year old full brother to Tom Smith, being by McKinney 2:11½ out of Daisy S. by Mambrino Chief Jr. This colt is a big fellow, coal black and a nicely gaited trotter with speed prospects.

Golden Gate Park Driving Association has leased the Vallejo track for the 4th of July and will hold a day's racing there on that date. It is proposed to arrange a program of four races, mile heats, two in three, with purses of $100 each. The members of this club have a style all their own for conducting meetings and get lots of fun out of them. It is not a matinee or driving club in the strict present day construction of those terms, as they always race for purses, and have voted down trophy racing several times. A well known harness dealer of this city presented a very handsome cup to the club for a challenge race to be contested for by members' horses every year. On two occasions the race was filled by adding $100 to the cup, but this year the race fell through, as no money was hung up for the event and the members did not care to race their horses solely for a cup. The club has no membership in either the National or it is all words—no action has been taken. The proposition, however, is to organize a club on the lines of the celebrated Cleveland Driving Club and have matinee racing without admission fee, purses, gambling or betting in any form, the idea being to have contests for pure sport and nothing else. It would be a great thing for the harness horse interests if this could be accomplished. Under this plan all horses would be driven to four wheeled vehicles, which would make the spectacle much more attractive for the spectators and more dignified for the drivers. The bike sulky is a professional racing machine and is of no practical use except on the race track, whereas the four-wheeled wagon is a practical pleasure vehicle and can be used on the road and in park driving. They cost more than sulkies but much greater use can be made of them. I have heard of twenty San Francisco gentlemen who are regular road drivers who have expressed their willingness to become members of a high class driving club, and about all that is needed to effect the organization is for some one to take the initiative, call a meeting and do the preliminary work. Then if a track can be secured that is within driving distance, matinees could be held that would draw large crowds of enthusiastic people to witness the contests.

Celebrated His Eighty-Eighth Birthday.

Hon. Jesse D. Carr celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday anniversary yesterday. He kept open house last evening and scores of his friends called to tender their felicitations upon the recurrence of the anniversary occasion and to wish him continued health and the enjoyment of many more years of a useful life.—Salinas Journal, June 11th.

Notes and News.

Enter at Vallejo.

Entries close Monday next.

It looks like the good old times.

A good mile track is being built at Fort Worth, Texas.

Every association over East is receiving a big list of entries this year.

Are you going East with your horses? Enter on the Minnesota circuit.

Enter at Vallejo. First meeting on the circuit. Entries close next Monday.

Gaff Topsail, just out of the stud, paced a quarter in 31 seconds at the Vallejo track last Saturday.

Entries will close Monday next for the San Jose meeting. Look in our advertising columns for the purses offered.

It is said that J. Y. Gatecomb paid James Hanley of Providence, $7500 for the latter's two-thirds interest in Audubon Boy.

Princess Monaco, by imp. Meddler out of Nancy Hanks 2:04, has a foal at foot by Bingen 2:06½, at the Forbes Farm, Boston.

The Santa Cruz County Fair will be held this year at Watsonville and it is expected that harness races will furnish part of the program.

The Pierces will sell fifty head of standard bred horses at the Occidental Horse Exchange next Tuesday, June 17th. Sale begins at 11 A. M.

Heron, a two year old colt by Arion 2:07½, dam Mrs. Jack, by Anthanio 2:10, which is now being trained at Readville, is regarded as a coming wonder.

Woodland, Salinas, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura entries all close July 1st. They are all advertised in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

It is reported that John H. Shults has decided to sell the bulk of his famous and almost priceless collection of fast-record broodmares at auction next fall.

The McKinney mare Arketa 2:22½, that made her record last year at Salem, Oregon, will be brought down here and raced on the California circuit this year.

Ten head of draft horses weighing from 1400 to 1600 pounds, five to seven years old and well broken, are to be sold at the Occidental Horse Exchange next Tuesday.

The manager of the Chillicothe, O., track has made arrangements with George H. Ketcham to have Cresceus 2:02½, trot a mile against his record at that place on August 28.

Eleata 2:08½, is a possible starter in the race for the Boston amateur challenge cup. Her owner, Frank Jones, of New Hampshire, is a member of the Boston Matinee Club.

Jerre O'Neil, of Boston, has sold the black pacing stallion Chehalis 2:04½ to J. Ishman, of Morrisville, Vt., who will place his new purchase in the campaigning stable of Will Utton.

Cris Simpson is stepping Bonner N. B. halves in 1:08 and quarters in 33 seconds at Portland. The old horse is chuck full of speed this spring and all his colts inherit the same good quality.

Harry Hamlin says he would not consider an offer of $100,000 for The Beau Ideal, a green trotter by Dare Devil 2:09, out of Nettie King, dam of The Abbot 2:03½. He expects to keep him as a sire.

W. B. Griffin, Albia, Iowa, has booked Blue Silk 2:27½, and Raw Silk 2:29½, daughters of Soprano, sister to Steinway and dam of ten in the list, to Directum 2:05½. They both have foals by Ernest Wilton 2:15

There are about 2000 recorded half-mile tracks in the United States and less than a hundred mile tracks. There is more sport to the square inch in races on a half-mile track than all the mile tracks in the country can show.

Mr. W. G. Goodman of Galt, owns a two year old pacing filly by Diablo 2:09½, dam by Dorsey's Nephew, second dam by imported Partisan, thoroughbred, that he desires to claim the name Mistletoe for. The filly is a very handsome animal and an excellent prospect.

Trainer James Golden has sold the beautiful three year old colt Medion to Mr. L. R. Peck, Providence, R. I. This is the colt by Mendocino that Mr. Golden recently bought at the Cleveland sale. He is well entered in stakes, and will be handled by Mr. Golden.

Electioneer, Dexter Prince, McKinney, Diablo, Direct, Gen. Benton, Sidney Dillon and L. W. Russell are the stallions whose get are in the sale of horses from Santa Rosa and Yerba Buena Stock Farms to be held at the Occidental Horse Exchange next Tuesday.

Bunker Hill Day Sale is the title selected for the disposal of the Pierce horses next Tuesday, June 17th, at the Occidental Horse Exchange.

Judging from the picture of The Roman published by the Chicago Horseman last week this horse has filled out wonderfully since leaving California.

Remember the sale of the Pierce's horses next Tuesday. Thirty-five head of standard bred trotting mares and geldings by such horses as McKinney, Diablo, Sidney Dillon, Director, Direct, Boodle and others.

Our old friend Geo. Bement, Esq., of Melrose, Alameda county, is looking with pride upon a mare by a son of his old thirty-mile champion, General Taylor, that has at her side a handsome bay filly by Welcome 2:10½.

Dan L. Crane, one of our valued occasional correspondents, who has been in Los Angeles for the past six months, will be located at Sacramento during the summer. His duties with the Armour Fruit Company require this change every year.

Uncle Johnny by Chas. Derby worked a handy mile in 2:11½ last week at San Jose, driven by Will Welch. Capt. Goodall, the owner of this fast pacer, is highly pleased with the horse's work and thinks he has a winner in him, which he undoubtedly has.

We have met two men who intended entering at Napa but forgot about it until after entries had closed, although they had received entry blanks and notices galore. See that you are not left out at Vallejo and San Jose, whose entries close next Monday.

Mountain Maid by Cresco, that was nominated in the Breeder's Futurity $6000, for the produce of mares bred in 1901, has just dropped a fine colt by McKinney that her owner, Mr. S. F. Martin of Oakland, thinks has a "peep in" for first money in the stake.

S. K. Trefry of Pleasanton has a green trotter by Diablo 2:09½, that is showing fast. He is a bay gelding and after five or six work-outs stepped a mile in 2:24 last week, and did it so nicely that a mile in 2:18 is predicted for him before long and he is considered a great prospect.

Several of the young colts and fillies at the side of the mares to be sold at the sale of Hon. Jesse D. Carr's horses, are entered in Breeders Futurity, $6000, and are fully paid up on. Remember this when you attend the sale. It takes place at 1732 Market street on Thursday, June 26th.

Sam Gamble says he saw a two year old filly by Rey Direct 2:10, out of Mabel the dam of Directly 2:03½, step a mile to a big Toomey cart one day last week at Pleasanton in 2:28, the last half in 1:11½. Mr. Gamble says she is one of the best prospects for a champion pacer that he has seen lately.

Senator Hale will never be able to move the Navy Yard from Vallejo, neither can he prevent the success of the big fair and race meeting to be held there in August. Have you made out your entries yet? They close next Monday, the 16th. Fill out your blank and mail it in time. Vallejo has the best track in California to-day.

The 2:15 trot at Napa this year should be a closely contested race. There are but six entries, but the Directors declared it filled, knowing it will result in a close contest should all the horses go to the post which is very likely. Those entered are Lou 2:14½, Alta Vela 2:15, Thos. R. 2:15, Vic Shellar 2:15½, What Is It 2:16½, and Puerto Rico 2:18½.

As soon as you read this, sit down and write to W. T. Kelly, Secretary of the Solano Agricultural Society at Vallejo, and tell him how many entries you desire to make in the stakes that close next Monday. You will find a full list with conditions in our advertising columns. This will be a great meeting and you don't want to miss it.

"Sandy" Smith, the energetic and well posted California horseman, has been at Toledo, O., since the Cleveland sale, but expects to leave for the Coast soon, in charge of Mr. A. B. Spreckels' mares, Venus II. 2:11½ and Czarina 2:13½. These mares have been bred to Cresceus 2:02½ and will be returned to the Spreckels ranch at Aptos, Cal.

The valuable chestnut suckling colt by Allerton 2:09½ out of Beuzetta 2:06½ by Onward 2:25½, owned by millinaire W. E. D. Stokes, New York City, was found dead in a paddock at the Patchen Wilkes stud farm, in Lexington, Ky., last Wednesday night. Horsemen regarded this as one of the most valuable trotting foals ever dropped in Kentucky.

The British mule camp which has been maintained at Lathrop, Mo., since May, 1901, during which time 80,000 horses and mules for use in South Africa have been handled, is to be removed to Toronto, Canada, immediately. Nearly all the British officers stationed there have already left and 2000 horses still there will be shipped to Toronto within a few days.

The Stockton track is getting good and the horses are beginning to be sent occasional fast miles. Charles Whitehead has moved his string back to Stockton from Lodi, where he spent the early part of the year. He worked his green pacer The Mrs. by Derby Ash a mile in 2:13 the other day and she did it very handily. Topsy 2:12½ is at least a hundred pounds heavier than last year. The first mile he has had at speed this year was last Friday, when he was driven one in 2:17½, last half in 1:05½ and last quarter in 31½ seconds.

D. B. Stewart, of Spokane, is at Portland with his mares Altano 2:21½ and Duchess Medium to breed to Zombro. He also brought four belonging to H. W. Peel and two belonging to Chas Schroder. Mr. Peel's are: Deta, a Delpho mare; Detamont by Hambletonian Mambrino-Deta, and a Meredith mare. Mr. Schroder's are: an Antrim mare with colt by her side by Encounter and Lillian N. by Sidney.

Salt makes animals more lively, strong and capable of resisting disease. Their flesh is harder for it, and the functions of the body more regular. Their digestion is better, and they can feed on fodder that otherwise might be injurious to health. Moreover, with the assistance of salt, they can extract more nourishment from a given quantity of fodder, since the flow of the digestive liquids is more copious. Give salt with food difficult to digest.

We wish to call the attention of our Alameda county readers and others to the fact that the Oakland Carriage and Implement Co. have one of the finest lines of light speed and road wagons on the Pacific Coast. They also carry the celebrated Faber sulky, which holds so many world's records. Drop into their repository at 362-364-366 Twelfth street, Oakland, any day. You will be welcome, and they'll treat you right.

Chas. E. Clark will not be seen on the Eastern circuit with his good mare Sue 2:12½, unless she rounds to pretty soon which is not probable. Mr. Clark started for Los Angeles with her on his way East, but the mare contracted lung fever before reaching Los Angeles and came near dying. It is not likely that she will be able to race this year at all. Mr. Clark may race a few on the California circuit, as there are several owners who would like him to train and drive their horses.

J. M. Nelson arrived last week at Minneapolis from Alameda, Cal., with eight horses, as follows: Sola 2:14½, by McKinney; Dan W. 2:17½, by Director Hero; Lady Grannard 2:23, by McKinney; China Maid, 4, by McKinney, dam by Onward, entered in Chamber of Commerce and other stakes; Princess Airlie, 5, by Prince Airlie; Iloilo, 5, bay stallion, by Alexis 2:18, and a bay gelding, brother to Clay S. 2:13½. The Nelson lot start at Minneapolis and St. Paul and then go to Detroit. Their future movements will depend on circumstances.

A two year old Indian tiger was killed in a fight with horses on a circus train while en route from Goshen to Poughkeepsie last Friday. The tiger, which has been recently imported, escaped from its wagon den while the train was in motion. It crawled over the tops of four wagons and entered a car containing thirty draught horses. A fierce battle ensued, the panicky-stricken horses plunging and kicking at the savage intruder. When the train reached Poughkeepsie the tiger was found dead and mangled under the hoofs of one of the horses. Six of the horses were badly scratched and bitten.

A Fresno correspondent of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN writes that there are forty horses working at that track, some of which are very good ones. Among them is a green mare by Strathway that paced an easy mile in 2:20 the other day, and Mr. Eddy has one or two more by the same horse that can do the same. Peter Jackson is getting in good shape and will be hard to catch this year. Mr. Owens arrived at the Fresno track this week with eight runners and three harness horses. There is much interest in Fresno over the Breeders meeting to be held this fall, and the prospects are for a very successful fair and race meeting.

The following is from the Western Horseman of May 30th: "Budd Doble is looking after a string of four head at the Indianapolis track, but he has nothing that he will take to the races. He is educating a team of roan mares—Maud Newman 2:17½ by Anteeo Jr. and Neerbell by Neernut—that can trot a 2:20 gait to pole, and that are as nice a pair of light roadsters as can be found anywhere. He also has the handsome brown trotting stallion, Kinney Mc., by McKinney, and another green trotter. Mr. Doble will remain in Indianapolis for a week or so, when he will ship his horses to Cleveland. Orrin Hickok is not able to get around much yet, but his health is greatly improved, and he will probably be at work with his horses in a few days. His string includes the fast but erratic California side-wheeler, Clipper 2:06 by Diablo; Thornway, a bay pacing stallion by Steinway, and a green trotter by Wildnut. Mr. Hickok has expressed his opinion that at present the Indianapolis track is one of the best in the country for training purposes, and he will probably finish his training here."

Bavard, Judge Greene's three year old by Directum 2:05½ out of Little Witch by Director, that Millard Sanders has in training at Glenville track, is doing well. He worked a mile in 2:23½ the other day. Bavard is entered in the Kentucky Futurity. The American Sportsman says: "Millard Sanders is highly pleased with the manner in which his horses are working and acting and it would certainly seem as if the popular California reinsman would prove a prominent factor on the Grand Circuit this season. Dolly Dillon 2:07 has been a mile in 2:17, last quarter in 30½ seconds, and takes her work in an entirely different manner than last year. She scores in company without fretting or lugging, can be worked in front or behind and is easily placed. It really looks as if the fast daughter of Sidney Dillon should be one of the sensational trotters of the year. The four year old bay mare Lou Dillon by Sidney Dillon is a green trotter that will be heard from. On Monday she stepped a mile in 2:17½, the last half in 1:07, and she does it right. The chestnut gelding B. S. Dillon 2:25, also by Sidney Dillon, worked a mile last Friday in 2:13 and can brush a quarter in 30 seconds. He may face the starter in the Chamber of Commerce stake at Detroit. Anzella 2:10½ by Antrim, has been a mile in 2:14 and has lots of speed. Sir Albert S. 2:08½ has not been asked to beat 2:20 as yet but is in splendid condition."

Napa's Stake Entries.

Secretary Ed Bell of the Napa Agricultural Society, sends us the following list of entries for all the stakes closed by that association for its meeting to begin August 18th. Mr. Bell states that everything looks good for a prosperous meeting and the Directors are much pleased. They wish to call particular attention to the fact that "In addition to these harness races closed, they will give some 12 or 14 running races at their meeting, horses to be named the night before starting and to pay ten per cent entrance straight." On these terms the association will give all the running horses in the State of California a chance to start, if they so desire.

Do You Want Some of that $6000?

The third payment of $5 each in the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes, $6000 guaranteed, for foals of 1902, is due and must be made by July 1st. Nominators should not fail to make this payment, as not to do so will forfeit the previous payments. Every foal on which this payment is made will be worth much more than it would if it was not kept in the stake and if as a two year old it shows speed, the fact that it is eligible to start in the Breeders Stake will multiply its value according as it is promising. Nominators who entered in this stake and have been unfortunate in not getting a foal can substitute or make a transfer of their entry under the following condition:

"If a mare proves barren, or slips, or has a dead foal, or twins, or if either the mare or foals dies before January 2, 1903, her nominator may transfer his nomination or substitute another mare and foal, regardless of ownership; but there will be no return of a payment, nor will any entry be liable for more than amount paid in or contracted for."

Should a nominator have nothing to substitute he can sell his entry and transfer it to someone who has a foal and who failed to get in at the time the stake closed. This should be attended to at once and in the event of not immediately finding a transfer, it is still worth while to make the payment, as transfers do not close until the first of next January and the chances are that before that time someone will be pleased to get it and reimburse the nominator for the first, second and third payments, the total amount of which is $13.

Anyone who bred a good mare to a good stallion and who failed to enter should lose no time in putting in an application to Secretary Kelley and securing a transfer before the first of July, as all of those whose mares foaled will probably make this payment and the chances of getting in later may be rather slim. A number of applications are already on hand and those who have nominations that can be sold under the above condition will do well to notify the Secretary without delay, as by doing so they may get a transfer and a return of the first and second payments.

The Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes, $6000, guaranteed, is one of the best arranged stakes ever offered, as it provides for both trotters and pacers at both two and three years old. Two of these stakes have been closed and it is the intention of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association to open one every year. The first stake which closed September 1, 1900, was for foals of 1901. The two year old division of this stake will be trotted and paced next year.

Caustic Balsam Successful Where Other Remedies Failed.

NASHVILLE, TENN., NOV. 12, 1901.

The Lawrence-Williams Co., Cleveland, O.

Having used your liniment for several years, and knowing its value, I would like to become general agent for it. I find very few drug houses in Nashville have handled it. I can assure you I will push it to its fullest merits should you appoint me as agent, for I know it is unexcelled. I have used at least 20 or 30 bottles in past two years. Having been a trader, and also a deputy sheriff for the past eight years, I have had occasion to come in contact with a number of injured horses that no other liniment but this could have helped. I consider it the best liniment for stock that can be used. I would like to meet you sometime and give you my experience with your liniment; also can give you reference as to my ability.

At Santa Rosa Track.

While in all probability the Santa Rosa track will not be used for a district fair and race meeting, owing to the fact that the directors of the association there have become wedded to the street fair idea, there are still quite a number of horses being worked at the track for the races elsewhere. Johnny Quinn has several of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's colts and fillies by Sidney Dillon, McKinney and other sires. The young stallion Moringa King by McKinney out of By By by Nutwood is considered one of the handsomest horses in Sonoma county, and is showing speed of a high order. He was given a mark of 2:29½ last year as a three-year-old, simply as a precaution, but it is no measure of his ability, as 2:15 will not stop him.

Mr. Yandel, the well-known foundryman of Santa Rosa, has been showing a lot of speed with a handsome bay mare by Nassar, son of Stamboul 2:07½. She is out of a Secretary mare and is considered one of the best prospects in Santa Rosa. Mr. Yandel drove her a half in 1:08 the other day, according to reliable reports, and she trotted perfectly true and square. She is sixteen hands high, and a great road mare.

F. D. McGregor is working Cock Robin 2:20 and several others, and Mr. Lumsden is having several worked.

The Rosedale Stock Farm sold recently to different parties two full brothers by Daly 2:15, one a yearling, the other a two-year-old. Both these young stallions are to be kept by their new owners for breeding purposes, and that good judge of a horse, Thos. Bonner, says they are as near the ideal stock horse as one can expect to find in colts of their ages. Their dam is Hazel Turk by Silas Skinner 2:17, second dam the great broodmare Miss Brown by Volunteer 1758, third dam Maggie Dale by Owen Dale, son of Williamson's Belmont. Both will be over 16 hands, large and handsome, with beautiful manes and tails, and fine action. On breeding they are in the top row.

Some Telling Figures.

The Blue Ribbon Sale of 1902 at Cleveland has passed into history as the most successful horse sale ever held in that great center of light harness speed. The detailed report was published two weeks ago, but contained some slight inaccuracies, which are not material except in so far as they affect the general averages. Through the courtesy of Fasig-Tipton Co. we are now able to give our readers the correct totals and averages as follows:

	Number Horses sold.	Total.	Average.
May 13.....	81	$32,740	$404
May 14.....	91	40,510	445
May 15.....	101	35,720	353
May 16.....	87	19,085	219
Total.....	360	$128,055	$355.70

Last year 346 horses were sold for $97,502, an average of $281.70, so that the average is $74 per head higher this year than last—a sure sign of the marked improvement in the market. On the last day's sale there were a number of post entries not catalogued, and although they sold well, they were a cheap lot—and so brought down the day's average. Horses of equal quality brought as much, if not a little more money towards the close of the sale than at any other time; and for horses of a high grade, with speed, the demand was not nearly satisfied. Three times as many horses as were catalogued worth from $1500 to $3000 could have found ready purchasers. The market for high-class speed for road, track and matinee is unusually active and promises to be more so this fall and next spring.

All Purses Will Be Paid.

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 5, 1902.

ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Several of the secretaries of North Pacific Fair Association members, have advised me that in some of the letters of inquiry received from California horse owners a fear is expressed that at some of the points on the circuit the purses will either be declared off or considerably reduced in amount, permit me to state that such will not in any case be permitted or practiced. Article 14 of the Constitution of the North Pacific Fair Circuit is as follows—"That all races advertised by a member, should a sufficiency of duly entered horses attend, shall be decided, and that no deductions from such purse or deviation from the value thereof shall be made, weather conditions alone excepted."

The early closing harness stakes throughout the circuit have received a very liberal entry, and as in a short time the associations will all have their full programs in the hands of the owners, a very large exodus of horses to our various points may be confidently anticipated. By inserting this letter you will greatly oblige,
Yours truly,

ROBERT LEIGHTON,
Secretary North Pacific Fair Association.

Hambletonian Blood Predominates.

A thoughtful article in the New York Herald tends to show that all trotters soon will trace to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, whose blood is fast supplanting that of other tribes. No horse of any breed, in any country, at any period, has left such an impression in so short a time. All champions but one since Dexter's day have carried Hambletonian's blood. He has 135 descendants in the 2:10 list. There are only three trotters of this extreme speed that do not trace to the great performer. The article reads as follows:

So much is heard in the horse talk of to-day about Baron Wilkes, Chimes, Allerton and other popular trotting sires, and the name of Rysdyk's Hambletonian is so rarely mentioned, that comparatively few horse-men of the rising generation realize the extent to which the blood of the "old horse" abounds in the fastest performers on the turf.

Although David Bonner and many others who are still hale and hearty can remember when Hambletonian was unknown, and though little more than a quarter of a century has gone by since he died, the great mass of all the trotters now living have more or less of his blood in their veins.

The family which he founded so far overshadows all others that the tribes springing from Mambrino Chief, Ethan Allen, George M. Patchen and other contemporaries of Hambletonian are now generally referred to as "the minor trotting families." They are falling further to the rear in the records of each succeeding campaign, and are fast dropping out of sight. So high an authority as John H. Wallace, the founder of the Trotting Register, says the time is close at hand when every American trotter of note will be credited in some degree to the one really great progenitor, Hambletonian.

No horse of any breed in this or any other country has at any period left such an impression on the horse stock in so short a time.

Foaled in 1849, at the little village of Sugar Loaf, in Orange county, N. Y., and got by an old horse so little valued that his inhuman owners turned him out to starve to death on the sandy wastes of Long Island in 1852, from a broken down New York road mare, Hambletonian began his career as an obscure cross roads stud horse, not recognized as belonging to any particular breed. Jonas Seely, the old Bull's Head cattle driver, who bred him, sold colt and dam for $125 in the fall of 1849 to William M. Rysdyk, then a farm hand in Seely's employ.

So late as 1857, when Henry William Herbert (Frank Forester) published his elaborate work on the horse and horsemanship of America, Hambletonian was still so little known that his name did not get into the book, although he was then, and from his birth had been, owned in the next county but one from the spot where Herbert wrote these words:

"Of trotters it is now certain there is no distinctive breed or family or mode of breeding. The qualities of the trotting horse cannot be ascribed to his origin from connection with any one blood more than another. Some trotters of first rate powers come from Canadian or Norman French stock; some from ordinary undistinguished country horses; some from the Vermont family; some from the Indian pony, and some mainly, if not entirely, from the thoroughbred."

It was not until 1862 that the great son of Tredwells Abdallah and the Charles Kent mare gained a reputation sufficient to justify William M. Rysdyk in raising his stud fee above $35. Robert Fillingham, afterward known as George Wilkes 2:22, was the trotter that earned it for him. In that year "Eph" Simmons matched this son of Hambletonian against the famous Ethan Allen for $5000 a side, and won a great race over the Fashion course, on Long Island, giving his young horse a mark of 2:24½, which was then surpassed only by George M. Patchen's champion stallion record of 2:23½.

Dexter, by Hambletonian, began his brilliant career in 1864. Shark, another son of Hambletonian, that once defeated Dexter, came out in the same year. The season brought to the front Goldsmith Maid, by a son of the Rysdyk horse, and with all four of these great trotters going at once the Hambletonian boom began. Beginning with the advent of George Wilkes in 1862, his stud fee jumped to $75, and then to $100, $300 and $500 in successive seasons, and his colts commanded prices until then unheard of for horses of any type in America.

Hambletonian died in 1876, leaving about 1333 foals, all told. Forty of them gained trotting records of 2:30 or better. One hundred and fifty of his sons got 1478 trotters of standard speed, and eighty of his daughters produced 110 trotters in the 2:30 list. In the succeeding generations, the achievements of the family are still more remarkable, and it is estimated that nearly if not quite 15,000 of the 17,625 trotters now in the 2:30 list are descended from the "old hero of Chester," through either sire or dam, or both.

Since Dexter's day, every trotter save one that has lowered the world's record has carried the blood of Hambletonian. The exception is Rarus 2:13½, whose sire was of unknown breeding. In the list of champions, Goldsmith Maid 2:14; St. Julien 2:11½; Jay-Eye-See 2:10; Maud S. 2:08½; Susol 2:08½ and Nancy Hanks 2:04, were the offspring of Hambletonian's sons, and the last named record holder was not only by a son of Hambletonian, but from a mare that was by another son of the old horse. Alix 2:03½, was the only champion since Hambletonian's time that was not descended from him in the direct male line. She, however, had more crosses to the Rysdyk horse than any other champion in the lot, her sire being closely inbred to the great fountain head of trotting speed, while her dam was by a grandson of that horse.

All of the champion trotting stallions of the last twenty-five years have traced through one or more lines to Hambletonian, and all except Nelson 2:09, were his lineal descendants in the male line. This is true, also of the young trotters that during this period have advanced the best time on record for yearlings from 2:40 to 2:23; for two year olds from 2:40 to 2:10½; for three year olds from 2:29 to 2:08½, and for four year olds from 2:24 to 2:05½.

Perhaps no other test is so convincing of the greatness of Hambletonian as the test of the 2:10 list. This is the rate of speed now recognized as representing the capacity required to win races at the most important trotting meetings, and unless a horse can reach it he is no longer to be considered as a trotter of extreme speed.

At the close of the campaign of 1901, 138 trotters had earned records of 2:10 or better. Of this number no less than 135 traced to Hambletonian, Grace Hastings 2:08; Lord Clinton 2:08½ and Walter E. 2:10 being the only trotters in the list that were without his blood.

The all prevailing dominance of the Hambletonian male line comes out strikingly when the blood lines of the sires of 2:10 trotters are analyzed. Only seven horses not possessing Hambletonian blood ever got a 2:10 trotter. These were Mambrino King, the sire of Lord Derby 2:06½; Hamlin's Nightingale 2:08 and Daredevil 2:09; Bayonne Prince, the sire of Grace Hastings 2:08½; Walker's Morrill, the sire of Lamp Girl 2:09; Young Rolfe, the sire of Nelson 2:09; Patchen Mambrino, the sire of Walter E. 2:10, and Governor Benton, the sire of Benton M. 2:10. Of all the trotters in the 2:10 list, 121 were got by sires descended from Hambletonian in the direct male line.

In the early days of the Hambletonian family various outcrosses had their periods of popularity. All the old-time horsemen will remember the rage for Hambletonian-Star blood which followed the appearance of the immortal Dexter, whose dam was a daughter of Seely's American Star. Then came the cross of Hambletonian and Clay blood, made popular by St. Julien 2:11½, George Wilkes, Electioneer and other stars of the turf and the stud. The Hambletonian and Mambrino Chief combination had its day of unequalled fashion, and the sensational performances of Maud S. and Jay Eye See, both by sons of Hambletonian from daughters of Pilot Jr. gave a boom to this mixture of trotting blood in the early eighties.

Judged by the cold statistics of the 2:10 list, none of these crosses equals in fruitfulness inbreeding to Hambletonian. The most successful horsemen have doubled and redoubled in their studs the blood of the world famous trotting progenitor, and the greatest of trotters have resulted from this course. Cresceus 2:02½, the champion of champions, traces to him through both sire and dam, as did Alix 2:03½, and Nancy Hanks 2:04, the champion of a few years ago.

The extent to which the great trotters of to-day are inbred to the horse that made Orange county famous will probably surprise even the closest students of breeding who examine the records. A careful scrutiny of the 2:10 list reveals the fact that 102 horses out of a total of 138 have two or more crosses to Hambletonian. Many of these are intensely inbred. Boralma 2:07, for example, traces to Hambletonian through seven different lines.

Painted Horse Recognizes His Master.

William Ganusky stole a white faced horse from a man for whom he worked last winter, at Little Falls, New York. He painted the horse's white face with hair dye to conceal its identity and the disguise was so successful that Ganusky was not suspected, although a search had been going on for the horse for three months.

James Marsh, owner of the horse, passed the animal where he was hitched in the street, and it showed such signs of recognition and joy at seeing him that Mr. Marsh's attention was attracted. He looked the horse over and recognized it as his own, although he could not account for the loss of its white face. He notified the police and after Ganusky was arrested he confessed to the theft and the hair dye expedient.

A THOUSAND DOLLAR PURSE is offered by the Vancouver Jockey Club for the fourth Dominion Day Handicap, a race for all ages at a mile and a quarter. The purses for the two days' racing at Vancouver, July 1st and 2d, under the auspices of this club, aggregate nearly $3000. Entries close June 25th for races No. 1, 5 and 7, and on June 28th for the others. See the entire program in our advertising columns to-day.

MR. JOHN H. SHULTZ, the wealthy New York horse breeder, has had very bad luck with his foals this season at his Port Chester farm. No less than seventeen foals have died this year, among them Sunol's foal by The Earl 2:17, son of Mambrino King. As this great mare's foal of 1901 by Oro Wood also died, she is now without a descendant. She is sixteen years old and it is to be hoped that hereafter better luck will attend her offspring.

HUMANE OWNERS of horses in the interior of this State where the days are hot during the summer months, and the sun shines all day unobscured by a cloud, are adopting the Eastern fashion of fitting their horses with summer bonnets. A Redding paper states that the idea has become so popular that there is hardly a horse drawing an express, delivery, baggage or other wagon about town, which does not now wear a hat. Even here in San Francisco, where the hot days in each year may be counted on the fingers, the horse hat is coming in vogue and a number of teamsters have fitted their horses with them.

THE FIRST MEETING of the year will be held at the San Jose track during July 3d, 4th and 5th. There are nine purses of $500 each for trotters and pacers and classes have been arranged so as to give everybody a chance. San Jose, as everybody knows, has one of the best and safest tracks in California and the new Board of Directors of the district agricultural society will do everything in their power to make the meeting a success and pleasant for horsemen who attend. "Purses will be paid promptly after each race" is the announcement made, and Secretary Main should get a large entry list. Entries close Monday next, June 15th. Let every horse owner get in and give San Jose a boost this year. The meeting takes place during the National holiday week, when everybody can get away from business for a few days and have a good time.

THE WAGON RECORD is in danger this year, as several of the wealthy Easterners are desirous of establishing a new one for both trotters and pacers. Mr. C. K. G. Billings of Chicago, who owns more fast horses than any amateur in America, drove his horse Dr. Monical a mile in 2:09 1/4 to wagon at New York the other day, which is the fastest mile a pacer has shown to wagon so far this year. On the same day he drove his pacer Hontas Crook a mile to wagon in 2:11, and his trotting mare Louise Jefferson 2:17, a mile to wagon in 2:11. These are fast miles with four wheels for this season of the year.

FAST MILES are being shown on workout days at every California track where horses are in training. There will be considerable speed shown in the races this summer, but some that are showing so well now will be on the shelf by the time the bell rings. California tracks get hard very quickly after the rainy season ends, and before trainers realize it the horses are hammering the soundness out of their legs and feet. Plenty of water is needed on all California tracks during the summer season to make them suitable for training purposes. When the day of racing comes it is well enough to have a hard track, but until that time horses worked on a soft track will be in better shape to win when the heats are split. Where water is scarce the tracks are sometimes harrowed deeply to prevent their getting hard, but in this climate the dust soon gets so unbearable that trainers choose the hard track instead of the dusty one as the lesser of two evils. We suggest to associations that desire to maintain a good reputation for their tracks as training places, that they be generous with water from now on and not simply sprinkle the surface, but soak the track well and not harrow too deeply. The more sound horses there are by August 1st, the larger fields there will be in the races, and large fields help to draw large crowds and are conducive to success in many ways.

"THE CIRCUIT LOOKS GOOD" says every horseman who has heard how the early closing purses for the Napa and Fresno meetings filled. Napa averaged ten to a race, having eighty entries for eight purses. The complete list is published to-day and nearly all the best trotters and pacers in California are named. With the local district purses these races will furnish three days of high class sport for harness horse owners and then the track will be given to the runners for two days. The Napa association proposes to hang up good money for the runners and charge them ten per cent entrance. The entry list for The California, the $2000 stake for 2:24 class trotters offered by the P. C. T. H. B. A., is a revelation to those who get up programs for race meetings. It has twenty-two entries, and a well posted horseman who has been around the State a good deal this spring states that in his opinion nearly every one of the twenty two will be ready to start when the bell rings, barring accidents in the meantime, and that it will be one of the greatest races ever held in California. Second money will be as good in this race as first money in the best of the others that have been announced so far. There are a few free-for-all trotters and pacers in California for which there may not be racing, owing to the fact that they are not numerous enough to fill a race. We think associations should recognize the fast ones if possible and that special effort should be made to secure a free-for-all pace at least, as the California record might be lowered were the best of them brought together in a race. Here is an opportunity for some enterprising organization to secure a drawing card for its fair, and a little energetic hustling among owners would accomplish it.

Answers to Correspondents.

W. J. E., Fortuna, Cal.—The mare you refer to is not Belle King, but Belle, and her record is 2:11 pacing. She is a chestnut mare foaled 1887, and is by Melbourne King 1962, dam Mattie by All Right. She is a registered mare and her pedigree will be found in Volume IX of the American Trotting Register. Her record of 2:11 was made at Los Angeles, October 17th, 1896, in a race for trotters and pacers. Hazel H. won the first and second heats in 2:15 and 2:13. Belle took the next three in 2:12, 2:11 and 2:11. The trotters Altas, Frank L. and Toggles were the other starters in this race.

BREEDING OF ROSETTE.—In our last week's issue in this department we gave the breeding of the mare, Rosette, owned by Mr. Frank Denio of Vallejo, in which it was stated that her second dam was Ruth Ryan by Lodi, which is as it appeared in a tabulated pedigree in our possession. Mr. Geo. Bement who bred Rose by General Taylor, the dam of Rosette, writes us as follows in which he states that the second dam of the mare was Rose Ryan and not Ruth Ryan, and knowing Mr. Bement as we do, we are certain that his statement is correct. His letter is as follows:

MELROSE, June 9, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: A few days ago I received a letter from Mr. F. M. Denio of Vallejo, in regard to a gray mare I bred, and afterwards was owned by Mr. G. W. Hill. He writes, "she was a gray mare out of a General Taylor mare, her dam was Ruth Ryan, so I was informed by Mr. Hill." This is a mistake, as General Taylor never served Ruth Ryan who was a thoroughbred by Lodi and bred and owned by the late Nathan Coombs. The gray mare Mr. Hill owned, was by General Taylor out of Rose Ryan, a mare that was brought from Michigan and said to be sired by a Black Hawk stallion and out of a thoroughbred mare and driven with Punch as a livery team by Roe Allen. They could trot together in about three minutes. I got her from Roe and bred her to General Taylor and raised two fillies from her. The one Mr. Hill had was named Spitfire and she is probably the dam of Rosette—and to my certain knowledge, Ruth Ryan is not her second dam. As I wrote before, General Taylor was never bred to her. Yours truly, GEO. BEMENT.

The Carr Sale.

Letters of inquiry and applications for catalogues are coming in from all parts of the Pacific Coast to Fred H. Chase & Co., successor to Killip & Co., livestock auctioneers, who are getting ready for the dispersal sale of Hon. Jesse D. Carr's horses on the Gabilan Stock Farm. The sale is to be held at 1732 Market street, corner of Van Ness avenue, where millions of dollars worth of horses and other live-stock have changed hands during the past twenty years.

Those who read over the catalogue will be surprised at the number of choicely bred mares and fillies that are to be offered for sale. There are quite a number by Carr's Mambrino, a son of Mambrino Patchen, and many of these are out of mares by Williamson's Belmont and his son Owen Dale. Some are by Antevolo, son of Electioneer and the great Columbine, some by Boodle 2:12, some by Ecce 15993, a son of Eclectic full brother to the renowned champion Arion 2:07 1/2, and some are by Eugeneer, a son of Electioneer. There are colts and fillies by Boodle, Jr., 34834. A majority of the aged mares are standard and registered and all are in splendid condition. Some of the young foals at their sides are worth more than the mares will probably be sold for. It will be one of the best opportunities ever offered to get high class stock at auction. Send to Fred H. Chase & Co., 1732 Market street for a catalogue.

Cresceus' Owner Clears $142,000.

Lee M. Boda, manager of the Valentine Theatre, Toledo, the Great Southern, Columbus, the Victoria, Dayton and the English Opera House, Indianapolis, reached New York last Monday, says the New York Telegraph, and anchored at the Navarre in Seventh avenue.

He is here to arrange with Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger for the season's bookings at his theatres for next season and to look after the interests of Cresceus, the world's champion stallion.

George H. Ketcham, his owner, and Mr. Boda, the manager, handle the famous stallion the same as if he were a capricious star of the footlights. They play him at State and county fairs and race meets on a big percentage basis.

They send out an advance agent to each place. This man's duty it is to visit sporting instead of dramatic editors, and he is equipped with all kinds of photos of the famous Cresceus breaking records at various tracks, and in several heart breaking heat finishes in races in which two or more speeders have participated.

Boda says Cresceus' enterprising owner and driver cleared $142,000 last season, with never a kick from the star performer as to the size of type in advertisements, hotel or dressing room accommodations.

It is the intention to send Cresceus on a rather comprehensive tour of the west and south this summer and fall and wind up the season with him late in November at a big meeting to be held in Havana, Cuba.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

SACRAMENTO, June 9, '02.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: My colt by Athadon, dam Lustrine by Onward, is meeting with much favor since his arrival and don't look like the same colt after getting the alfalfa out of him. I have bred him to three good mares, one by Don Marvin, one by Holmdel, one by a son of Sidney. I also have an offer to bring him to Oakland and mate him with three of as good mares as there are in Alameda county.

I do not know of any driving horses for sale at this place. My friend, Mr. Brown, from San Francisco, was looking for a good driver but could not find it here.

The horses at the track are looking fine and moving up some. Hi Hogaboom has a fine young pacer by Gossiper out of a Patchen mare that is headed for the 2:15 list.

S. V. Tryon has a large string and some very promising pacers are among them and they look in the pink of perfection.

Chris. Jorgensen can be seen at any time behind some good colts that he is learning good manners and to drive in fine shape.

Sam Hoy has a string that you know and they are ready now for hard work, and to see them move reminds one of old times.

Mr. Clark has Ouiboul here and a few others in fine shape.

S. V. Mitchell has four good young horses; one by Zombro, one by Bay Bird and one by Kentucky Baron.

Of course the usual lot of hot air is spilt every Sunday, but out of it comes some good. There are a number of runners quartered here and the track is in better fix and puts on a better appearance than it has for some time. Sacramento has more good sound driving horses than any city in California, even on its mail wagons, which is an exception.

Mrs. Callendine has a show horse sure in the colt by Nutwood Wilkes out of Lady Keating.

I forgot to say in the above that my colt can not trot fast enough to keep him warm under the saddle, but I live in hopes that he may cut loose some day and surprise us.

A Pittsburg Man Hunts for Cheap Speed.

[Cleveland Amateur Sportsman.]

"An opportunity to purchase fast young trotting gelding, Sidney Boy, at tenth cost price, $125; bay horse, seven years old, nearly 16 hands, weighs 1100; race record, 2:29½; trotted mile in 2:16½, and a half in 1:03½; was in several road races and won them all; used as road and fancy horse until recently he took fright at bands of music and ran away; driven by a lady; warranted sound, fearless of locomotive or trolleys; to trot in 2:20 or no sale; name of gentleman that trained and drove him in his races furnished purchaser. Telegraph Phonon Realty Co., 209 S. Eighth street, Philadelphia."

Editor American Sportsman—Please publish above sale notice and save other speed hunters who want a 2:20 horse for $125. The enclosed "ad" is taken from a Pittsburg Sunday paper. I noticed it last Sunday week, May 25th. So, bright and early I was up and ready to take the first train for Philadelphia on Monday morning. I telegraphed "Phenlon Realty Co." to meet me. I arrived in the Quaker City about 8:30 P. M. Monday. Was met at the depot by two men who was to show me "Sidney Boy." So I went with them. I must have walked five or six miles. It was quite dark when we came to a very quiet alley. I at first hesitated about going up, when one of them said, "Just wait here and I will go up and bring the horse from the barn." We waited perhaps twenty minutes when the man with me said, "There may be something wrong. We had not gone more than 200 feet when I was hit on the back of the head with a billy or club, and the man who was with me caught me by the neck with one hand and pointed a big revolver at me with the other, and told me if I made any outcry it was sure death. They took my watch, $163 and a ring that I prized more than anything because it belonged to my dead wife. Fortunately I had a return ticket or I would have had to walk home. I mentioned the way I was treated to some of my Pittsburg friends, and the only consolation I received was, I got just what I deserved, for hunting a 2:20 horse for $125.

Most respectfully yours,

MICHAEL A. REESE.

Training Hints

Young trainers, like young men in all other kinds of business, are often inclined to look upon successful old-time trainers as "gone-bys," and ignore their advice, says the Horse Breeder. They sometimes make expensive mistakes in doing so. It takes years of experience to learn everything pertaining to the development of speed; the proper conditioning the animals for doing their best in races, the proper care of them at all times and the proper shoeing of them to enable them to show their highest rate of speed, and keep up the clip from wire to wire in races of broken heats. No two horses are exactly alike, and the method of treatment best adapted to one horse must be varied to meet the requirements of others. The successful trainers, who have had years of experience with all kinds of horses, can give the best of the younger progressive trainers valuable information upon many points, especially in regard to conditioning and shoeing their horses.

Most of the young trainers don't think so, however, especially if they happen to meet with success. They are apt to think that they know it all, and that the veteran trainers are "old fogies," set in their opinions, and their opinions and suggestions of no value. These comparatively young trainers sometimes take offense, even feel insulted, when a veteran trainer makes a suggestion or a suggestive remark concerning the method of the young trainer in fitting a horse for a race, when the remark or suggestion is made with the best intentions. A case in point is that of a successful but comparatively young trainer who was putting the finishing touches on a horse about a week before the horse was to start in an important race. The horse was worked five heats, two right around 2:17 and one in about 2:16. The veteran trainer happened to be at the track and saw the horse take his final preparation. After the last heat the old-timer was at the stable where the horse was brought to be unharnessed. A friend of the trainer who had worked the horse asked the veteran what he thought of the horse's chances of winning.

"When does this race come off?"

"One week from to-day."

"How fast will we have to go to win?"

"Possibly 2:16."

"He worked in 2:16 to-day?"

"Yes."

"He pleased you, didn't he? Went easily, well within himself?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, if they go in 2:16 in a week from to-day he will be very lucky if he gets fourth money, and will be lucky if he does not finish behind the flag."

"I am going to make a note of that," replied the questioner, laughing, "and we shall know after the race how nearly your prediction is to the truth."

"Very well. Put it down in black and white."

The best time made in the race was about 2:18, and the horse that had worked three heats in 2:18 or better, one of them in about 2:16, failed to get any part of the money. The experience of the old trainer convinced him that the horse was on edge the day he got his work, one week before the race, and it would take more than a week to get him back to that form again. He was right, too, but the trainer of the horse and those interested in him did not realize it until after the race was over, and then probably thought the horse had taken cold.

On another occasion the same old trainer went out to the track to work out a horse that was to start the following week. It was an extremely hot day, the first really sizzling one of the season. The mercury was hovering around 100 degrees in the shade. The old trainer decided not to work his horse that day. A young trainer who was located at the track had a fast horse that was to start the following week. He thought he must work his horse out to key him up for his race. He put a heavy woolen hood on the horse and worked him five heats. When he drove to his stall to unharness after the fifth heat, the old timer was there. After looking the horse over, he remarked pleasantly and with not the slightest idea of giving offense:

"Young man, this is a terribly hot day. I am afraid you won't be able to get that horse to the races this year."

The trainer showed plainly by his manner that he did not relish the remarks of the veteran. After the latter had left, he said to the groom: "These old fellows make me tired. They think they know it all. They don't seem to realize that the world moves."

The horse that was worked in the heat lost his appetite at once. His legs filled, and his heels soon cracked open. He had to be sent home. He did not start that year, and we believe that he was never heard from afterwards.

The methods of training, feeding and blanketing have changed considerably during the past thirty years, but the men who were successful trainers twenty-five or thirty years ago, and have followed the races ever since, can give the young trainers of the present day many valuable points that they have gained from personal experience and observation. It is best not to turn a deaf ear to their suggestions. Every trainer will learn something new from his own experience each year of his life, and should be able to profit by the experience of others as well as his own. It is safer to give a horse too little than too much work, especially when the weather suddenly changes from cold to extreme heat.

Use of Bandages.

Bandages applied loosely over a layer of cotton bathing for one hour after severe work support the small blood vessels and absorbents in and underneath the skin, and prevent filling and stiffness, says the Horse Breeder. If allowed to remain on longer they have the opposite effect from what is desired. After the bandages have been on for one hour, they should be removed and each leg briskly hand-rubbed for five minutes. This will do more good, by exciting the absorbents to act, than four hours pressure on bandages, which will do more harm than good. Bandaging the legs would not prevent laminitis. That is the result of a predisposition to rheumatism and also from not properly cooling the horse out. It is not necessary to walk a horse out after being jogged, only after a work-out. After a horse has been given a fast work-out or fast heat in a race and he is very warm and perspiring freely you must cool his head off at once by sponge and cold water, so as to change the current of blood away from the brain, otherwise he might have a hemorrhage from a rupture of the small blood vessels in the head. If, after the finish of a heat, the horse does not perspire freely, he must be sponged all over with hot water, covered with blankets, and be walked until he sweats very freely, and great care must be exercised in cooling him out. The surface of the body must always be kept very warm and dried very slowly. He may have plenty of cold water, but very little at a time, and while being cooled out, a little hay also. He must not be fed grain until he is perfectly cool.

Minnesota State Fair Races.

The Minnesota State Fair stands to-day the champion State Fair of America. For several seasons this fair has excelled all competitors but last year in the point of receipts, exhibits and attendance it excelled all the state fairs of the country.

The race program for the Minnesota State Fair is a most liberal one, $20,000 being given for eleven races during the week. Of this amount $10,000 is given for two $5000 purse events for the 2:21 trotters and the 2:13 pacers respectively, $9000 paid out for nine class events and the runners are provided with races each day in addition. The program is given in full in this issue and for entry blanks and other information the secretary, E. W. Randall, Hamline, Minn., should be addressed.

Fighting Power of Animals.

The comparative fighting powers of different animals can only be seen when they have actually been pitted against each other, and such encounters are not common, except when one forms the prey of the other. But there are sufficient instances of battles between rival carnivora to give material for an estimate.

In the pitched battles which sometimes take place between the great carnivora and the largest and most powerful of the ox tribe the forces of animal courage, desperation and bodily strength must be exhibited on a scale never elsewhere seen. Such combats do occur, but have seldom been witnessed, and still less frequently described.

Two or three African lions sometimes combine in such an attack, but from the marks seen on buffalo it is probable that sometimes there is a single combat, for it can hardly be supposed that the buffalo could escape from more than one lion. The number of foot pounds of energy put into such a struggle must be something extraordinary. The efforts of a lion which can strike a man's arm from the shoulder and leave it hanging by a strip of skin, or which can carry a cow over a high stockade, endeavoring unsuccessfully, in close grips, to drag down or disable a buffalo bull, must be on a gigantic scale, and the strength which can shake him off, and as it is believed, occasionally crush the lion afterward, must be even more amazing.

What a study in muscular action and the propelling or striking forces of limbs, neck and feet such a combat must exhibit. A buffalo bull has been credited with engaging three lions in mortal combat, and making a good fight before he was disabled by one of the lions hamstringing him by biting his legs from behind.

Tradition has it that a fight between a grizzly and a bison bull was one of those rare combats worth taking many chances to observe. In our own State battles royal have not been infrequent between ursus horribilis and a wild bull, the gallant leader of one of the many herds that in the days of early California roamed the grazing lands of the State. In both styles of combat, the grizzly is reputed to have generally been the victor.

Real combats of giants, thought not of such a desperate and deadly kind as these fights between the great carnivora and the bovines, are the combats of the hippopotami. The gigantic size and huge mouths of these creatures, larger than those of any mammal but the whale, and armed with teeth and tusks larger than those of whales, are elements in the fighting not equalled by any other pitched battles in the animal world. An elephant fight is carried on with far less formidable weapons, so long as the creatures meet only face to face.

The results of fights between wild animals in captivity are only partial evidences of the prowess of the respective combatants, because there is, as a rule, not sufficient room on the battle grounds for the display of activity or resource. But the list of accidental combats, which grows as menageries become more numerous, suggest that the battle is not always to the strong.

In a Continental collection a fight took place recently between a polar bear and an Indian sloth bear. The advantage in size and activity was so far on the side of the white bear that the result of the fight was somewhat unexpected. The smaller and awkward sloth bear killed the white bear without difficulty, and suffered very little itself, to the surprise of those who witnessed the "mill." Lookers-on are perhaps apt to underrate the physical effort which any kind of a combat at close quarters involves. But, however, it can be said of most animal combats that the principals generally fight for all they are worth. But, in exception, it must be admitted that the combats of deer have a good deal of sham about them. Fallow bucks will go on stupidly pushing at each other and clashing their horns for two or three hours at a time, neither being any the worse afterward. Red deer, which have pointed antlers, and can kill a dog, and injure and probably kill a man, seldom seem to hurt one another with their horns, though the struggle looks terrific.

Among the few instances recorded of the death of a stag in such an encounter was that of a red deer at Powerscourt, England. It was killed by a hybrid stag, a cross between the red species and the Japanese deer introduced into the wild park by the Dargle. In this case the horns of the hybrid were of quite a different kind from those carried by the red stag, which enabled it to get inside the other's guard and pierce its skull.

Among the antelopes there is one species, the sable antelope, which is not only a bold fighter in self-defense, but has devised a system quite as ingenious as as those taught in schools of arms. It has very long, pointed horns bending backward. If wounded or attacked by dogs it lies down, thus protecting all the exposed under parts, but abandoning apparently both the power of movement and the advantage of height. But by swinging its neck or tossing its head it can cover its whole body by strokes of its powerful and sharp horns, just as a fencer covers the body with his foil. This antelope is credited with the ability to kill any dog which attacks it in this position, which it probably also adopts when defending itself against wild animals.

The bravest and undoubtedly the fiercest fighter is the Bulldog or Bull Terrier. Tradition and popular opinion are quite correct in the estimate made of them, and breeders both of Greyhounds and other sporting dogs who wished to strengthen the courage and fibre of their dogs have given practical effect to it by crossing with the Bulldog.

Mr. Saunderson, a hunter of elephant catching fame, had a mixed pack of dogs, which he taught to attack big game. To these he added some Bulldogs. The older dogs always caught their game, if possible, by the nose, and would hold on whether the animal ran or stopped. One was carried several hundred yards by a buffalo without letting go, and three would render a large bear helpless.

The most astonishing feat achieved by these Bulldogs, so the story goes, was that one, alone, caught a wild elephant. It was a young one, which the Bulldog seized by the root of the trunk, and held on until the animal was overtaken and roped by the men. The success of the Bulldog in these encounters with large animals is the more remarkable because it is so light in comparison with the creatures attacked that shock does not assist it in any degree. But it counterbalances this disadvantage by attacking the muzzle, where what weight it has is most effective, both in aiding the attack and in embarrassing its opponent when seized.

The sagacity and fighting qualities of the monkey tribe is here aptly illustrated. The third battalion of the West Surrey regiment on their return from two years of field service in South Africa brought with them as a soldier's pet, a tame baboon, which had joined them from the Nieuwveld mountains, affording a gratifying instance of loyalty among the original inhabitants of that part of Cape Colony, as Tommy Atkins puts it. The animal was so well able to take care of itself that, though frequently attacked by dogs, it always beat them in single combat, and once, when chased by a pack of nearly twenty, it succeeded, according to a regimental report of the row, in "besting them at all quarters."

For their size baboons and some of the various macaque monkeys are probably the most formidable fighters in the animal world, except the cat tribe. This is the more remarkable because these powers are not developed "professionally." They do not use violence to obtain their food, and only employ their extraordinary quickness and powers of biting in self-defense. Those who have seen them attacked by dogs say that they never lose their heads, and that they can spring in any direction from a sitting position and inflict a disabling bite with absolutely no indication that they mean to take the offensive.

The other tales of fighting monkeys are also corroborative of the simian tribes' abilities to take care of themselves in a scuffle.

A baboon kept in Cape Town would gather up in one hand the long chain by which he was taken out for walks or tied to a wagon, and so appear to be in close captivity as he went along the road. This would tempt the local dogs to make demonstrations within range, when the baboon would fling down the chain, spring on to the nearest dog and nearly bite his foot off.

A small monkey, weighing only twelve pounds, used to be backed to fight dogs in Birmingham. It always won against dogs of twice its own weight.

From the foregoing it will be easy to draw the conclusion that brains, with animals as with human beings, prove of more value than mere size or strength. Monkeys think and in fights with dogs seem to win, without much danger to themselves. A bull or buffalo will charge with head down and eyes closed, when worried or attacked by a Bulldog. The dog will seize its big adversary by the muzzle and worry the beast into giving up the combat. When the big animals come together it is generally a question of weight, strength and punishing powers, as well as gameness and staying qualities.

Stonehenge vs. Some Field Trial Setters.

At our recent bench show we saw some English Setters weighing thirty and thirty-five pounds—one, a field trial winner, the handler informed us, weighed but twenty-eight pounds. There is a growing tendency on the part of some sportsmen to breed light Setters and Pointers. In doing this we believe a grave mistake has been made. So far as intelligence and "bird sense" is concerned, these light weights are apparently high-class dogs. In other respects they are wanting materially. The plea is made that a big dog is in its own way, is lumbering and clumsy and will wear itself out. The happy medium desired is a combination of brains, weight and conformation that will give a maximum of results by the expenditure of a minimum quantity of energy; just sufficient to make the dog a racing machine for the time being. This is certainly a commendable desire, but experience has proven that the price paid is not worth the sacrifice. These canine automobiles are created on such an ethereal structure that the dogs deemed worth giving a field training are nearly all bundles of highly tensioned nerves. This combination of snap and speed enables the handlers to bring off some very sensational grand stand heats at field trials. As dogs of this class, in many cases, bring good prices from wealthy fanciers, there is unfortunately a tendency to keep the supply equal to the demand.

When field dogs, particularly English Setters, are bred so that the essential qualities of stamina, vitality and structure are condensed or toned down, then the day of the Setter, as a working field dog, will be numbered and the decadence of the breed will commence.

We have many good English Setters on the Coast, strong, lusty, lasting workers and handsome, typical dogs as well—not cart horses for size, be it understood. There is no reason why these splendid specimens should be sidetracked or overlooked in following a fancy of emasculation, often catered to and fostered by ignorant and irresponsible writers in our daily papers, the only interest these individuals have in the matter being the filling of space with a lot of sensational and misleading dribble, or the temporary patronage of the well endowed sportsman—and oftentimes this latter gentleman is a good natured, whole souled easy going fellow who has been known to take so much interest in a field trial, for instance, that he would turn over his dog or dogs to a trainer, get his gun and ammunition together and spend the day quail shooting, awaiting the daily newspaper reports for a fulsome account of his dog's performances in the field trials.

While this may be all right from an individual standpoint, it is all wrong when dogs under such auspices are heralded as criterions and lauded as model field and working dogs.

At the Santa Maria field trials last January several of the high class chasers were pumped out completely at the end of a single comparatively short heat, showing marked inability to perform an honest day's work, on birds, in the field with the gun.

The illustration may not be far fetched in referring to the death of the English Setter Sioux, whose death was due to the exposure and hard work gone through in the championship stake race with Clip Wind'em. The weather and conditions were harsh in the extreme, so much so, that Wind'em, it was reported, after a two hours and thirty-four minutes run, gave up. Sioux, game, high-class, and racily built, one of the class developed as modern American Setters, but of Llewellyn extraction, kept up the work heroically until taken up, after a heat of three hours and a half, thoroughly exhausted and in a lamentable condition, from the effects of this running she never recovered. There is an element of cruelty in this incident that is repugnant to the sportsman and all lovers of a game dog. This trial was more than enough for the staunchest kind of field dog.

Much has been written recently commenting on the general desertion of bench shows by the owners and breeders of field trial and "shooting" Setters. The bench show Setter fanciers have had their say concerning the other Setter fellows. The Standard has been picked and pecked here and there and changes made from time to time. In all this latter controversy, "Stonehenge," an authority of no less weight at the present time than he was several decades ago, has been shelved, and fatwits whose knowledge of the breed is meagre and superficial, frequently pose as the "real thing" on Setters. "Stonehenge" is unknown to many, evidently forgotten by some, and, sad to say, ignored by others, whose presumption is a poor excuse, for the possible harm they may encompass. The words of the eminent writer mentioned, pertaining to the breed, are comprehensive and of much value in giving the style and conformation of the dog best adapted for field work. The following will be of much interest to those who admire the rare virtue of truth as an abstract quality in its application to dogs:

"The four divisions of the United Kingdom may be said to have each a breed of Setters peculiar to itself, though of late years many of each variety have been distributed beyond the limits of their respective districts. The English Setter may be taken as the true type of the breed, next to which comes the Irish Setter, while the old Llanidloes, or Welsh breed, retain more of the Spaniel character. Their curly waterproof coats are, however, admirably suited to the wet climate of their native hills. It is said, and I think probably with truth, that the Scotch or Gordon Setter is crossed with the Bloodhound, which gives the comparatively heavy head and long folding ears often shown by him, and at the same time accounts for the delicacy of his nose and for the coarseness of his coat. At all events, his appearance is not so typical as that of the English and Irish breeds. The Gordons are now usually described as black and tans, to avoid the disputes as to the breeding of the several entries, for while there is no doubt that many black and tans are not true Gordons, it is also indisputable that many true Gordons are black, white and tan. Similar remarks may apply to the Irish Setter, but he has not been treated in the same way, though no doubt a red Setter of English breed, without any Irish blood, if exhibiting the desired points in perfection, would win in an Irish class. I must, however, take things as I find them, and describe the Setter according to the definition given in our prize lists, omitting the Welsh Setter, which is not of sufficient importance to interest any but the few possessors of him who remain.

The Setter is, without doubt, descended from the Spaniel, or both are offshoots from the same parent stock. Originally—that is, before the improvements in the gun introduced the practice of "shooting flying"—it was believed that he was merely a Spaniel taught to stop or "set" as soon as he came upon the scent of the partridge, when a net was drawn over the covey by two men. Hence he was made to drop close to the ground, an attitude which is now unnecessary; though it is taught by some breakers, and notably to very fast dogs, who could not otherwise stop themselves quickly enough to avoid flushing. Manifestly, a dog prone on the ground allowed the net to be drawn over him better than if he was standing up, and hence the former attitude was preferred, an additional reason for its adoption being probably that it was more easily taught to a dog like the Spaniel, which has not the natural cataleptic attitude of the Pointer. But when "shooting flying" came into vogue breakers made the attempt to assimilate the attitude of the setting Spaniel, or "Setter," as he is now called, to that of the Pointer; and in process of time, and possibly also by crossing with that dog, they succeeded, though, even after the lapse of more than a century, the cataleptic condition is not so fully displayed by the Setter as by the Pointer. In the present day as a rule the standing position is preferred, though some well known breakers, and notably George Thomas, Mr. Statter's keeper, have preferred the "drop," which certainly enables a fast dog to stop himself more quickly than he could do by standing up. It is, however, attended with the disadvantage that in heather or clover a "dropped" dog cannot be seen nearly so far as if he were standing, and on one occasion, at the Bala Trials of 1873, the celebrated Ranger was lost for many minutes, having "dropped" on game in a slight hollow, surrounded by heather. As a rule, therefore, the standing position is the better one, but in such fast dogs as Ranger and Drake "dropping" may be excused. At the above meeting, however, after a long and evenly balanced trial between Mr. Macdonald's Ranger and Mr. R. J. Llewellyn Price's Belle, the latter only won by her superior attitude in the point, and Ranger was again penalized for dropping at Ipswich in 1873.

With regard to the low carriage of the Setter's flag when at work and his Spaniel-like lashing of it, I think they indicate his Spaniel descent and are to be considered from that point of view. This "tail action" is now out of fashion with many good sportsmen, who allege that grouse, as well as partridge, do not lie so well to a dog exhibiting it fully as they do to a quiet trail. In theory this sounds well, but, as far as I know, it was never propounded until it was required to excuse the fox-like trail of Drake and Ranger in particular, and generally of the Laverack Setters; and I confess that in practice I never noticed it in a long experience with both kinds of flag carriage. My bias in favor of "tail action" was founded upon the close observation of three successive litters, which I bred from a wonderfully good bitch about thirty years ago. Lucy was extremely handsome, fast and untiring, which qualities, coupled with a good nose, gave her a considerable local reputation, and I think I may quote the opinion of that excellent sportsman, the present Rector of Wadhurst, who repeatedly shot over her in my company, that no better single-handed Setter was ever seen. She had merry tail action without being overdone; which, indeed, her great pace forbade; and I was anxious to breed from her, for which purpose I put her for three successive years to the late Mr. John Clinton's Bacchus, of great renown in Worcestershire, nineteen puppies altogether being reared. Of these about half had the "tail action" of the mother, while the remainder were without it, and in every case, without a single exception, the "trailers" had no nose whatever, or a very bad one, while the "lively" ones possessed excellent scenting powers and were, indeed, nearly all first class dogs. This drew my attention to the two kinds of flag carriage, and since then I have almost always seen the quiet trail accompanied by a nose of equal dullness.

In the Pointer I have not found the same remark apply, having both seen and myself possessed dogs of that breed with good noses unaccompanied by "tail action" in a proportion fully equal to one-half, if not more, and I have consequently abandoned all idea of connecting the one with the other in the Pointer. In the Setter, however, I have still thought, from careful observation, that my original fancy held good, and when I saw Sir R. Garth's Grouse and May, produced at Stafford as pure Laveracks, on trial for the first time in public the absence of all "tail action" and their low carriage of the head prejudiced me against the breed, which their subsequent bad performance confirmed. Even the brilliant pace and style of Countess and Nellie did not entirely dissipate this original bias; for, although I am not induced to believe that this strain is, on the average, possessed of absolutely bad noses, yet I should not say that they come up to the level of the best old English strains, or to the Gordons or Irish. Indeed, I consider this their weak point. Countess, Nellie and Daisy could find game well enough with a good scent, but they were comparatively useless with a bad one. In addition to Ranger, whose nose is undeniably good, Dash II., a three-quarter Laverack, who has recently won all before him at Horseheath, may be adduced as a notable exception to the above conclusion; but beyond these I cannot recollect any Setter that has appeared in public without tail action possessed of an unexceptionably good nose. Hence, rightly or wrongly, I have still regarded these two features as of considerable importance; and, knowing them to be strongly developed in the Spaniel, I conclude that they are transmitted to his descendant, the Setter, and, as such, that they are to be regarded as his natural attributes."

The Boston Terrier Roundsman.

Mr. Graham E. Babcock writes us he has purchased Roundsman, a corking good Boston Terrier, from Dr. G. W. Kendall, of Boston. Roundsman is a smart looker and must be a pretty good one; he won the Lawson special prize of $100 at Boston this year, for the best, never having won a prize, he was also second novice, being beaten by Crackman, his sire and a great ringside favorite in Boston. He is a litter brother to Champion Remlik Bonnie who annexed the Lawson prize, 1901, and first limit this year. Roundsman's dam is Spider. This Crackman-Spider litter seems to have turned out well. Roundsman was bred by Mr. F. H. Topham, his win was over a class of more than eighty entries, he was due to arrive at San Diego about the 10th inst. Needless to remark he is a bit undershot.

Mr. Babcock, it is to be regretted, had the very bad luck to lose his good bitch, Meg, last week. She died while whelping. Meg, we are sorry to say, has had a bad run of luck ever since her advent here at the May show, 1901, she was one of the best bitches out here, but was against adverse conditions repeatedly.

Pacific Coast Field Trials.

Bakersfield has been selected as the rallying point for the members of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club. Near that city the twentieth annual trials of the club will be run, commencing on Monday, January 12, 1903. The committee appointed to select the grounds were Messrs. Terry, Van Arsdale and Keller. The judge will be chosen by the club's President and Secretary.

Derby entries will close July 1st, entrance $20, forfeit of $5 to accompany entry, second forfeit $5 payable November 1st, $10 additional for starters. The purse will be divided into 50, 30 and 20% of the stake.

Entry blanks and further information can be had by addressing Mr. Albert Betz, Secretary, Room 201, Parrott Building, this city.

Gabilan Kennels' English Setters.

A bit of good news for English Setter fanciers and sportsmen generally was imparted to us this week by Mrs. Thos. Murphy, owner of Gabilan Kennels, Hollister. She has just purchased from Mr. W. J. Baughn, of Ridgeville, Ind., a good one, in the bitch Fairland Pet (Count Rodfield-Nell's Beauty). Pet is a full sister to Cincinnatus Pride and a litter sister of the field trial winner Fly Rod, and is also the dam of Count Grey-stone, first at the Riley trials this year. Pet was served by Petrel's Count (Ch. Count Gladstone IV.—Rod's Petrel), May 2d and 4th. Petrel's Count made a sensational win in the International trials last fall, running second when he was a very sick dog. He also won second in the Michigan All-Age.

Gabilan Lady (Luke C.—Nancy Hanks), a full sister of Buckwa, was served by Count Danstone, May 15th and 19th. Both bitches are now in transit from Indiana to the kennels at Hollister.

Mrs. Murphy can be congratulated on the prospect of being the future owner of, all things going well, two litters of Setters as well bred, typical and promising field dogs as possessed by any breeder on the Coast.

Danstone's Pride (Count Danstone-Fairland Queen) is the sire of a number of promising Setter youngsters. Since arriving at Hollister last year he has been thoroughly broken on quails and has proven to be a high class working field dog.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Ellesgy Kennels' bitch Lady Bethel is heavy in whelp to Ch. Ivel Rustic.

King Commando is at present in stud at the Hebden Kennels, Wakefield, Mass.

Woodlawn Kennels' Boston Terrier The Lady is in whelp to Endcliffe Premier.

W. C. Adam of Victoria, B. C., this week shipped a Fox Terrier bitch to Woodlawn Kennels to be served by Dictator.

Dottie, the Fox Terrier bitch recently bought by Mr. Arthur Merritt of Victoria, B. C., was in whelp to Ch. Niola Daddy.

Of the litter of eight puppies (7 dogs) by Ch. Woodcote Wonder out of Newmarket Queen, there remains but one puppy left at Woodlawn Kennels.

John A. Murphy, of Fresno, has purchased a Fox Terrier from an English breeder. Mr. Hignett looked after the commission. The dog will be sent to Woodlawn Kennels, this city.

The announcement that Ch. Woodcote Wonder would be sent East, it now appears, was somewhat premature. While we believe this move was contemplated, the program has for the time being been changed. The good old dog is with J. C. Bone at present and is still in the stud in this city.

A visit to Woodlawn Kennels this week shows a marked improvement in many respects. The main portion of the kennels comprises a row of substantial and commodious box stalls, which were well patronized by local sportsmen in the old days when the Conservatory was a popular road-house. This long stable has been thoroughly renovated. The wide doorways are now securely covered with heavy wire netting—thus insuring a plenty of sunlight and ventilation, the doors being built in two sections make it very handy, either the upper or lower half, or both, can be closed or kept open as occasion demands. At the back of the stalls, small doors have been placed, these open upon a large and entirely secluded exercising lot in the rear. This plot has been leveled off, a double cinder track put in and the fences built high and strong. The arrangements for housing and exercising the dogs are first class. The yard has been piped, running fresh water being handy at all times. The facilities for using the hose have not been overlooked either. A new coat of whitewash throughout enhances the clean appearance of the remodeled kennels. In the main building, a neat office and reception room will be fitted up. In an adjoining apartment sick dogs will find a comfortable hospital. The kitchen and a well appointed bath room finish the complement of an up to date kennel.

J. G. Morgan writes from Seattle that his Fox Terrier bitch Lady Mask (Eclipse Tartar-Eclipse Blanche) whelped recently six puppies (3 dogs) to Ch. Niola Daddy. Two of the puppies are apparently very promising youngsters. One of the litter is all white, like his sire.

The wire bitch Morenga (Limesfield Roderick-Warren Corrine) is in whelp to Niola Daddy.

Daddy has served a number of Northern bitches since he left here. This will be quite an impetus to the sprightly breed up North.

AT THE TRAPS.

The Union Gun Club regular monthly blue rock shoot is the only scheduled trap shooting event for to-morrow.

In our report of the California Wing Club shoot last week, among the list of winners who divided the club purse the names of Phil B. Bekeart and C. C. Nauman were inadvertently omitted.

The eighteenth annual tournament of the Northwest Association will take place at Portland, Or., on June 28th, 27th and 26th. The shoot will be under the auspices of the Multnomah Rod and Gun Club.

A gun club has been organized at Fortuna, Humboldt county. J. W. Dixon is President and Chas. Legg, Captain. The club has a promising start, a fair list of members enrolled and a shooting ground fitted up with a set of blue rock traps. The members will hold regular shoots throughout the season.

The Chico Gun Club held a blue rock practice shoot on the 1st inst. Out of 100 blue rocks Barham broke 90, Richards 89, Miller 83, Johnson 88, Loshbough 80, and White 60.

Thomasson broke 49 out of 60; Brooks 71 out of 90; Simpson 15 out of 20; Hiram Brooks 13 out of 20; Hardy Thomasson 8 out of 15; Harry Nichols 18 out of 30; and E. B. Collins who tried trap shooting for the first time caught 18 out of 70.

In the club medal shoot at 20 birds, Miller made 17, Richards 15, Loshbough 17, Thomasson 17, Johnson 18, and Barham 18.

Johnson and Barham selected rival teams of five men each and Johnson's team won by two points—84 to 82.

The first annual Grand Western Handicap blue rock shooting tournament, which began in Denver on Thursday, has attracted to that city between fifty and sixty crack shots, the greater number coming from the intermountain sections. Among those who will participate in the handicap shoot is H. C. Herschy of Minneapolis, winner of the Grand American Handicap recently at Kansas City. The tournament is held under the auspices of the Denver Trap Club and prizes aggregating close to $10,000 will be distributed.

The tournament will wind up to-morrow. Each day there will be eight 25-target events, with from $10 to $20 added to the purse in each event, and in addition to these there will be the Denver Trap Club Handicap the first day, 100 targets per man, $5 entrance, $50 added; the Colorado Handicap the second day, 100 targets, $5 entrance, $75 added, and the Grand Western Handicap the third day, 100 targets, $10 entrance, $200 added. The winner of this latter event, in addition to first money, will receive a sterling silver championship trophy, costing $50. The handicap events are open to all, but manufacturers' agents and paid representatives will be barred from shooting in the other events except for price of targets. Interstate Association rules will govern in the absence of other special provisions. Black powder and guns larger than a 12-gauge barred. The purses will be divided on the Rose system in handicap events and on the Bennett-Rose system in the other events, the number of entries determining the ratio. The management reserves the right to reject any entry without giving any reason therefor, and to disqualify, in whole or in part, any contestant who acts ungentlemanly or disorderly, or who handles his gun dangerously.

The Coast Agency of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company and the Remington Arms Company is now removed to the heart of the new San Francisco wholesale, manufacturing and industrial district—a locality which a decade ago was the rusty edge of the iron industry and occupied by serrated rows of tumble down buildings. The newly preempted business district is a growth of natural conditions and business demand which will be lasting. In this enlarged business community have been erected a number of the most substantial, modern and handsome business structures, many stories in height, to be found in the United States. Among these recent landmarks of prosperity and enforced breathing room for the expanding volume of commerce is located at 86 and 88 Front street, a recently constructed four story building, modestly classic in style, the ornamentation being simple and just subdued enough to make the olive green and gold signs prominent and attractively striking. Whilst the exterior is pleasing to the eye, the interior is, from cellar to roof, an emporium of goods that are used all over the world—U. M. C. fixed ammunition, Remington guns and the necessary adjuncts that, in detail, go to make up the varied stock of goods necessary to carry on the largest manufacturing and exporting business of its kind conducted in the United States—a corporation which makes and sells its output on a scale of magnitude that embraces customers from national governments down to single individuals.

The interior arrangements, beginning with the manager's office, at the main entrance door, and throughout the new building are modern, commodious and comfortable. Mr. E. E. Drake, the managing representative of the above named firms, is a gentleman esteemed by his business associates and deservedly popular with sportsmen. Mr. Drake, by the way, is a prominent Mason and has a host of friends outside of his many business connections.

The Golden Gate Gun Club shoot last Sunday was but fairly attended by the club members. In the club race at 25 targets Fred Feudner was high gun with 22 breaks and won first money of the club purse. Five shooters with 21 breaks each, C. A. Haight, E. L. Forster, C. C. Nauman, Jos. J. Sweeney and W. E. Murdock divided the balance of the purse, four moneys. In a 15 bird race, expert rules, one man up, J. J. Sweeney won first money, C. C. Nauman taking second. The favorite "couple" shoot was participated in by sixteen pairs of contestants. When the race narrowed down to the final round Ed Donohoe was the winner and Fred Feudner runner up. The prize for the winner was two ping pong sets. In this race W. J. Golcher broke 25 straight winning a gold bar, J. J. Sweeney ran 24 without a break, but lost the last, he won a silver bar. The winners in a pool race at 25 birds were Haight, Forster, Sweeney (who also won silver bars in this race), Eugene Forster and Neff. Silver bars were also won by Ed Donohoe, Fred Feudner, C. C. Nauman, J. Gordon and E. Klevesahl. Besides the regular events enough practice shooting was indulged to use up over 3000 targets, one member alone shot at over 500 tar discs. A summary of scores in the principal events follows:

The Capital City Blue Rock Club shoot at Sacramento last Sunday was well attended as usual. Upson and Gusto with 24 each were high guns in the club race. McWilliams and Gusto each won a gold bar. Some interesting team shoots were shot during the day. Captain Gaily Graham's "pick up" team prevailed over some of the crack shooters they competed against. Sacramento has recently been having quite a boom in trap shooting. The club will shoot again on the 22d inst. The summary of Sunday's scores is the following:

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Mutton quality has been developed in certain breeds of sheep from the amount of exercise they have had to take. The old black-faced sheep in the mountains of Scotland have to hustle all the year round like the Scotchman and this means plenty of exercise. The old Spanish merino on our western plains also had to hustle. It secured a part of its feed during a portion of the year in the mountains and the remainder of the time it grazed on the plains. This traveling back and forth had a tendency to develop lean meat. It is this characteristic that makes the Mexican lambs so popular with feeders and the same trait is more or less marked in the Shropshire breed, which has proven such a valuable cross on the western merino.

A dairyman may start with nothing but grade cows of only fair order and by simply purchasing dairy sires of excellent quality can have a fine grade herd in a few years. The heifer calves from the best cows should by all means be raised. The method that is still largely practiced in some portions of the dairy sections of our State—of disposing of all the calves regardless of how good the individual or its parentage—is in the end very ruinous to the dairy interests. The ranges are producing plenty of beef cattle, horses and sheep, but there is no one as yet in the business of breeding good milking cows of high quality and the supply must be furnished by the dairymen themselves.

The practice of keeping cows yarded all night is a wasteful one, as all they have gathered during the day is assimilated before morning. This is the reason why they break out of the corral in the night and destroy the cabbage patch or gorge themselves in the alfalfa field. The remedy for this is a night pasture near the corral into which the cows may be turned immediately after milking and quickly be brought up to milk in the morning. They will probably eat one-third as much as through the day and will be cool and clean at milking time, while the yield of milk will be increased.

C. C. Bigler & Sons of Hartwick, Iowa, have purchased C. B. Dustin's entire herd of famous Shorthorns, numbering thirty-eight head besides seven small calves, the total purchase price being $30,000. The great bull Merry Hampton went at $15,000. All but four of the herd are of pure Scotch breeding. Following so closely upon the recent purchase by Colonel G. M. Casey of Choice Goods, Ruberta and others at $25,000, this deal involving so much money would surely lead one to believe that the breed is still doing business at the old stand.

MONTEREY 31706 RECORD 2:09½

PEDIGREE IN PART.

Sired by SIDNEY 2:19½, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05½ (champion record), and 98 in the charmed circle. Hattie dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4:30, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18½. Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21½, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals, two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:16, first quarter in 0:40½, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."

WALTER S. MABEN.

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902.

He is not only a great racehorse, getting his record, 2:10, in a fourth heat, but he is a grand individual of rare finish, gentle disposition, best of legs and feet and his get are all of good size, good looks and extreme speed. He is a bay horse 15½ hands, weighs 1050 pounds and is standard by breeding, performance and produce.

JOTTINGS.

HI HOGOBOOM is quite a talker. Those who are acquainted with him will verify this statement. There is a story to the effect that once upon a time, when the king maker, Monroe Salisbury, happened to be thrown into his company for a day, he drew a long breath when the sun went down and remarked: "If I could mate that fellow with one of those women's rights orators, I would get the two-minute talker." While Hi is rather voluble, he mixes a great many facts with his words, and has more original ideas than most men. There is another peculiar feature in his character. He would rather win a race than eat a good dinner, and no man can truthfully say that Hi Hogoboom ever pulled a heat to win a dollar or any other sum. If so, he can win all the money that Hi can scrape up. I met him last Sunday at a station where we were both waiting for delayed trains, and during the half hour he said a lot of things. One of his ideas is that selling races can be arranged and made as much of a success on trotting tracks as on the courses where gallopers hold sway. Here is the way he would advertise such a race had he the authority:

"Trotting—2:30 class. Purse $600. Entrance five per cent. Winner to be sold for $300. If sold for more, all over this amount to go to the association."

This is how he argued the case: "There are a very large number of horses put in training every year that never keep the promise of their first trial. They are entered in stakes, but when the day of the race arrives they cannot trot fast enough to keep inside the distance flag. There are many more that are broke and worked because they are well bred, that develop 2:25 or 2:30 speed, but never improve on that gait. They have no business in the regular events, and paying entrance on them is folly, as they will be outclassed in every advertised race. They are slow trotters, it is true, but their owners would like to race them against horses that were of the same rank and the races resulting would be worth seeing. Now, this selling race plan would bring the ordinary horses together in my opinion. No owner would enter a horse in a 2:30 selling race that could trot in 2:20 or better. It would be too risky. The man who owned a ready-sale $500 horse would not enter for the same reason, but there would be many who would enter and try their best to win to make a sale. Fifty per cent of the purse would be $300, and $300 added to this would make $600, a sum at which many an owner would willingly part with his horse, while the $300 selling price would be cheerfully paid by someone who wanted the animal. If a clause were added to the conditions, making every horse in the race liable to be claimed at $300 plus the amount of money won by the horse in the race, it would be a popular feature."

I have thought this plan over and have come to the conclusion that it is a good one, and had I the management of a track I would arrange "The Hogoboom" for 2:30 trotters on these lines. I believe it would attract a big list of entries and give owners a chance to win good money and make sales in classes that their horses would not be deuce high in under ordinary conditions.

Word comes from Indianapolis that Orrin Hickok is very ill and confined to his bed. The horses he took East, Clipper 2:06 and Thornway, have been turned over to Ed Benyon, trainer for Walnut Hall Farm, who is working them at the Indianapolis track. Thornway was given five heats one day last week, the fastest being 2:16. He paced them all handily and gives every promise of being good this year. Clipper was given five heats the same day, the last two being in 2:15 flat without hoppers, and the Diablo gelding going easy and acting like a gentleman all the time. It will be a pity if Mr. Hickok should be compelled on account of his health to give up training. He has not been in the best of luck in the last year or so, and it is to be hoped that he can at least direct, if he cannot participate actively, in the training of these two great pacers this year. He has too many years on his shoulders to be an active driver, but he had expected to direct the training and conditioning of Col. Kirkpatrick's pacers, and we Californians who claim Mr. Hickok as one of us, have already made up our minds that Clipper and Thornway under the guidance of his master mind, will be returned heavy winners of money and the possessors of very low records by the end of the season. It is nearly a quarter of a century since Mr. Hickok drove St. Julian to the world's record of 2:12½ at the Oakland track, while General Grant held the watch. He was considered an old man then, but having an iron constitution and being a man of good habits he has more than held his own ever since, and it has only been for the past few months that Time's hand has seemed to lie at all heavily upon him. I hope his indisposition may be brief and that he may be able to see his charges finish in front in many races during the year. He will never give up until compelled to, that is certain. He is one of the 'old guard' and the old guard may die, but it never surrenders.

Sandy Smith reached home last Sunday from Cleveland with five two year olds belonging to Palo Alto Stock Farm and a couple of Kentucky saddle horses that Mr. A. B. Spreckels purchased while at Cleveland. The two year olds were originally consigned to the Blue Ribbon sale but contracted distemper and had to be withdrawn. There were two more that were left in Ohio because they were too sick to ship back. Sandy made his advent into San Francisco after unloading his horses, with one of the newest and broadest-brimmed Panamas to be found, and a suit of clothes and a pair of "yaller" shoes that would make a hot sport turn green with envy. He tells me he is going to withdraw from the Grand Circuit this year and retire to the quiet of Mr. Spreckels' Aptos Stock Farm, where he will take up a dozen head of Dexter Princes and Cupids and get them ready to sell to those wanting high class road horses. Mayor Clark of Sacramento has already given him an order for a team, and Sandy is certain he can fill it after a few weeks' work at Aptos. Mr. Spreckels reached home from his Eastern trip this week and tells me that Sandy was the most popular man in Cleveland during the sale. Of the twenty three head of horses shipped to Cleveland in his care not one was sick or even scratched on the trip, and when Sandy showed them in the ring and on the track prior to the sale he received compliments from everybody in regard to their manners and looks. In all their brushes on the track and in the ring not one lifted its head, but stuck strictly to business. Sandy will be missed from the Grand Circuit, and it is not likely that there will be another plunger like him to hold up the reputation of the rubbers for buying big tickets. When he bought a Borlma ticket for $1000 at Lexington, Sandy got the record which he still holds. Mr. Spreckels will probably have him get a couple of carloads ready for the Cleveland Blue Ribbon sale next year.

The summer racing season will soon begin in California and secretaries are already using up considerable gray matter trying to think up some scheme by which big gate receipts can be assured. There has been a great deal written in Eastern harness horse journals about copying some of the customs of the running tracks, which seem to be popular everywhere. There is one peculiarity of the leading jockey clubs of America which, in my opinion, aids very materially in making those tracks popular with the people. It is not the "tout" pernicious, but the tout ensemble that makes the running track such a pleasant place to visit. There are handsome and clean grand stands, green lawns, fragrant flowers, commodious club houses and everything suitable and convenient for people who enjoy a day's sport with their good clothes on. The contrast is great when one visits the average country trotting track. There is little effort made to keep things clean and dust prevails. Handsome toilets cannot be worn by the ladies without danger of having them ruined, and there is absolutely nothing done to make the place attractive or convenient for those who enjoy speed contests. I would suggest to the managers of meetings on the circuit this fall that they use a sprinkling cart liberally to lay the dust, that grand stands be made neat with paint and kept clean, and that lavatories be built for the ladies and a competent woman placed in charge to keep them in order. I know that some of the "Rube" directors will consider this a waste of money and an unnecessary expense, but it will pay and pay big. The American people appreciate the luxuries of life more than any people on earth and are ready and willing to pay for them.

A. B. Rodman of Woodland has a horse that would make everybody "rubber" were he to drive him over the speedway in this city. This is Yellow Jacket 2:20½ by Silver King, and a rather poor picture of him appears on our front page to-day. Yellow Jacket, as his name denotes, is a yellow or light dun colored pacer, with flaxen mane and a white strip in his face. He is just about as attractive as they make them, and can pace faster than his mark with hoppers, and road in 2:30 or better without the straps. In fact, he is a steady horse on the road, not afraid of anything, and with a splendid disposition. How Rodman remains a bachelor while owning such a handsome horse is one of those riddles that is hard to solve. I think he must be one of the confirmed sort that wears a piece of armor plate over his heart every time he takes a young lady out for a ride. I have had an idea that Yellow Jacket would make a race horse able to win in his class were he put to work regularly. He took his record at Napa over a very slow track two years ago in the fifth heat of a race. He wore the straps then but Rodman has used him as a driving horse since and has abolished the straps. He drove him a quarter in 37 seconds to a buggy one day recently. Rodman should induce the District Fair folks to offer a prize for the handsomest horse and rig. He would capture it with Yellow Jacket, or the one that beat him would be good enough for Dreamworld.

Breeders who are shy a few broodmares will miss a great opportunity if they fail to attend the sale of the Hon. Jesse D. Carr's Gabilan Stock Farm horses next Thursday, June 26th, at 1732 Market street. I want to call their attention to the fact that one of the very best strains of thoroughbred blood ever introduced into the trotting families was that of Williamson's Belmont, and many of Mr. Carr's mares trace to this horse. The Belmont blood means size, symmetry, and endurance of the highest order. It is this blood that has helped greatly to make Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½ such a sire of handsome and fast horses. I do not hold that this Belmont blood will make a horse trot, (although Venture, a thoroughbred son of his was a good trotter and took a record of 2:27½ nearly thirty years ago), but it will help a horse to carry his speed a full mile and repeat it. It would be a very risky experiment to begin introducing thoroughbred crosses now into modern pedigrees, but breeders should hold fast to those thoroughbred strains that they know to be good, and that of Williamson's Belmont is the best we ever had in California as is proven by the records. Mares in whose pedigrees are found such names as Ida May, Jr., by Owen Dale and Ida by Belmont are worth buying.

Waldo J. Shut Them All Out.

The gray ghost of Santa Paula, Waldo J., won the free-for-all pace at Honolulu on June 11th in hollow fashion and again demonstrated the fact that he is by far the best horse ever sent to the Hawaiian Islands, and would very likely be a free-for-all candidate in this country. James Quinn who trains and drives Waldo J., sent a letter on the last boat to his friend, J. G. Chesley of this city, in which he states that in his opinion Waldo is a better horse to-day than ever in his life, and is satisfied he could have driven him a mile in 2:05. He says he has repeatedly stepped him quarters in 30 seconds and a week before the race he paced one in 28 seconds. In the last heat of the race he won last week he came the last half in 59 seconds and put the other two, Wayboy and Edna G., behind the flag.

Some enterprising California association would get a great attraction could it induce Mr. Quinn to bring his horse over from the Islands and start here against such horses as Kelly Briggs 2:10, El Diablo 2:12½, Topsy 2:12½, and a few others that are in the first flights. Perhaps Miss Logan 2:06 and Joe Wheeler 2:07½ could be added to the race, and if so a record breaking crowd would be present.

Bright Prospects at San Jose.

A dispatch from San Jose dated June 18th says: The annual fair of Agricultural District No. 5, which will be held at Agricultural Park, near this city, July 3d, 4th and 5th, promises to be the most successful one ever held under the auspices of the association. Stock raisers, packers, farmers and fruit organizations are all manifesting an unusual interest in the event. Already three-fourths of the available space in the rose carnival pavilion has been taken by exhibitors. Entries of stock have been restricted by the directors to those living in Santa Clara and San Mateo counties, and this has had the effect of stimulating local stock raisers.

Grand sweepstakes will be awarded as follows: Best standard-bred stallion, $100; second best, $50; best mare, $100; second best, $50. Liberal premiums are also to be offered for milk and beef cattle, Angora goats, a large variety of manufactured articles, and for every imaginable kind of farm production.

From the entries for the race meet already received the best meet on the circuit is assured. The total number of entries will be very large, this being the first meet of the season.

Big Prices for Haggin Yearlings.

The Fasig-Tipton Company made a big success of the sale of yearlings from J. B. Haggin's Rancho del Paso and Elmendorf studs this week in New York. There were 194 yearlings in the consignment and they brought a total of $216,700, an average of a little over $1117 each.

The highest priced one of the sale was the bay colt by Watercress out of Pansa by Sir Modred. The colt is an own brother to Botany, a winner as a two year old last year and again a winner this year. This colt brought $21,000, and was purchased by Sidney Paget. Green B. Morris was a bidder, but stopped at $20,000. Mr. Paget also paid $17,000 for the brown colt by Watercress out of Pansy (the dam of Pansa) by Virgil.

Notes and News.

Entries are numerous.

The circuit is already a success.

Vallejo filled all but the fastest classes

There will be twenty-four harness races at the State Fair.

Attend the Jesse D. Carr sale at 1732 Market street next Thursday.

Good broodmares are becoming quite as scarce as first-class stallions.

Belsire 2:18 will be trained this fall. He could trot a half in 1:05 last year.

The State Fair will give eight big early closing purses—$1200 and $1000.

Ed Mills is very hopeful of getting Searchlight 2:03½ to the races again this year.

There are many who believe that Little Boy 2:01½ has speed enough to beat 1:59½ to harness.

It is said that Dan Patch 2:04½ recently worked the last eighth of a 2:20 mile in thirteen seconds.

Ed Mills worked the pacer Searchlight 2:03½, a mile over the Plainsville, Conn., track in 2:14½ last week.

The Occident and Stanford Stakes this year will probably be the richest in the history of these two valuable events.

Violin, the Button mare owned by Prince David, won a race at Honolulu, June 11th, driven by that popular Hawaiian.

Vallejo will open four additional purses of $500 each. In the 2:15 trotting and 2:12 trotting, purses $500, but six entries will be required to fill.

If Sir Albert S. 2:08½ and Clipper 2:06 get to their races in good shape over East, the horsemen there will think the Diablos are greased lightning.

Geo. M. Brown of Seattle, has leased Pathmark 2:15½ from the Van De Vanter stock farm and will assume all his present engagements for the season.

Mose Hart is working Dora Doe 2:12½ at the Alameda track. She is stepping like a winner, and in the 2:13 class should be able to make a good showing this year.

Demonio, the full brother to Diablo 2:09½, will be raced this year by Sam Hoy, who is training him for Ben Rush of Suisun. Demonio should get a mark this year.

The "white ghost outfit" is the name given to McHenry's paraphernalia this season, as he has had his sulkeys, chests and chairs painted a rich colored milk white.

Jack Groom has Easter D. 2:27½, a very promising pacing mare by Easterwood, in his string at Alameda. She is a nice mover and is showing well under Groom's tuition.

Miles better than 2:15 are getting frequent now, when the pacing division is taking its work. There should be some fast side wheel records at the meetings this year.

Oakland's program will soon be out. There will be ten purses for trotters and pacers. The meeting this year will be given by the District Agricultural Association.

All the trotters and pacers in training at the Woodland track were shipped to Sacramento last week and will be worked at Agricultural Park which is reported in fine shape.

Clipper's two miles in 2:15 last week at Indianapolis are the fastest miles for that track this year. Ed Benyon, who drove him, was much pleased with the son of Diablo.

Dennis Gannon has entered his good little mare Twilight by Noonday in the 2:19 classes on the circuit. She can put in as many heats around her record as any trotter in California.

A very interesting letter from a Sacramento correspondent reached this office just before the forms were closed, and too late for insertion this week. It will appear in our next issue.

The Carr horses will arrive at the salesyard, 1732 Market street, to-morrow. If you want something good go to the yards and look them over. The sale will be held Thursday next.

William Houser, so long with the Palo Alto Stock Farm, is now training the trotters and pacers on the Meek Estate, Haywards. He will have three or four for the circuit, among them the pacer Dan Burns by William Harold, that took a record of 2:23½ at Sacramento last fall. This horse has not been worked better than 2:20 this year, but he will be a 2:15 performer if nothing happens.

J. B. Iverson has moved his trotters and pacers from his half-mile track to the Salinas race track, where they will be given their final preparation by trainer J. H. Vance for the California Circuit.

Anaconda 2:01½ is working very agreeably at the Empire City track, and, thanks to a new bit, his trainer, John Dickerson, has control of him and is stepping him some fast last quarters.

This is the year Direct Hal, the $10,000 green pacer, is to race. He has been carried around and educated for the past two years and ought to know how by this time. He is heavily engaged in pacing stakes.

The Denver meeting opens this afternoon. Reports of the Trinidad and Colorado meeting have not reached us, but we understand Charley Mac 2:11½ won at both places and is considered to be good enough for the 2:10 class over East.

John Lance of Spokane, has bought the fast green pacer Sam Bowers from A. Douglass of Ellensburg. This fellow was a close second to Diodine last fall in 2:11½, over the North Yakima track, and he may make some of them step some to beat him this year.

Foxy Quiller, full brother to Cresceus, which R. A. Brown has in training at the Overland, is doing well as a pacer. The big fellow started out as a trotter, but in the spring showed a disposition to pace, so his gait was changed and he is going easy miles in 2:40.

Not with the idea of touting him, but because it is a fact, Sphinx S. 2:08½, looks like the real thing for the 2:09 classes. He seems bigger and stronger than we have ever seen him before, and the way he can step sets the railbirds to chirping for sure—Trotter and Pacer.

Barney Simpson is now located at the Alameda track with two handsome, large black mares by Chas. Derby, one out of a mare by Administrator, the other out of a mare by Balkan 2:15. One is a trotter, the other a pacer, and both are smooth gaited and very promising.

George H. Ketcham of Toledo now has in his stable the good young trotting stallion Pegasus by Wilton out of the dam of the fast mare Wynema, and, we hear, expects great things of him. Pegasus made a few starts last season and showed high racing form and quality.

Mr. Lawson informs us that the date of the Boralma-Lord Derby match has been fixed for Saturday, August 2d, and the race will be trotted over Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Ct. The Boralma-The Abbot race will be trotted over the same course Saturday, August 30th.

Queen Wilkes is still mistress of the New York Speedway. The report that a nomination would be purchased for her in the M. & M. is not true. Mr. Smathers, her owner, has said that he would keep her over and more than likely name her in this same event in 1903.

Now that Chehalis 2:04½ is owned in Vermont, the people of that state are figuring on some pretty sharp free-for-all this year. Will Utton intends to start him at Barre, Vt., July 4, against The Maid 2:05½, who will be driven by the veteran trainer, "Uncle Jock" Bowen.

Geo. A. Kelly has returned from his Washington trip and brought home with him to Pleasanton eight head of well bred horses that he will shape up to sell and will have two or three to get ready to race next season. He offers several handsome road horses for sale in our advertising columns to day.

W. F. Freeman has in his stable at the Kentucky Breeders' track a two year old that he thinks very highly of. The youngster is called Cresceus Bird, and is by the champion trotter out of Blessing, a full sister to Larabie the Great 2:12½. Cresceus Bird trotted quarters at a 2:20 clip as a yearling.

It is stated, on apparently good authority, that Mrs. John Gerken's celebrated show ring winner, Newsboy, who defeated Lord Brilliant on two occasions at the Philadelphia Horse Show recently, is a trotting bred horse. Less than twelve months ago he was a long tailed road horse known as Marengo King.

Will Welch left for the East this week with the two fast green horses, Dr. Hammond and Uncle John, both by Chas. Derby. Both worked miles better than 2:12 at San Jose last week. He will get back to Salem, Oregon, in time to start for the $2000 stake at the State Fair there and reach California in time for the Breeders meeting.

John Green, well known on the Coast as the trainer and driver of Bishop Hero 2:21 and Challenger Chief 2:15, arrived last Wednesday from Vancouver with the gray McKinney mare, Arketa 2:22½, that is entered at the Vallejo and Napa meetings. He shipped her to Vallejo Thursday afternoon and will start her there first in the 2:19 class trot.

Already more than 100 amateur owners of trotters and pacers have become members of the New York Matinee Club, with headquarters at the Empire City track. Racing will begin June 14th, in all probability, and be continued on favorable Saturdays all season. There will be one challenge cup offered by the association and championship cups open to both trotters and pacers. The members only will contest for these valuable prizes, yet races to be opened to non members are in contemplation.

At San Jose's fair during the first week in next month, $100 will be given as premium for the best standard bred stallion and $50 for the second best. The best standard bred mare will also be awarded $100 and the second best $50. Entries to these classes will be confined to the district which comprises the counties of Santa Clara and San Mateo.

A recent letter from A. G. F. Stice, proprietor of the Rose Hill Stock Farm at Brookfield, Mo., reports the following foals: "Nellie M. 2:10½ has a chestnut filly by Heir-at-Law 2:05½, Flora Little 2:23 has a brown colt by Sir Charles 2:10½, Wayside 2:21 has a bay filly by Sir Charles 2:10½." He adds, "My horses are all doing well and things are in a very prosperous condition at Rose Hill Farm."

E. J. Tranter, of Buffalo, Frank P. Kenney and William Kenney, of Lexington, Ky., have organized a new sales firm, and the corporation will be known as the Tranter-Kenney Company. The initial sale will be held in October, during the Lexington trotting meeting. Sales will be held at Indianapolis and Buffalo, and probably other places. George A. Bain and John W. Bain will serve as auctioneers.

Czarina 2:13½ and Venus II. 2:11½, the two mares sent over to Toledo by Mr. A. B. Spreckels to be bred to Cresceus 2:02½, have not been sent home yet. Sandy Smith was to bring them back when he came, but Mr. Ketcham was not certain they were with foal and persuaded Mr. Spreckels to leave them there until he was certain. Sandy reports the champion trotter in great shape and everything on the Ketcham farm in fine condition.

Geo. W. Berry, Superintendent of Mr. A. B. Spreckels' Napa Stock Farm, came down to the city this week for a flying visit. The new stud barn recently built at the farm is one of the finest in California. It contains eight box stalls finished in the very best manner and cost close to $14,000. A sale of yearlings from this farm will be held in this city during the winter. They are a grand looking lot of youngsters.

William Morgan, of Pasadena, Cal., has paid up on three colts entered in the Breeders Futurity for mares bred in 1901. Grace McK. and Nora K., both by McKinney 2:11½, have colts by Neernut 2:12½, that have been named Kaiser and Una Boy respectively. Nellie K. by Gen. Grant Jr. has a colt by Newton Direct. Mr. Morgan is much pleased with the appearance of these youngsters and says they are good to look at, being fine, sound and with perfect anatomy.

Colusa's meeting will open August 11th, the same date as the Vallejo meeting. The purses at Colusa are very liberal, the 2:40 class trot getting $500, and the others smaller amounts, several purses being $400. Special inducements are offered horses owned in the district, an excellent thing in the smaller districts as it encourages breeding and training at home. Read the advertisement of Colusa's meeting in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to-day. Entries close July 15th for the harness events and August 1st for the runners. James W. Scoggins is Secretary. Write for entry blanks.

The fair grounds and race track property at Santa Ana having passed again into the hands of Mr. Geo. Ford, the well known walnut grower and horse owner of that place, it is now Mr. Ford's intention to keep it as a race track, and it will pay him well while he owns race horses to keep it in shape for his own use if for no other purpose. The soil on which this track is built is soft and springy and can be kept in condition easier than any track in that section of the State. Mr. Ford has a number of young horses by his great stallion Neernut, and horsemen there say they are as promising and speedy as any family of youngsters in California.

M. E. McHenry, in whose stable is Dan Patch 2:04½ and Prince Direct 2:14½, has just bought for M. E. Sturges the green trotter Darwin by Connoisseur, son of Electioneer, dam Carrie 2:29½, dam of Manager 2:06½ by George Wilkes. Darwin has been in the stable of Ras Eckers and recently when McHenry was working Dan Patch out Eckers went along with him with Darwin, and a last quarter in 31½ seconds found the green trotter on even terms with the great pacer. After that performance McHenry was not long in getting a price on Darwin, and the horse was bought for Mr. Sturges for $3000. The horse is now in McHenry's stable, and will be raced by that trainer. He started a few times last season, and in one of his races was timed in 2:14, so he ought to be good in his class this year.

Senator Horace White, of Syracuse, who admires a good road horse, has made a very flattering offer to A. H. Miller, of Buffalo, for the mare Julia M. by Zombro, but Mr. Miller is so pleased with his recent purchase that he will not part with Julia. At the Cleveland sale last month Mr. Miller's commissioner purchased Julia M. for $2600, which was the top price for the day Julia M. passed under the hammer. Mr. Miller had instructed his agent to bid as high as $5500 for the mare, but it was not necessary. Julia M. contracted a slight cold on the trip eastward from California, and several horsemen evidently thought that she was seriously affected and accordingly they kept out of the sale. Julia has improved, however, and to-day she is as sound as a silver dollar. Mr. Miller sent Julia to W. L. Snow's stable, and she has been stepping miles along in 2:15 on the Syracuse track. Senator White and Jack Feek, the old-timer, have each made offers, but Mr. Miller considers the mare good enough to campaign down the line. She stepped a mile in 2:13½ in California two months ago.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Gabilan Stock Farm Sale.

By Monday morning next, the horses from Hon. Jesse D. Carr's well known Gabilan Stock Farm at Salinas will be at the Killip & Co. salesyard, 1732 Market street in this city, now conducted by the successors to the old firm, Fred H. Chase & Co. There will be fifty-one head in this consignment, and they are the best lot of horses that have been offered in San Francisco at auction for some time. All are in good condition, and many are fast enough to train for the races. There are a number of broodmares to be sold, that are young and sound, regular breeders and with foals at their side. They are sired by such horses as Antevolo, Hambletonian Wilkes, Eugeneer, Mambrino Jr., Gabilan 19,733 and Alpheus 8847. Two or three are by that good grandson of Nutwood, Bay Rum 2:16½, and some are by Boodle 2:12½. The young geldings and fillies are three, four and five years old and by Ecce 15,993, a grandson of Electioneer, Boodle Jr., and Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½. A two year old filly is by the last named horse, out of Flossie a producing mare by Carr's Mambrino, second dam the old Gray Eagle mare formerly owned by Mr. Carr, and whose descendants all trot fast. Fillies by Nutwood Wilkes will be worth a lot of money before long. This great horse is comparatively young yet, and very few of his daughters are old enough to have produce that are of an age to train, but there were quite a number of young mares by him bred last year and the year before, and the owners of the colts are very enthusiastic over them.

Mr. Carr's horse Boodle Jr., 34,834, is well represented in the sale by a number of good looking colts and fillies and quite a number of the broodmares are in foal to him. He is a grand looking young horse and Mr. Carr will have him at the yards on the day of the sale that the public may look him over. He is royally bred being by the great race horse Boodle 2:12½ out of Nina B. by Electioneer, second dam Gabilan Maid by Carr's Mambrino, and third dam the thoroughbred mare Ida May Jr., by Owen Dale.

Another stallion whose get is well represented is Ecce 15,993. This horse never had any but the most limited opportunities. His sire, Eclectic, is a full brother to Arion 2:07½, whose two year old record of 2:10½ never has and probably never will be equaled. The dam of Ecce is by Clovis, the sire of Athavis 2:18½; and Gentry Love 2:20½. Clovis is a son of Sultan, sire of Stamboul 2:07½, out of Sweetbriar, by Thorndale. The second dam of Ecce is Leah by Woodford Mambrino. There are few better bred horses than Ecce, and his get all promise well.

Take them altogether the horses from Gabilan Stock Farm are as well bred as any in California. Stout blood has been Mr. Carr's hobby and that is the kind that advanced breeders want. If you have not received a catalogue write to Fred H. Chase & Co., for one immediately, and don't forget the date of the sale—Thursday next, June 26th.

A Trotter of the First Flight.

"Hawley" of the Kentucky Stock Farm, in his Commentaries last week, writes as follows of a California bred filly now owned by Mr. J. C. McKinney of Titusville, Pa.

A visit to the Oakley track, Cincinnati, would convince any one that among the number of horses now in training over the beautiful course are at least four or five that will distinguish themselves later in the season. The star among the trotters is of course the bay mare Zephyr by Zombro, and from the manner in which she is taking her work it can readily be seen just where her people get their enthusiasm. This mare is a very high class trotter, or else she is a rank counterfeit, and that she can to-day trot a mile in 2:10 I have not the slightest doubt. She trots so easily, with such a frictionless gait, and pulls up so fresh that it seems impossible she can be other than a very high class mare. I know of several astute horsemen that believe she is to-day a better mare than was Eleata at this time last year, and that unless something goes amiss the daughter of Zombro will be returned a winner in the M. & M. Stake at Detroit next month. While it is impossible to accurately gauge a trotter's capacity before he has felt the brunt of a keen contest, I think one is very safe in proclaiming Zephyr as a trotter of the first flight. That she has tremendous speed has already been proved. Her manners to all appearances are perfect, and her way of going is so frictionless that she should stay and race to the end of a long-drawn out contest. This mare is being nicely prepared by her trainer. She has had very few fast miles, and none since her matinee at Memphis, and she finishes with a rush that bespeaks the best of condition and a keen relish for her work. Owners of M. & M. candidates must needs go to the races with the genuine article if they expect to defeat this mare, and if she does meet defeat, it will be, in all probability, a blow to the talent, for a mare of her capacity that has already shown herself to be a high class trotter is almost sure to be a pronounced favorite.

A Promising Yearling.

VISALIA (Cal.), June 16, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Inclosed you will find a picture of my candidate in the Breeders Stake, My Way. You will pardon me for being a little enthusiastic over her when I give you an account of her opportunities and ability.

My Way was one year old the 12th day of last February, was a natural pacer, but when I set about to break her, she never showed any inclination to pace, and acted like a persistent trotter. I jogged her awhile barefooted till I had her fairly well broken, so on the 10th of May had her shod to trot, and began to require of her to step along some. She made speed rapidly and was good gaited until she learned to trot a quarter in 50 seconds, but moving any faster she began to show signs of mixing. I added three ounce toe weights and eased up on her again to get her squared away, all to no avail. I removed her shoes and put a pair of hoppers on her, driving her less than a quarter of a mile when she broke a coupling strap, only to show me that she could pace without that disgraceful paraphernalia. About three days later, which was on the 6th day of June, I had her shod light and we began to do business once more at our newly acquired gait, and this morning, Monday, June 16th, just ten days from the time she took her first jog in pacing shoes, she worked a full quarter for me in 43 seconds, to a 60 pound, high wheeled sulky, and turned about and did another eighth in 20 seconds, and I think could have finished the quarter at the same clip had I not pulled her up.

While this is not phenomenal speed, I doubt if another yearling ever showed greater speed with the same amount of work. Her individuality, as her picture will show, is second to none. Her sire is Stoneway 2:23½ (four year old trial 2:14); first dam Ethel Basler by Robt. Basler 2:20, second dam by Pasha, third dam by A. W. Richmond, fourth dam, running bred.

JACOB BROLLAR.

[The picture accompanying this letter shows a very handsomely turned filly, with quality of high order and at the same time plenty of substance. Her work shows her to be a good one, and we hope she will fulfill all the hopes entertained for her by her proud owner.—Ed. B. & S.]

The Pierce Sale.

That horses have a value was clearly demonstrated at the Occidental Horse Exchange, last Tuesday, when William G. Layng, the well known live stock auctioneer, disposed of about forty head from the Santa Rosa and Santa Clara farms of Messrs. Henry and Ira Pierce. There were a few well broken animals among those sold, but a very large proportion were only halter broken, yet the average price paid was close to $100. The highest prices of the sale were $330 and $250, paid for two Diablos. Inferna 2:24½ brought the top figure. He is a pacing stallion and one of the best bred horses in America, but being a small horse is not considered a desirable one for stud purposes in these days, as breeders want size as well as speed and good looks. His dam is the mare Biscari (dam of four in the list) by Director, and she was out of famous old Bicari by Harold. Inferna is as handsome as a picture, and they say his colts on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm are about the largest and best looking of this year's foals. His new owner is Lieut. R. E. McNally, of the U. S. Army, who is a good judge of a horse and bought Inferna simply because he saw a good bargain at the price. The Diablo that sold for $250 was a good looking six year old trotter, that can show a 2:40 gait. Fourteen horses brought from $100 to $330, the average of the others being about $85. One or two old mares that had reached the voting age years ago, went for less than $15 each and brought down the average. Such animals should never be sent to the salesring with a lot of good horses, as the prices received do not pay for transportation and reduce the average, thus detracting from the reputation of the farm.

Considering the prices paid in the East for the class of horses disposed of at this sale, the California market is a good one for sellers at the present time. There is a lively demand for road and light express horses and if animals are in good shape, well bred and sound they will sell readily. There is a very general opinion among dealers that present prices will increase and no one expects a falling off in values for the next two or three years at least.

Still a Great Horse.

The most conspicuous horse in training at the Lexington Fair grounds is the lion-hearted hero of many seasons' racing, Charley Herr 2:07. This horse has by sheer merit forced himself to the very front rank of racing. His career has not been a bed of roses, he having had possibly as many different trainers as Joe Patchen, and it can not be truthfully said that all his training has been at the hands of a skilled master. Charley Herr's racing career began as a yearling, and from that time until to-day he has each season been asked the question and has never been found wanting, except when incapacitated, or in other words knocked out by injudicious training. I doubt very much if a gamer horse than Charley Herr ever lived. He certainly is as courageous and true a trotter as has ever been seen, sticking to the trot under any and all circumstances and trying for every inch of the journey. He occupies the unique distinction of never having been laid up a heat in his life, and out of some thirty-odd races he has been the contender in the majority of them. Charley Herr has met most of the greatest horses of his day; he has been a dangerous factor in every race in which he was in condition, and when just fit and well driven, it has taken the very life of the champion of champions to beat him. Charley Herr has suffered the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, combined with unskilful training, and yet he is as much of a hero to-day as ever, and as much of a public idol as any horse that was ever bred in Kentucky. Last year it seemed as if he had reached his end as a racing machine; he seemed hopelessly broken down, yet this year he comes to life again, is training to all appearances as well as ever, going better gaited than I ever saw him at this season of the year, and has all the speed that has made him so famous. In fact, I doubt very much if ever in his life Charley Herr had as much brush as now; he can step a quarter any day and under almost any conditions in 30 seconds, and while he seems somewhat high in flesh and is hardly up to a long race, the racing public that is interested in him can be assured that there is no danger of his being indulged from now on, as his owner has given evidence of his intention to give him all the work that is necessary to key him up to a hard race. He trots with as much courage as ever and finishes resolutely, and from his work I have not the slightest doubt that if by any chance he is in condition during the summer he will be a contender in any race in which he takes part, no matter how great the company nor how fast the time; nor would it surprise me in the least, should fortune favor him with a skilful driver, to see him winning in almost any company. His owner has announced his intention to drive Charley Herr in all his races. This wonderful horse has survived many difficulties, and has raced and won under the most stupendous handicaps. His owner is an honest little Irishman, a kind-hearted, true little man, a most excellent judge of Jerseys, and a first-class milkman, but that he is a skilful driver has yet to be demonstrated. One thing can be assured, however, and that is that in his efforts as a driver he will try to win every heat and will keep his horse going from end to end.—Hawley in Kentucky Stock Farm.

A Big Contract.

One of the largest deals on record in the furnishing of horses was made last week by a New York firm, with the managing director of Barnum & Bailey's circus, which arrives from Europe next November, bringing back nothing but their menagerie, and will fit out a brand new show, costing $1,000,000 for the season of 1903. The written contract entered into by the parties thereto, one of whom represents the largest horse selling establishment of its kind in the world and the other the "biggest show on earth," calls for the delivery of three hundred fancy draft horses in the months of November and December, 1902, and January, 1903. The animals are to be absolutely sound and from four to seven years old. In height they must be between sixteen and seventeen hands high, and they must weigh from 1600 to 2000 pounds each. The New York firm agrees to deliver smooth, shapely animals, with deep, full middles, closely ribbed, on short legs, and with good dispositions, as they must be shipped at night after doing their day's work. Three hundred and thirty-five dollars is the contract price per head for this lot of horses, the total sum involved in the deal being $100,500. Larger contracts have been made for army horses and low grade workers, but it is doubtful whether any firm of dealers ever received so heavy an order for strictly high grade horses of any type. The price can hardly be taken to represent the average market value of fancy draft horses.—American Sportsman.

John Splan is of the opinion that Biflora, by Expedition, 2:15½, is the fastest trotter he has ever trained.

About Breeding Coach Horses.

[Chicago Breeders Gazette.]

"I desire information concerning the breeding of coach horses. What is an ideal weight for the most profitable coach horse? What should a mare weigh, describing build, to mate with a coach stallion weighing 1450 pounds? Farmers in our community have a great variation of ideas in regard to proper weight and build. The results from mating with farm mares so far as I know have been very uncertain, a large per cent of the colts not being eligible for any class and with an appearance of a mixture of two or more ideas.

"This subject is comparatively new to many of us and requires a great deal of study to arrive at proper understanding. This will never be achieved unless one has made it a specialty with no other prospects for a livelihood. Fancy prices paid in our markets are on a class we are short of. These are given mostly by the fad trade with no fixed idea but superior conformation and action."

To reply at length to these questions would properly entail a threshing over of the entire coach horse matter. Within the limits of a reply such as this it is allowable only to touch the high places, as it were—to name the salient features in a business that has provoked the attention of some of the brightest minds and in which many failures have been scored.

The writer proceeds by citing a ring of mares with coach colts at foot that he once judged at a Wisconsin fair and a right good fair it was, too. In this ring were fifteen mares and only one of them was in any way fitted to be bred to a really high-class coach stallion. The others were grade draft mares and not one of them showed any degree of quality such as one might expect from the union of a high class draft stallion and a good native dam. Hairy, nondescript brutes they were, all but one and that one was a black mare, standard-bred, and well bred at that. Here is a description of her and it will serve to give a general idea of the mare of American stock that is most likely to produce, to the cover of a coach-bred stallion, a colt that in time will fill the bill made out for him:

She is 16 hands high, weight not more than 1250 pounds. Her head was not a small head by any means, but it was wide between the eyes and the countenance intelligent. The eye was prominent, the ear well placed, but not small and not too "pointy." She looked at you like an honest mare, one that would not fail you in any pinch. Her neck was long and not too thin, well risen on top, not ewe-necked by any means. Her withers came well up and her coupling well forward, balancing the mare in action. Her ribs were well sprung, her quarters ample and her "bread-basket" such as one likes to see in a broodmare of any sort. In action she went straight and true, though never polished up in this respect and when seen later in harness she took hold of the ground in good shape. She was sired by a son of Brougham, the old Iowa celebrity, out of a mare on a Morgan foundation and her hair and quality of bone could not be denied, though perhaps fault might have been found with her as not carrying quite enough "timber." It is certain, however, that her legs have outworn her body by this time. Such a mare will always do to breed to a coach stallion.

The best judges agree that between 1350 and 1450 pounds is the best weight for a coach stallion, depending on the class of mares he has to cover, providing always that his other qualifications are ample. If a stallion has a lot of consorts that do not run to 1200 in weight he ought to weigh around 1400 pounds, but it must always be remembered that a coach horse without quality is no coach horse at all and the more they weigh the harder it is to get them with the quality, and the action they must have if they are to succeed as sires of marketable horses. Perhaps taking it all around 1350 pounds is the best weight for a coach bred stallion. He must be what is in colloquial parlance termed "a perfect beauty." He must have that striking appearance which in a gelding hitched to a brougham and standing by a curb waiting for my lady will make the passers-by stop and gaze in wonder. Say what other folks may the vital point in a coach stallion's make-up is his shoulders. If these are not laid back properly he will neither go nor stand as he ought and it is usually found that straight shoulders in these horses go with long or weak backs and slovenly action. Given the proper slope to the shoulder and the neck will rise correctly out of it so that the horse may stand at ease on dress parade, with head in air, without bearing-rein. Give him short upright shoulders and his neck will stick straight out in front of him, necessitating the use of overdraws and other abominations, much training and untold suffering.

It is probable that straight shoulders are more persistently transmitted by a stallion than any other defect in conformation and yet sometimes a horse with that defect may, by training and rigging, be made to deceive very good judges. The awakening comes later on when his colts are born. Their inclination naturally is to stub their toes in the ground, not to double up and fold and send forward their front legs with that graceful motion that so much resembles the following of the circumference of a rolling wheel. Add to this the strong points demanded in any horse and the coach bred stallion so much desired is described.

The coaching horse is a mixed bred horse at the best. Unless coupled with the right sort of mares this conglomeration asserts itself in the manner described by our correspondent. Instances can be cited of excellent coachers having been begotten by thoroughbred stallions from grade draft mares. Marshall Field drove a gray gelding in Chicago for years bred this way and he was about as good looking a gelding as there was in that city at the time. For the few that have come about in this wise thousands have come to life actual deformities, with the bodies of drafters and the legs and heads of race horses or vice versa. So in breeding grade draft mares to coach stallions there are too many chances to run. Avoid it. A coacher proper must have good blood all through to give him the "gimp" he needs. He cannot do what he is wanted to do if he is one-half drafter.

Coachers must have size and action as well as beauty of conformation. The old saying that a good big horse will outsell a good little one was never more applicable than when speaking of horses of this sort. Substance must also go with the size; size without substance, that is, mere pounds weight, counts for naught in the eyes of the astute dealer who knows every crook and turn of the trade and spends his money accordingly only where he can get it back again with the largest returns.

The most profitable weight for the coach bred gelding is from 1150 to 1250 pounds, though horses do not have to weigh so much to bring long prices. As a matter of fact, however, granting that there is nothing sensational about a horse of this kind, he will sell to better advantage if he weighs around 1200 than if he weighs much more or much less. He is then of size to pull a brougham or large phaeton and if he can do even a little of the correct act with his knees and hocks he is sure to find a ready purchaser at a figure which will well repay the breeder for the prime cost of production and a handsome bonus as well.

Rubber Tire Litigation Ended.

The Grant rubber wire patent was declared void by the United States Court of Appeals, in a decision rendered at Cincinnati, May 6th. This decision grows out of a litigation that has been carried on for the past five years and which involved the validity of the Grant patent.

In December, 1898, the suit of the owners of the Grant patent against the American Rubber Tire Company was decided in favor of the patent holders by Judge Thomas, of the United States Circuit Court of Brooklyn, N. Y., which held the patent valid.

In 1899 the Goodyear people came into the field working on a tire, the patent for which they held. It was called the Wing patent tire, and the Consolidated people immediately instituted suit against the Goodyear people, claiming it was an infringement. A long legal battle followed, the case was heard in March, 1901, and decided in favor of the Consolidated Rubber Tire Company the following November. The decision not only held that the Grant patent was valid, but went further and declared the Goodyear Company to be infringers.

From this decision an appeal was taken to United States Court of Appeals, and an injunction was granted upon the giving of an indemnity bond of $100,000.

The recent decision, coming as it does from a court of last resort, will create quite an upheaval in the "rubber world," and the development will be watched with interest. The litigation has cost thousands of dollars, and the result will immediately affect every firm engaged in the rubber tire business.

Novel Trotting Races.

The program in full for the three day summer meeting at Oakley is now out, and three events are carded for the first two days and four for the last day. Four of the races are early closing events, and the entries were in some time ago. The six new ones will close on June 15th. The meeting begins July 2d and closes on the Fourth. Three of the new ones are in the nature of a novelty hereabouts, and they will help a great deal to brighten up the meeting. The purse in each of these three events, one of which will be run each day, is $600. Instead of three heats for the money it will be run as three separate races. The winner of the first heat will receive $200, the second horse $70 and the third horse $30. In the second heat the winner will get $120, the second horse $50 and the third horse $20. For the third heat there are but two moneys—$70 to the first horse and $30 to the second.

At an auction sale of Kentucky saddle horses held at Pittsburg, Pa., on the 12th inst., prices ranged from $250 to $750. Coach teams sold the same day for $1000 and upwards per pair.

Lexington Entries Break All Records.

The entries received on June 2d by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association for their twelve fixed events or early closing races to be contested during their great ten-day meeting, October 7th to 18th inclusive, is indeed a marvelous one, and both in the total number of entries received and in the average for each race breaks all records ever attained either by this or any other association. The entries received for these same races in 1901 was the record up to that time, and hence we give below the entries for 1902 as compared with those received in 1901:

In the Kentucky's Futurity for three year olds, 72 of the original entries have been kept good by the payment of $50 on June 1st, as compared with 37 in 1901.

In the Kentucky's Futurity for two year olds, 103 of the original entries have been kept in by the payment of $25 on June 1st, as compared with 102 of 1901.

In The Transylvania, $6000 for 2:12 trotters, 23 different nominations have been subscribed for as against 20 in 1901.

In The Tennessee, $3000 for 2:08 pacers, 14 nominations have been subscribed for as against the same number in 1901.

In The McDowell, $5000 for 2:10 trotters, 32 entries have been made as against 14 entries in 1901.

In The Walnut Hall Farm Cup, $3000 for 2:15 trotters, 74 entries have been made as against 69 in 1901.

In The Blue Grass, $2000 for 2:19 trotters, 72 entries have been made as against 57 in 1901.

In The Johnston, $2000 for 2:24 trotters, 57 entries have been made as against 75 in 1901.

In the West, $2000 for 2:29 trotters, 66 entries have been made as against 78 in 1901.

In The Kentucky, $2000 for three year old trotters, 76 entries have been made as against 32 in 1901.

In The Lexington, $2000 for two year old trotters, 52 entries have been made as against 43 in 1901.

In The Wilson, $2000 for 2:20 pacers, 50 entries have been made as against 56 in 1901.

Making a grand total of 691 entries received in 1902 as against a total of 597 in 1901; or an average of 57 7-12 to each race as against an average of 49 1-2 in 1901. This record of 57 7-12 to each race has never been approached by but one other association, which received a total of 323 entries, but only offered six races, making an average of 53 5-6.

The above figures may even yet be changed by additional entries from California or distant States which have hardly had time to reach the Secretary since the entries closed.

Secretary E. W. Shanklin and his office force are busily engaged in preparing this record list of entries for the printer, and hope to have the same from the press ready for distribution by the 25th of the present month.

Stockton's Program Arranged.

The Stockton Driving Club, composed of energetic young business men who have managed some of the best fairs ever held in California, will be in line this year with a first class program of harness races for the fair and racing meeting to be held immediately after the close of the State Fair. The purses to be given are as follows:

For Trotters—2:40 class, $600; 2:24 class, $1000; 2:19 class, $600; 2:14 class, $500; free for all, $500.

For Pacers—2:25 class, $600; 2:20 class, $1000; 2:15 class, $600; 2:12 class, $500; free for all, $500.

Entries to these purses will close August 1st, and the advertisement of same will appear in due time in the columns of this journal and entry blanks will be sent to horsemen throughout the country. Coming as it does between the State Fair and the meeting of the Breeders Association at Fresno, Stockton will doubtless receive entries from every stable being campaigned on the circuit. The track at Stockton is now in fine shape and many horses are being worked there. Secretary Willy is sending out advertising matter every day booming the Stockton fair and inviting people to make exhibits and entries. The chances are excellent for the best fair ever held in the metropolis of the great San Joaquin valley.

California breeders who turn their mares out to run in the pastures the year round without fear of losing them as long as the fences are in order will read with interest the following item taken from a Missouri paper: "A mare and colt on the John Klein farm, not far from Sedalia, were picked up by a tornado on May 25th and carried over a public road and three barbed fences and landed on the farm of John C. Kahrs without injury, a distance of over half a mile." There is considerable hot air and windy weather in this State, which may carry away a few seconds belonging to a record or a trial, but it is not quite strong enough to carry off a mare and colt.

SIR GIBBIE 2d.....	James McDonnell, Portola, San Mateo C

McKINNEY 2:11 1/2, the greatest sire of extreme speed of his age in the world, has been sold by his owner, Chas. A. Durfee of San Jose, to Henry B. Gentry, proprietor of the Gentry Stock Farm, Bloomington, Indiana. The negotiations were made by letter and closed this week by telegraph, the price being $25,000. McKinney will be shipped East on August 1st, and the breeding interests of this State will suffer a severe loss. We confidently believe that McKinney's best days in the stud are before him, and that he will yet sire greater horses than any he has produced. While California has a very large amount of McKinney blood, it should have more, as the sons and daughters of the great horse will increase in value as the years go by, and we look to see Eastern men of means take many of them out of the State during the next few years. Many offers have been made for his best son Zombro 2:11, and he, too, may cross the mountains in the near future. Mr. Durfee purchased McKinney of his breeder, W. H. Wilson of Cynthiana, Kentucky, as a two year old and has owned him ever since. As a race horse McKinney was great but as a sire he is greater. He was foaled in 1887, took his record of 2:11 1/2 at Stockton, September 23, 1893, in the second heat of a race which he won, and the same year when he was but six years old two of his sons entered the list of standard performers. The following year two more were added to his list, Harvey Mac making a two year old record of 2:18 that season. In 1895 his son Zombro made a triumphal tour of the California circuit, getting a record of 2:13 as a three year old, McZeus reduced his trotting record to 2:13, and Harvey Mac dropped into the 2:15 list with a mark of 2:14 1/2. This was his start as a sire of 2:15 performers, and last year when but fourteen years of age his list of horses in this select circle numbered 19, which is more than any horse in the world ever accomplished at the same age. This list is headed by Conev 2:02. The leading sire of 2:15 performers is Alcantara, another son of Alcyone. Alcantara has twenty-eight 2:15 performers at 25 years of age, and it need not surprise anyone if McKinney should jump into the lead within the next two years as there are enough of his sons and daughters now in training that have the necessary speed to place him there. McKinney is by Alcyone, believed by many to be the greatest son of George Wilkes. His dam is Rosa Sprague by Gov. Sprague 2:20 1/2, second dam by Mambrino Messenger, third dam by Mambrino Chief, fourth dam by imported Napoleon, fifth dam a thoroughbred mare by Tempest. In breeding, individuality, racing qualities and as a progenitor of extreme speed he is great. Much of McKinney's success in the stud is due to the fact, which we think every unprejudiced person will admit, that he has been owned by a gentleman who has managed him in a masterly manner. Mr. Durfee believed him to be a great prospect when he purchased him in Kentucky, and has never lost faith in him to this day. He selected good mares to breed to him, trained and raced his colts to records and was ever ready to pay a good price for a promising son or daughter of his stallion whenever possible. We expect to see Mr. Durfee take one or more of the sons of McKinney and make producing sires of them in a short time as he owns several that are royally bred and great individuals. We shall regret to see this grand stallion leave the State and can only congratulate Mr. Gentry on getting him, and Mr. Durfee, who is not a man of wealth, on getting a price for his horse, that while less than his real value, will come in very handy for the rainy days that may come but which we know can never entirely obscure the bright sunshine of his disposition.

THE CALIFORNIA CIRCUIT promises to be a success beyond the fondest hopes of those who were its most confident and enthusiastic supporters. The promise that there would be no bookmaking on harness events at a majority of the meetings put many a horse in training that would otherwise have been kept away from the tracks and the generous purses all down the line have attracted a splendid list of entries. Vallejo has filled five purses with from 10 to 16 entries in each, Napa filled eight with an average of ten entries. The Oakland meeting, which follows Napa, will announce ten harness events next week. Woodland's purses, ten in number from $400 to $750, close July 1st. The State Fair has made a preliminary announcement of six big purses of $1200 and $1000 each and will follow with 14 more of less value. Stockton has a generous list, two purses of $1000 each being among them. The Breeders meeting at Fresno will follow Stockton. The California, a $2000 purse for 2:24 class trotters received twenty-two entries and the $1000 pace seventeen. Another batch of big purses for this meeting will follow soon. Bakersfield has not yet announced its program, but has plenty of time, as its meeting does not begin until October 4th. The Los Angeles program is already advertised in our columns. As usual, it is a very generous one. Two purses of $1000 each and the others $700. When the circuit programs are looked over it will be found that there are larger and better purses to trot and pace for here than in any locality in the Union, with the exception of the Grand Circuit. It is a great pleasure to know that owners are responding so liberally with entries to the classes closed so far. There is more enthusiasm over the outlook than there has been for years, and with good management every district fair in California should make a big success of its meeting this year.

AN OPPORTUNITY is offered before July 1st for the owners of foals of 1902, to secure a few entries in Pacific Breeders $6000 Futurity. According to the conditions of this stake where a mare dies, or fails to foal, or the foal dies, another may be substituted regardless of ownership. The third payment of $5 on foals of this year is due July 1st. There will be a few who made entries who have been so unfortunate as to lose their foals, and their nominations are for sale for the amount already paid in. Owners of foals of this year who desire to enter them in the stake should send $13 to Secretary F. W. Kelly, 36 Geary street, before July 1st, together with a description and pedigree of the foal and a nomination will be secured for them. It may not be that all who apply can be accommodated, but the rule of "first come, first served" will be followed, and money returned to those whose applications can not be filled. This is one of the richest stakes that will be contested for in 1904 and 1905, and is worth naming every well bred foal in for which a nomination can be secured.

THE FIRST DAY OF JULY is a date that should not be permitted to pass by the horsemen without making out their entries for the big purses hung up by the Los Angeles, Woodland, Santa Barbara and Salinas associations. Napa, Vallejo, and the Breeders have filled their purses well thus far and there is every prospect of the best season of racing held in the State for years. Get in and go down the line with your horses.

ENTRIES close July 1st for the September meeting of the Minnesota State Fair at the celebrated Hamline track, where forty thousand people congregate to see the harness races. There are two purses of $5000 each and nine of $1000 each. If you are going East don't miss the Hamline meeting. E. W. Randall is Secretary. Send your entries to him in time.

THE DERBIES AND STAKES of the Buffalo Racing Association are advertised in our business columns to-day. Nominations close July 1st.

HORSES TO BE NAMED AUGUST 1.

Nominations are made by J. J. Bottger, W. P. Parrett, J. G. Cuicello, Sherman Bros., P. Gannon, Thos. A. Glover, Dr. J. W. Clark, Mrs. C. L. Anderson, L. J. Rose, Jr., and W. G. Durfee.

Secretary W. T. Kelly announces in our advertising columns that the Vallejo association will re-open purses No. 6 and 7, which are the 2:15 and 2:12 trotting classes. Six entries are required to fill these races, nominations to close June 30th, and horses to be named August 1st.

The following new purses will also be opened: 2:40 trot, purse $500, and free-for-all pace, $500; entries to close June 30th, and horses to be named with entry.

These races should fill and furnish one of the best programs of harness races ever seen in this State.

The trotting turf editor of the Inter-Ocean thinks the time has come for a change in the methods of conducting light harness horse racing. In an article on the subject he speaks of the slowness with which reforms are adopted, and as an illustration says: "Ten years ago or more, mile heats, three in five, often split up and carried over until the next day, was condemned by a few owners, whose bitter experience and heavy losses in valuable horses ruined were used as illustrations, but with little apparent effect. Progressive associations pointed to empty grand stands (that were filled when the race began) at the finish of a seven or nine-heat race, and clamored for a change. One by one the trainers and bookmakers have gotten in line, until now the man who defends the present system finds as much opposition as he who first advocated a change. Up to the present time experiments have been anything but satisfactory. The Northwestern Breeders Association tried a few dash races in 1892, but the opposition from prominent drivers and the pool-sellers put a wet blanket on their efforts. Smaller associations found it more expensive and soon gave it up, but still the change has been advocated by increasing numbers and with more force, until it seems the time has arrived for a change. Horsemen realize they can race longer and more often if races are shorter and limited." The writer does not know that dash races or the Memphis plan will solve the problem, but he says: "One thing is certain—short, sharp and decisive races must be inaugurated by some system, no matter what, as owners, a majority of the drivers, who pay at the gate, demand it, which is, after all, the main point to be considered."

BIG PURSES AT STATE FAIR.

Harness Horses Will be Liberally Provided for in the Program.

In a letter to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, Assistant Secretary Harry Lowden of the California State Agricultural Society, whose duty it is to look after the racing end of the big annual fair at Sacramento, states that at its next meeting the Board of Directors will pass on the following early closing races:

2:20 class, trot, purse.....	1000
2:15 class, trot, purse.....	1000
2:25 class, pace, purse.....	1200
2:18 class, pace, purse.....	1000
2:13 class, pace, purse.....	1000

These are nomination purses, to close Saturday, August 2d. Horses to be named and eligible Monday, September 1st. All heats three in five. Five per cent entrance, five per cent additional from money winners. Further conditions later when authorized by the Board.

In addition to these it is proposed to give an Open Road race for trotters and pacers, open to the whole State. Purse or trophy, $1000, heats, three in five, five per cent entrance and five per cent additional from money winners. To close and horses to be named September 1st. Conditioned as follows: For horses only that have not competed for public money in 1902 in a race between May 1st and September 1st, 1902. To be driven and owned only by amateur drivers, members of a properly organized Driving Club, at the time of closing. Amateur defined as one who has never driven or trained horses for hire or remuneration for or in a race.

A pacing purse, $500, for three year olds, heats 3 in 5, will also be given. This will give, including the Occident and Stanford Stakes, ten harness races, leaving 14 more to be filled. The Board can more intelligently announce the additional classes about the middle of August, when they will have knowledge of what material there is to be drawn from and the classes to provide good contests, and in the meantime some fast ones will perhaps develop to fill a free for all pace, or other fast classes in trots and paces.

Several parties are desirous of having selling races for slow trots and paces conditioned on the lines of running races, winner to be sold at auction for $300, and a claiming clause, where any other horse in the race can be claimed for $300 and the amount won by the first horse. They claim it will secure a well matched field and give the poorer class of horses a chance to compete against each other.

The road race for gentlemen drivers should bring together some of our best amateur drivers from all parts of the State. They will be allowed to take either cash premiums or a trophy of some value. The intention of this race is to encourage the market for road horses and induce gentlemen to join driving clubs. The Board will probably give another—a kind of consolation—to those contesting in this if in fills satisfactory.

It will be seen from the above that the State Agricultural Society intends giving a program this year that will not only be liberal but very attractive and entries should be numerous in all the classes offered. Besides those announced above there will be no less than fourteen additional purses arranged to close later on, and as no bookmaking will be permitted on harness events, horsemen who have likely winners will look forward to a better season of racing this year than California has seen for some time. The State Agricultural Society has the interests of the harness horse at heart and will do everything to advance them. As soon as the Board acts officially on these purses the advertisement, giving conditions and other particulars will appear in these columns. We hope every owner will make an effort to have as many entries as possible at the State Fair this year. It will be the greatest meeting on the circuit and gives every promise of being more largely attended than ever before.

Antezella 2:10½, the rugged looking son of Anteeo that came to Buffalo from the half-mile tracks last August and won such a good race, is likely to be talked about a great deal before the end of the present season. He is in George Spear's stable at Detroit, and he has been a faster mile this spring than any other trotter in that trainer's stable. Antezella is not only a good-gaited trotter with plenty of speed and a good actor, but he is a royally bred horse, as his dam Gazelle was by Guy Wilkes, while his grandam was Eva 2:23½, by Sultan, and her dam was the famous Minnehaha, that produced among others, Beautiful Bells 2:29½, the dam of Chimes, St. Bel, Bell Boy, Belsire, Electric Bell, etc.

Salt makes animals more lively, strong and capable of resisting disease. Their flesh is harder for it, and the functions of the body more regular. Their digestion is better, and they can feed on fodder that otherwise might be injurious to health. Moreover, with the assistance of salt, they can extract more nourishment from a given quantity of fodder, since the flow of the digestive liquids is more copious. Give salt with food difficult to digest.

Secretary Shaw and His Single Footer.

Some of the best horsemen of Washington complain that they have been grossly deceived by Secretary Shaw and his mild mannered riding horse. The Secretary of the Treasury dresses in black, wears a long frock coat, walks to and from the Department, and is generally mistaken for a Methodist preacher by those who do not know him. Soon after he came to Washington as a member of the cabinet the Secretary brought from Iowa a saddle horse. It was accepted in administration circles as an indication that the man intended to follow the Washington fashion as far as he was able and ride a horse once in a while to show that he was in the swim.

President Roosevelt has several saddle horses in the White House stables and rides almost every day. Secretary Root has a fine Kentucky saddle horse and sometimes rides with the President. The new Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Moody, also rides and so does Attorney General Knox, who has one of the best stables in Washington. Senators and representatives and army officers ride much, and they were all anxious to see Secretary Shaw's horse and be in the first company that the Secretary joined for a ride into the country. They speculated on the quality of horseflesh the Secretary had brought on from the great agricultural State of Iowa, where they raise the best draft horses in the country, and there were many good natured jokes about the new man on horseback who had come to Washington.

Finally Secretary Shaw made his first appearance on horseback. The horse was not entirely disappointing. It was not a draft horse, nor a plow horse of any degree, but it was not a war charger such as General Miles rides, nor one that resembled the President's spirited horse that starts off with a jump and continues to gallop until the end of the ride. It would not take the blue ribbon at the county fair when the saddle horses are shown, but it was a saddle horse, slender of limb, well gaited and well behaved. It moved over the asphalt pavement as silently as an automobile runabout, and the Secretary sat in his saddle as comfortably as he might in his swivel chair at his desk. The riders of Washington laughed and said the Secretary of the Treasury was conservative in all things. He looked the Methodist circuit rider as he and his horse glided about the streets of the capital. He had many invitations to join riding parties, and he last week accepted one of these from a group of young men who pride themselves on being rough riders, capable of following the hounds across any course in the District of Columbia.

They got along very nicely while they were within the city limits. The secretary's single-footer was in the rear column, gliding along like a toy rocking horse, and the secretary, with his clerical garb, was as sober as though on his way to a funeral. Representative Newlands of Nevada and Representative Littlefield of Maine led the way to the country near Rock Creek Park, and they thought to test the horsemanship of the secretary. The others were in the secret, and they were a jolly party when they left the paved street for the country road over the hills.

Secretary Shaw and his Iowa horse both seemed to wake up just then. They took the lead, and they followed the road only to the first bridle path, which led up a steep hill. Up the hill went Shaw and his horse, without regard to the brush on either side of the patch. The other riders looked at each other in some surprise at the temerity of the secretary in leaving the good road for the bridle paths of that region, where only the best cross-country riders venture. The bridle path did not satisfy Secretary Shaw and his horse. Where the patch skirted the steepest part of the hill the secretary turned out into the thick underbrush, and his horse went up over rocks and through the brush like a mountain goat.

The others in the party followed as best they could, and when they all arrived at the top of the hill there was the secretary of the treasury sitting calmly on his horse, looking off over the beautiful panorama of city and river and country spread out before him. "Here, gentlemen, is where I propose to build my house. It is the finest location I have been able to find near the city. See that view and the beautiful road leading up to this place! There is nothing finer or more exhilarating in the district." The others were too tired and sore to enjoy the scene.

As they looked down the course over which they had come they also had many forebodings as to how they were to retrace their way to the level country and back to the city. But the secretary and his Iowa horse did not give them long to consider these new difficulties. They went down by a more hazardous route than that by which they had come, and when the party got back into Washington, Newlands and Littlefield swore that they had seen Secretary Shaw's horse actually climb trees like a mountain goat. The other members of the party had more extravagant similes to use in telling about the extraordinary things done by the little rocking horse which the secretary of the treasury rode on that expedition. They declared that the President was not in it with the Iowa man who had joined the cabinet and who looked so much like a preacher.

The only man of the party who was able to be at his desk the next day was Secretary Shaw, and when in the afternoon he sent his messenger to invite some of the gentleman to join him in another ride to see another beauty spot in the district, they all had urgent engagements that compelled them to decline with regrets. Secretary Shaw again rides alone or with only his private secretary, a new-comer from the same part of the country as himself, to accompany him. They go and come through the streets of Washington as quietly as when the secretary began riding his Iowa horse and many people still laugh at the pretense of the Western man trying to keep up with the style in Washington, where everybody professes to ride and all talk horse. But the men who invited Shaw to ride into the country with them say that the new secretary of the treasury is a sly deceiver, who is not all he looks.

Changes in California Jockey Club Officials.

Following the recent resignation of Charles F. Price as general manager of the New California Jockey Club, it is announced that a general change is to be made in the track management of that organization for next season.

At the meeting of the Jockey Club directors two weeks ago it was decided to dispense with the services of Joseph Murphy as presiding judge and Handicapper J. W. Brooks.

Thomas H. Williams, Jr., president of the club, has announced that Ed C. Hopper had been chosen for the position of presiding judge and that he would also act as the club's handicapper.

C. T. Pettingill will be associate judge and president of the board of stewards. Former Assistant Manager V. W. Treat, acting secretary under the late R. B. Milroy, has been chosen secretary. The new board of stewards, to be presided over by Pettingill, will consist of E. C. Hopper, Col. Dan Burns, Fred Mulholland and T. H. Williams. Starters Dwyer and Holtman have both been re-engaged.

It has been decided to open the winter season on November 15th at the Oakland track, after which racing will be conducted alternately at Tanforan and Oakland.

The list of stakes now in preparation will differ from those of the previous season, in that, with the exception of the $10,000 Burns handicap, all will consist of added money.

None of the race tracks in America or Europe can compare with the magnificent equipments of the track at Koudan, Japan. It is about a third of a mile in circumference, and all the way around are rows of splendid stone trimmings, such as ponderous lamps and posts, railings and the like, which make up for the absence of the grand stand. This track is purely Japanese, and as such is more of a novelty, than either of the famous tracks of the country, one at Ueno Park, Tokio, and the other near Yokohama.

To Izaak Walton.

O, man of gentle mould, of kindly heart,
Who loved the woodbird's note, the streamlet's song,
Thine was a peaceful way, a worthy part,
That made thee Nature's friend thy lifetime long.
No dreams of empty pomp thy simple mind
Could tempt from rural joys, from pleasures sweet,
Nor court nor courtiers round thee slyly wind
Soft bands of love to stay thy roving feet.
Where grew the meadow-blooms of early spring,
And health danced briskly round like satyr wild,
There did thy care-free laugh so loudly ring,
That grave, slow wisdom looked on thee and smiled.
And now, soft graces sent with added years,
To win a brother's smile, and stay his tears.

Deputy Fish Commissioner Merklinger, of Truckee, last week, assisted by C. T. Bender, placed 50,000 rainbow trout fry in the Truckee river. These little fish were taken from the hatchery and located in the stream between the Sparks' ranch and the Riverside Hotel. Within two weeks 75,000 more trout fry will be placed in the river.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

World's Fly-Casting Tournament.

The San Francisco Fly-Casting Club announces a scientific angling tournament to be held at Stow lake, in Golden Gate Park, this city, on August 8 and 9, 1902. The contests will be for the World's championships in fly-casting and in lure-casting, and will be open to the members of all recognized angling clubs. The events will be:

1. Long distance fly-casting with light rod. Rods not to exceed five ounces in weight, with $\frac{1}{4}$ of an ounce allowance for solid reel seat.
2. Long distance fly-casting with heavy rod, weight unlimited.
3. Accuracy fly-casting at buoys 50, 55 and 60 feet. Rods not to exceed $8\frac{1}{2}$ ounces.
4. Combined accuracy and delicacy fly-casting at buoys 35, 40 and 45 feet. Rods not to exceed $5\frac{1}{2}$ ounces.
5. Lure casting at buoys 60, 70, 80, 90 and 100 feet. The lure will be a half-ounce rubber frog.
6. Team contest between clubs. Two men constitute a team. The events included in the team contest will be those above described under the heads 2, 3, 4 and 5.

No rod shall exceed eleven feet in length. All casting to be done single handed. Leaders are to be of single gut, and shall be between 6 and 9 feet in length. Fly shall not be larger than No. 5 (American size).

No restrictions on line or reel, except that in lure-casting reel shall be absolutely free running.

No effort or expense will be spared to make this tournament a memorable one.

Medals and prizes—The winner in each of the five contests will receive a diamond championship medal. In addition to the medal there will be many valuable merchandise prizes awarded in each event. The trophy for the team contest will be a silver loving cup, which shall become the property of the club whose team shall win the contest.

Transportation—At the time of the tournament the Knights of Pythias, 60,000 strong presumably, will be holding a conclave in San Francisco. Special rates on all lines of travel to San Francisco will be made. There will be a $50 rate from Chicago to San Francisco and return, and from other cities in the East and the Middle West proportionately low rates will be in effect.

In order to more effectively serve the interests of those devoted to the "gentle art," it is proposed that at the time of the tournament in San Francisco, a national organization of Fly Casting and Angling Clubs be established. The advantages to be derived from such an organization are many, some of which are:

The adoption of a uniform code of laws and rules to govern contests and tournaments; the influence of legislation for the proper protection of fish; the promotion of scientific angling; the formation of clubs throughout the Union, and the promotion of good fellowship among anglers.

At the preliminary meeting any recognized club in the United States may be represented by proxy, if it be impossible to send a member as a delegate.

August is about the best month for fly fishing in California, and it is the purpose of the club members to give the visiting brother anglers some fishing trips that they can talk about. The salt water salmon fishing along the coast of Central and Northern California and the tuna and yellow tail fishing at Catalina Island and along the coast of Southern California, afford kindly entertainment. The rivers and the lakes of the Sierra Nevada abound in trout, and the angler plies his art in the midst of grand scenery.

Fuller particulars regarding the rules and other matters pertaining to the tournament will be furnished on application to T. W. Brotherton, Secretary-Treasurer, Room No. 27, Wells Fargo Building, San Francisco, Cal.

For this season's outing and angling trips the flycasters can avail themselves of a rate schedule offered by the Southern Pacific Company, which has fixed following round-trip rates for members of club and their families: Chico, $5.90; Baird, $9.50; Sims, $9.50; Ager, $14; Ashland, $19; Grant's Pass, $21.50; McCloud, $12; Cisco, $6.40; Truckee, $8.30; Boca, $8.70; Verdi, $9.50. Shasta tickets are good for the season. Sierra tickets are good only for 30 days.

A merry party of anglers and guests sat around the tastefully arranged and flower bedecked banquet board at the club dinner of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club on the evening of the 12th inst. The main topic of interest presented was in discussing arrangements for the world's fly casting tournament. Prizes in medals and trophies aggregating $1000 in value will be competed for and merchandise prizes worth at least $1000 will be distributed. In fact, there will be enough prizes to enable every contestant to win a token of greater or lesser value. This tournament, if carried out on the lines proposed, which plan now can be considered as a certainty, will be the greatest event of its kind ever held.

Advices from Chicago and Grand Rapids assure the attendance of contestants representing the fly-casting clubs in those two cities. The entries for each event will close when the first contestant puts out his line.

Fly-casting clubs will be organized in Portland and Spokane and possibly one in Los Angeles; the sport seems to be a popular and growing one and is finding many supporters among Coast anglers and sportsmen.

George W. Powers, Jr., was elected a member of the club by unanimous vote.

Walter D. Mansfield addressed the club at some length, during his discourse quoting from a witty and happy speech by Ambassador Choate at a banquet of the Anglers Club in London. I. R. Drubb, on behalf of Horace Smyth, presented a message of good fellowship that was received with applause and a toast to Mr. Smyth was drunk standing. The other speakers were Judge John Hunt, Alex F. Vogelsang, John Lawrence, Dr. Hibbard, John Peltier and John Butler. Mr. Butler was appointed sergeant-at-arms for the club.

Communications from President Roosevelt and ex-President Grover Cleveland were read. The President declined, owing to his official position, deeming it inadvisable at the present time, to become an honorary member of the club. Grover Cleveland is not only an angler but is also a member of the club. About this time matters began to assume a somewhat facetious aspect, urged on by Fred Lees and John Lawrence. John Butler proposed "his dear friend" Edward VII. for membership. Butler was sincere. His recent patent of nobility and title, "Duke of Hayden," has given him a most positive and important standing among all sportsmen who use bait carried in a flask. Alec Vogelsang seconded the motion and also placed in nomination Oom Paul, stating that the old gentleman was now out of a job and the club could make an angler out of him who would excel John Gallagher, the champion of Oakland.

During the evening a letter from John Siebe was read. It was sent from a point in the Mojave Desert and gave a detailed account of a rainstorm which prevailed during the writer's stay in the arid regions. The humor of this epistle was appreciated by the assembled company. Vogelsang vouched for the truth of Siebe's "hoodoo" qualities on an angling trip, claiming that every time he was one of a party it invariably rained, that in fact he was a genuine rain-maker.

Another story told of Siebe related how the smiling John hunted for himself when he was lost. Several weeks ago, W. D. Mansfield, Ed Everett and Siebe were up on the Sacramento fishing. One evening all of the party returned to the hotel except Siebe. Some little anxiety was felt for the missing angler as it grew later and later. Finally a messenger, an Indian, was sent off up the river after the delinquent. The Indian at last located Siebe, complacently sitting in a boat and fishing. The Indian made known his quest, that he was hunting for a "lost man," Siebe immediately came ashore and helped the trailer, carrying one of two lanterns the Indian had with him. They crossed the river and hunted and hunted and finally struck a trail; they followed the "sign" for a while until the tracks doubled back, and traced the evidences of some one's passage over boulders and through brush along the river bank until they reached the hotel and found that in hunting for Siebe lost they found Everett at the hotel.

Among those present at the dinner were: W. D. Mansfield, H. F. Muller, Judge John Hunt, Alex T. Vogelsang, I. R. D. Drubb, T. W. Brotherton, H. Battu, John Peltier, Carlos G. Young, John Lawrence, A. M. Blado, Fred Lees, Dr. W. E. Brooks, C. R. Kenniff, J. B. Kenniff, Charles H. Kewell, J. S. Turner, A. S. Carman, Achilles Roos, W. W. Richards, C. W. Hibbard, Charles Hyeck, James Watt, Charles Klein, Dr. Stephens, M. M. Josephi, J. X. Dewitt and Robert Smyth.

Perhaps nowhere else in the world, remarks Shooting and Fishing, are shotguns given such severe use as in the United States. An active trap shot in this country probably shoots his gun more times in a year than a sportsman abroad shoots one in several years. It is estimated that an enthusiastic and active trap shot fires his gun from ten to fifteen thousand times a year. The grand American Handicap Tournament report is a particularly striking illustration of the popularity of American shotguns and a demonstration of their shooting qualities. A majority of trap shooters in this country use American made shotguns, and use them so well there can be no doubt as to their shooting qualities.

A litter of six English Setter puppies by Herr Schott (Duke of Oregon-Pink II) out of Illma (Cavalier-Kitty R.) has turned out excellently. Mr. Taft has disposed of all of the youngsters. Lady Bellevue, a bitch puppy is now in the hands of D. W. Lloyd, who believes she will mature into a splendid and handsome looking field dog. For a puppy she is a pretty one.

Salmon fishing at Santa Cruz has not been near as good recently as can be found in Monterey bay near Capitola and Monterey town.

Stonehenge vs. Some Field Trial Setters.

The greater frequency of a good nose without "tail action" in the Pointer than in the Setter, supposing it to exist, may, I think, be explained in the following way: Both the original Pointer and the Spaniel undoubtedly always possessed "tail action," which has probably been lost in many examples of each breed by crossing with the hound. Now, the Foxhound chiefly tries for the foot scent, and so does the Spaniel; while the peculiarity of the true Pointer is that he carries his head high in the air, trying for the body scent, in which he is imitated by the best Setter strains. As a consequence, according to my theory, the hound cross was borne by the Pointer, while it was fatal to the Setter, making the latter—who had by a long process of selection lost the Spaniel's kind of nose in the hands of the most successful breeders—return to his original low carriage of head and "quest" of the foot scent.

There is a quality of great importance to the enjoyment of a good day's shooting over Setters or Pointers which has not in our field trials been, I think, sufficiently attended to—namely, the mental development necessary to distinguish between a "false point" and one really on game. Even in partridge shooting it is a great nuisance to be dragged all across a large field without seeing fur or feathers before you, your dog standing "as stiff as a crutch;" but on a grouse moor it is still worse. Of course, even the best dog will occasionally make a mistake, but to be constantly misleading his master is an unmitigated bore. There are two or three causes of this "false pointing." First, a dog may be so bred as to develop the tendency by association of ideas; that is to say, to point without any scent at all, and only from some indication either of eye or ear. Secondly, a point often occurs from a dog feeling the scent which has been left behind by birds or "fur" recently gone away; and, thirdly, some soft or lazy dogs point when they are tired, simply to get a rest from their gallop. Now, as to the first of these causes, I have had little or no personal experience in the Setter, but I have certainly seen it strongly developed in the old-fashioned Pointer, and notably in a well known strain kept very pure by the late Lord Foley, which, like the Laverack Setters, were very much inbred; but they were very different from that strain in point of stamina and courage, and required no breaking whatever. I should not, therefore, from their example have suspected its existence in the Laveracks, which are said to require a great deal of breaking; although, since it was alleged against them as a fault, I can call to mind the fact that Sir R. Garth's Daisy, when she won at Shrewsbury in 1869, began to point almost as soon as she was cast off by her breaker, and the general impression was that it was a trick, for which E. Armstrong got the blame, as her false point ended in a draw; and this going on till she came on game, Daisy obtained credit which it was thought she did not deserve. Not having seen Blue Belle III. at Horseheath, I must depend on the evidence of the Field reporter, who describes her as manifesting the fault five times in succession in a short time, pointing and staring about her when on the point in a way to show clearly that no game was before her. Assuming this account to be correct—as I have no doubt it is—it certainly corroborates "Setter's" statement in a remarkable manner and endorses the opinion generally formed that the strain is too much inbred. Most probably Mr. Laverack selected for stud purposes those animals which showed the greatest tendency to point naturally, and in this way obtained the cataleptic tendency to excess. But this propensity is by no means objectionable when crossed with other strains, and hence we have seen such good dogs as Mr. Field's Daisy, Mr. MacDona's Ranger, Mr. Brewis' Dash II. and Mr. Purcell Llewellyn's Norna and Nora.

The second kind of "false point" is the most common and should be severely punished in the fully broken dog by every means short of the whip. Most breakers, and especially when preparing for field trials, are content to get a point, whether false or true, since the practice usually has been at public trials to give the dog credit for the point, if in the opinion of the judge game has recently gone away, whether the dog has made out his mistake or not. But the experienced sportsman is not content with such a mental defect and expects his Pointer or Setter to tell him clearly whether or no he is certain of a find. The nose should be keen enough to make a dog stop in his gallop, however slight the scent, and he should even point; but no sooner is the stop made than he should set his brains to work to discover the actual presence or absence of game, which is easily made out by a clever dog, who soon finds the scent diminish if not kept up by a fresh supply from the bird or ground game. To be able to say with certainty that Grouse or Duke has game before him and to march any distance to him with confidence is a pleasure only equalled by the annoyance suffered, when after a long march a blank is the result. Hence, I think it highly important that a "false point" repeated more than once in a short trial should be regarded as a fatal defect in selecting a dog or bitch for stud purposes. As to the third kind of false point arising from laziness alone, I need scarcely remark that a dog exhibiting it is only fit for a hempen collar or a charge of shot.

Points of a Setter—The numerical value of the points in each breed is the same, though the description in several of them will vary. I therefore begin by allotting the following figures to each, referring my readers to the three articles for their varying definitions:

THE ENGLISH SETTER.

Since the first publication of the articles on the various breeds of dogs in the Field, during the years 1865-6, the strain of English Setters known by the name of "Laverack," from the gentleman who bred them, has carried all before it, both on the show bench and in the public field trials which have been annually held. For this high character it is generally indebted to the celebrated Countess, who was certainly an extraordinary animal, both in appearance and at work; for until she came out the only Laverack which had shown to advantage was Sir R. Garth's Daisy, a good average bitch. Though small, Countess was possessed of extraordinary pace, not perhaps equal to that of the still more celebrated Pointer Drake, but approaching so closely to it that his superiority would be disputed by many of her admirers. On referring to her portrait, it will be seen that her frame, though on short legs, is full of elegance, and her beautiful head and neck are absolutely perfect. With her high pace she combined great power and endurance, and her chief fault was that she never could be fully depended on; for, when fresh enough to display her speed and style to the full, she would break away from her master and defy his whistle until she had taken her fling over a thousand acres or so. On a good scenting day it was a high treat to see her at work; but, like most other fast gallopers, she would sometimes flush her game on a bad scenting day, and then she would be wild with shame. An instance of this occurred at the Bala field trials of 1872, when on her appearance in the stake for braces with her sister Nellie, both of these bitches were utterly beyond the control of Mr. Buckell, who worked them, Nellie even chasing a bird like a raw puppy. To get rid of this wildness, they were worked hard on the day which intervened between their appearance in the braces and Countess' trial in the Rhiwlas Stakes, when she came out as stale as a poster and was only placed third to Ranger and Belle. Still, though manifestly beaten, she evidently was so from bad judgment alone on the part of those who managed her; and she only injured the character of the stock to which she belongs, to show that, like most high-couraged Setters, they require a certain amount of work to keep them steady, which it appears she had not had. Nellie, the sister, was of the same size, but not so fast or so elegant; still she was good enough to beat the crack on one occasion at Vaynol in 1872, but on most days she would have stood no chance against Countess. She served to show that Countess was not wholly exceptional, as was sometimes alleged by the detractors of the "Laverack"; and these two bitches, together with Sir R. Garth's Daisy, may fairly be adduced as indicating that at all events these Laverack bitches were quite first-class.

No dog, however, of the pure breed has yet put in an appearance at any field trial with any pretensions to high form, but several winners have appeared half or quarter bred of that strain. For example, Mr. Statter's Bruce by Dash (Laverack) out of owner's Rhoebe, and his Rob Roy by Fred II. (also Laverack) out of the same bitch, may be adduced; but Dick and Dan by Duke (of the Corbet and Graham strain) out of Rhoebe, were far superior to these dogs, and serve to show that, at all events as crosses for other breeds, that Laveracks are not to be so highly recommended as Mr. Lort and other disciples of the "Laverack" school would lead us to believe. The cross which has been most successful is that of Mr. Lort's Sir R. Garth's and Mr. Paul Hackett's blood, culminating in the third remove from the Laverack kennel in Mr. MacDona's Ranger. This dog was fully as fast as Countess, with a keener nose and far better temperament, being, when in form, as steady and dependable as a steam locomotive. Mr. MacDona's favorite may be classed A1 among the field trial winners in a quintet including Drake, Countess, Dash II., and Belle; the Irish Setter, Plunkett, approaching them very nearly but not quite reaching their level. Boll and Frank, who won several prizes on the show bench, are of the same cross as the grandsire of Ranger, all being out of Lort's Dip by a Laverack dog, and respectively named Rock and Fred II. Roll was a grand dog in shape, with the exception of his loin, in which a certain amount of slackness was displayed when a little out of condition, as he generally was when shown, being a shy feeder. I am told by Mr. Lort, who shot over him for some time, that he was as good in the field as on the bench, but when I tried him he had no nose whatever. His pace was very great, with the usual quiet trail of flag; and the Spaniel-like character peculiar to the Laverack dogs is also quite lost in him by the cross with the Anglesea bitch Dip.

Next to this cross comes that with the Corbet and Graham strains as shown in Mr. Brewis' Dash II., who this year, 1877, has beat Ranger in two out of three stakes at Shrewsbury and Horseheath and whose portrait I have selected, with that of Countess, to illustrate this breed as excellent specimens of the high bred English Setter, though the dog is still, in my opinion, a little too Spaniel-like in the shape of the body. He and his sister Daisy, also a field trial winner, are by Laverack's Blue Prince out of Armstrong's Old Kate. This bitch is by Laverack's old Blue Dash out of E. Armstrong's Kate, sister to his Duke, the sire of Dan, about whose stock a great deal has been written in the highest terms by "Percival" and "Setter" in the Field and elsewhere, and by Mr. Purcell Llewellyn, who has used him as a stud dog almost exclusively to cross with his Laverack bitches, after purchasing him at a very high price, together with his brother Dick from Mr. Statter at the Shrewsbury meeting of 1871. The opinions expressed by these gentlemen must be taken cum grano salis, as they are manifestly interested in the breed, which they style as par excellence "the field trial breed" from the successes obtained by its component parts at these trials. I shall therefore confine myself in my remarks on it to their public performances as observed by myself and others, disregarding all private opinions in this as in all other cases, from my experience of the little reliance to be placed upon them.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

On dit, that Chas. K. Harley has just received a Boston Terrier, bought from and shipped here by George K. Thomas.

J. L. Cunningham's Great Dane bitch Juanita is back from Germantown, Pa., where she was bred to Montebello Kennels' Montebello Caesar, a harlequin. The bitch came back to San Francisco in first class shape and condition, evidently having had the best of care and looking better for the trip East.

In the last few years the Canadian Kennel Club seems to have taken on new life, and now they are doing all in their power to encourage the breeding of good dogs in Canada. They now give handsome cups for championships won under their rules, one of which has been received by Mr. Charles Minor, of Victoria, B. C., for his English Setter, Roy Montez, who, by the way, is now a champion under both the American and Canadian Kennel Clubs. To become a C. K. C. champion, a dog must win first four times in winners class in shows held under the auspices of the Canadian Club. Roy Montez has done this in both Canadian and American shows. In the Canadian Stud Book he is registered 5765. The cup received from C. K. C. is a very handsome silver one, standing about fourteen inches high. On a shield are the words in blue and gold: "C. K. C. Championship; 5765." Around the shield is a wreath, and on the top a beaver. In a letter to Mr. Minor the secretary states that the club has now decided to give cups and medals to any club holding field trials in Canada, the only condition being that the dog competing is registered.

Field and Fancy is to be congratulated upon the brilliancy of its Coast regular correspondent's efforts in posting the Eastern fancy on our kennel affairs. We will take the liberty of correcting the writer's latest, by stating that "Mr. Ed Attridge" has not "about the best breeding kennel of Bull Terriers on the Coast." Patsy, "which Mr. Attridge brought out at the recent 'Frisco' show is" not "about the best Bull Terrier ever raised on the Coast, and with a little more condition next year will" not "go to first winners instead of reserve." Patsy is totally deaf, which condition was observed by a number of fanciers at the April show in this city.

It is probable, that if the judge had shown the same amount of enthusiasm and application in the examination of dogs brought before him as he did in persistent endeavor to impress upon breeders and exhibitors the superior qualities of certain dog medicines, that he might have observed the disqualifying impediment to Patsy's career as a bench winner. We do not desire to impugn the judge's motives, he probably judged as well as he knew how to.

What Bull Terrier bitch is "Hawthorn Torpedo?" We do not find any record in the A. K. C. Gazette of the Hawthorn Kennels.

The "regular coast correspondent's" notes are remarkable in one respect, viz. Too much ego in his cosmos.

This reminds us, the crop of coast correspondents is on the increase, they all have the virtue of doing their work gratuitously. This enables each "regular coast correspondent" to have the use of more or less space weekly for a little touting and free advertising. At home he or she poses as a big fish in a small puddle, they never overlook the chance to work in on all the prerogatives usually extended to the press—once in a while they "pike in" and sell a dog. Comparing the various effusions each week—or the medley of reports of a local show; which appear in the different Eastern journals, each with the other, the result is a confusing pot pourri of dog talk that must be laughable to Eastern readers.

The Coast lagoon of ink, however, has been a good fish pond for some astute Eastern dealers who now and then angle for and land a fat sucker with a nice canine gold brick. This bait is generally dangled before the selected fish on hooks pendant from a line of letters; such only as the seller of crackerjack dogs knows how to pen when the unloading of a $75 or $100 dog for $300 or $400, for instance, is being negotiated with an ambitious fancier who desires a $300 or $400 dog for $75 or $100.

But they are not all that way, we are glad to say, there are some notable exceptions. We will leave it to our readers to pick the winners. We will make a book on it, laying odds on the field.

We notice a number of our current Eastern contemporaries have been at much pains to publish a "condensed statement of expenditures in connection with the" S. F. K. C. show in April. This inventory is so condensed that the Bench Show Committee at last advices could not get it in shape, nor could their legal adviser. The published statement referred to is both unctious and affable, it distributes a few bouquets and states regretfully that the prevailing conditions prevented the turning over of a neat sum to charity. A curious coincidence happened here; it was the publication in the papers, daily and weekly, of the amount of the charity fund turned over and was a unique and insidious statement that by reason of an alleged typographical error showed the sum of $5,075 realized on the auction sale of posters and turned over for sweet charity. The amount could not have been more, from that source, than what was received at the sale, viz: $55; it may have been only $50.75.

Man's Best Friend swallowed the charity bait and registered a kick, and a good sensible one it was, too, on the charity shibboleth.

We may find occasion in the near future to go further into this matter. When we do, we promise some interesting things, some real objets d'art revealed when the drapery usually known as the sweet mantle of charity was thrown aside by the curious.

AT THE TRAPS.

The live bird shoot of the Golden Gate Gun Club is the attraction for trap shooters at Ingleside to-morrow.

The Union Gun Club propose to challenge any gun club in the State to a twelve-man-team race, conditions and details will be arranged shortly to that effect. This contest should be a very interesting one, as several remarkably strong teams can be mustered up.

At a recent shoot of the Watsonville Gun Club the scores made in a 20 bird race at blue rocks were the following: T. N. Alford 20, H. White 20, Ed Winkle 18, H. Struve 17, J. Whalen 17, J. W. Baxter 17, D. F. Leddy 16, C. A. Palmtag 16, George Jessen 16, Henry Kane 16, Al Cupid 15, J. F. Kane 14, Ed Kelly 13, D. F. Ring 13, J. W. Herbert 12, T. Albright 12.

The Shell Mound Gun Club of Grass Valley is in a prosperous condition with a good membership and a number of applicants on the waiting list. In a recent 20 and 15 bird blue rock shoot the scores were:

First race—Horan 16, Bovey 8, Brock 11, Gray 7, Michell 17, Ellis 10.
Second race—Miller 10, Horan 14, Bovey 10, Brock 15, Gray 10, Michell 14, Ellis 11.

The Rising Sun Gun Club of Dixon, semi-monthly blue rock shoot last Sunday was participated in by a number of Capital City Gun Club members. Six events were on the program, the Dixon shooters holding their own with the visitors from Sacramento.

The scores in the various races were as follows:

A meeting of the Board of Governors has been called for Monday evening next. The California Inanimate Target Association seems to be in somewhat of an anomalous condition at present. Since the disbandment of three gun clubs, the Olympic, Lincoln and San Francisco, there has not been a chance for the necessary representation at a meeting of the Board to form a quorum. This state of affairs renders ineffective all action taken at several past meetings, even to the standing of the recently organized Golden Gate Gun Club in the association, it is claimed. This contretemps could have been avoided had there been a meeting previous to the passing out of existence of the three clubs mentioned and proper action taken by a legal quorum in anticipation of coming events.

On Monday evening an effort will be made to master the dilemma. This will then allow of an arrangement being made to hold the annual tournament.

The Sacramento trap grounds were slimly attended last Sunday; a large contingent of the capital city shooters were away having a shotgun argument with Dixon shooters. The Record-Union says in respect thereto:

The Sacramento shotgun experts who went to Dixon for wool came home sheared. Those who went were Vetter, McWilliams, Gusto, Stephens, Just, Blair, Trumpler, De Merritt, Upson, Weber and Engelhart.

Stuart Upson, in speaking of the event said, that aside from being beaten at the traps, the Sacramento visitors were well treated. "They are a fine lot of sportsmen at Dixon, and no mistake," said Mr. Upson. "As a general thing, the Dixon boys out-shot us throughout the day."

In the team shoot, six men on a side, fifteen targets each, making ninety targets, the race was won by Dixon with a score of 76 to 71.

Holling, of Dixon, was best for the winners, breaking 24 in the 25 blue rock event. Just made the best showing on behalf of Sacramento.

The Davisville Club has invited the Sacramento men to visit Davisville and the trip will soon be made.

A Squelched Wild Cat Hunt.

Just who are the members of the Oakland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals nobody knows excepting themselves. That they are fanatical cranks, if the story of the society's injunction of a proposed wildcat hunt recently is a true one, goes without saying.

Some people are incapable of minding their own business and consequently deem it a bounden duty to interfere with and meddle in other people's affairs.

The Rookwood Hunt Club is composed of a number of sportsmen who during several seasons past, used to hunt the Berkeley hills for coyotes and wild cats. They have now changed their hunting country to the vicinity of Hayward, where the club's kennel of hounds is located.

The form of persecution and imposition indulged in by the Society, was prompted by the story that the club members intended to pit one of the dogs against a wounded wildcat after the animal had been chased, treed, and brought to the ground by a bullet. Even if this charge had been true, the officials had no right to stop the hunt, their only possible chance to interfere was when the alleged cruelty to a wild animal was actually practised and in operation.

That hunting wild animals can be possibly construed as cruelty to animals is most preposterous. In wild cat hunting with dogs, the cats are raised by the hounds, and when chased will tree in short order, a shot from one of the hunting party's rifle is not always fatal to the cat, when the cat drops to the ground there is usually a scrimmage; sometimes a cat is cornered before it has a chance to tree, then there is a lively fight on. A wildcat, unwounded, and in good condition, can make a very lively fight with the dogs and will take good care of itself until placed hors de combat by a shot. In fact the older and more experienced dogs as a rule will simply keep the animal at bay until the arrival of the hunter, having a wholesome respect for the cat's teeth and claws.

So with hunting coyotes, the animals are roused from their lairs by the dogs, which are trained for the sport. The hunters being posted at different vantage points, as soon as the quarry is driven in range, the rifles are brought into play. Both wildcats and coyotes, being nocturnal in their habits, the hunt generally commences about 8 o'clock in the morning, after the animals have turned in for a sleep after a night's marauding. If the hunt is commenced early in the morning the animals, always on the alert when prowling, will take effective measures for escape and concealment from impending danger to their useless carcasses.

The Oakland Society for the Prevention of Asinine Decadence claimed that the club's sport was cruel and barbarous, in that the huntsmen mounted on "fence jumpers"—whatever they may be—armed with rifles and attended by a pack of hounds give chase to a wildcat or a coyote, and after wounding the animal, pit one of the dogs against it for the purpose of witnessing a bloody combat.

As a matter of fact, most of these hunts are conducted afoot. The country is pretty uneven and there is generally a number of barb wire fences that are not always come against during the chase, in a convenient position for jumping a horse over, it is a tough job at times for the hunter himself to get through expeditiously. In some sections of Contra Costa and Alameda counties, and other places as well, where this sport is in vogue, horses are tabooed, the ranchers claiming that some unscrupulous hunters have used wire-cutters to enable them to get through their fences quickly.

At all events the farmers and ranchers are glad to have wildcats and coyotes hunted and killed, particularly so when the hunt is conducted in a systematic manner by sportsmen well equipped for the chase.

Wildcats are carnivorous, they will kill fawns when opportunity offers, domestic poultry is a tidbit for them, ground nesting birds, particularly quail, are hunted, killed, eaten by them. There is nothing in the career of the wildcat that should counterbalance almost any method of effectively destroying a predatory wild animal.

Coyotes are numerous also across the bay, in the foothills, and a pest to the farmers and ranchers, frequenting as they do a comparatively well settled farming and fruit growing region. That any plea can be made by any one save an idiot or mischief maker, in favor of coyotes and wildcats is so preposterous as to seem almost incredible.

From what we know of the sport of hunting these wild and useless animals, it has been our experience to note invariably the custom of stopping a scrimmage between the dogs and quarry just as soon as a rifle shot, knife thrust or club could be made effective.

Hounds are far too valuable to take chances on having them killed or disabled by the animals hunted and brought to bay. Fights take place, it is true, there is no way of preventing them at times. Everybody knows, who is at all familiar with the sport that a fight is not the chief feature of the chase nor a contingency devoutly wished. As above noted, experienced dogs will nearly always keep away from, and hold the hunted animal at bay. The young dogs, and there is generally one or more youngsters in the pack, taking the initial lessons, are the ones that generally butt in for a scrimmage, they do not stay at it long, however, for they are sure of a few cuts and scratches that are potent in teaching them discretion.

From the tenor of the article published in a daily paper, we should imagine that the case was one prompted by spite on the part of someone against the club members. The names and residences of a number of the club members were given and a statement published, accredited to the club's kennel keeper, that it was arranged to have a fight between a "bull pup and a wounded coyote"—two elements necessary for the talk of fight that, we believe, would be a hard task to get and bring together.

The one lamentable feature of the whole proceeding was the backdown of the huntsmen who, it appears, were intimidated from the start and abandoned their day's sport at the behest and warning of a jack leg emissary of the Oakland infested organization for the salvation of wildcats and coyotes. Another matter overlooked was the infringement upon the legal and constitutional rights of the sportsmen, which they evidently were too chicken-hearted to maintain.

We have noticed, time and again, the tendency on the part of some eminently respectable business and professional individuals, that when the occasion arose whereby they were in danger of public notice, that they would weaken and shrink from the chance of public gaze, even though they were not in the least culpable and only needed a little backbone to come out with flying colors.

The case here commented on is one in point, we believe, the club members have acquired an unenviable notoriety and a mention that is distorted, biased and calculated to be accepted by many people whose only interest now in the matter will have been acquired through reading a calumnating story, that could have been refuted and stopped had the parties interested stood upon their rights and fought the unwarranted interference with the courage and spirit of true sportsmen, instead of being awed by the Oakland bug-a-boo into a weak-kneed subsidence.

THE FARM.

It is recognized by students of dairy bacteriology that there are species of germs which will develop and thrive at low temperature and that they are mostly of a kind that give the off-flavor to butter. The long time from the cow to the creamery gives these germs opportunity to get in their work. This kind of deterioration is common in the winter months. In the heat of summer the cream cannot be kept sufficiently cool in shipping to stop the development of acid and the result then is over-ripe cream and sour butter.

Not the least interesting matter in connection with the Angora goat industry is the variety and beauty of articles manufactured from mohair. One is impressed first with the brilliant lustre of mohair goods. Some of the finer fabrics rival silk in sheen and shade, while at the same time it conveys the idea of a durability greater than silk. The number of uses for mohair seems to be rapidly increasing, going into the field of the silks in dress goods, hosiery, underwear, etc.

While the Ayrshire may be used as a valuable butter cow her best and most profitable place is in producing milk for town and city trade and it is here she finds no rival in giving a quality of milk up to the standard and for the least outlay for food consumed. Besides the ability to produce milk cheaply and of superior quality, this breed gives a large quantity and holds out for a long period with uniform flow and unless care is exercised she will not go dry at all.

In bulletin No. 4 of the Department of Agriculture is presented the "Report of Irrigation Investigations for 1900" under the supervision of Elwood Mead with thirteen assistants. This volume covers 334 pages of text. It is replete with data of the most hopeful character to those interested in the great problem of irrigation in the West. Excellent as has been his work in other years, in this last bulletin Prof. Mead makes real advancement on past accomplishments. Requests for this work should be addressed to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

June 2, 1882, the record price of $9.30 was paid for cattle in the Chicago market. The drove sold at this price contained 15 head that averaged 1523 pounds. The cattle were marketed by Briggs, Benson & Honsh, Maquon, Ill. The extremes of price that day were $5.75 to $9.30, with bulk at $7 to $8.75. Top price for heavy swine that day was $8.50 and for good sheep $5. Receipts of cattle were 6,93 head. This is the highest price ever obtained for cattle and 1882 stands as the year of best figures. On the other hand, 1889 was the year of lowest average, best going at $6.10 and the average was $3.90. In June, 1889, choicest native steers offered made only $1.70 and in the following July $1.55 was the top paid. Corn in June, 1882, sold between 68½ and 75 cents, owing to the short crop of 1881.

The report that the British Government is going into cattle buying for the purpose of replenishing the depleted herds in South Africa was sprung the day that peace was declared. It is not unlikely that the British will do something of that sort, but no such announcement has been made and the work will not begin at least till some of the peace arrangements have been made. The report was sprung for market effect solely, and followed an hour after the dispatch announcing peace.

The great city of New York, with its three millions of people, has one of the smallest stockyards in the country—not as large as those of a lively range shipping point. The yards are long and narrow, and extend far out into the river. The exact dimensions are 2500 by 320 feet. The tracks of the Erie Railroad adjoin them on one side and the Pennsylvania

Cows will eat alfalfa hay when running on good pasture. This is an additional evidence of the cured qualities and properties of alfalfa that cannot be said of ordinary grass feeds. Well cured alfalfa is as perfect feed for cows as can be secured in any hay or forage crop. A cow generally chooses what she likes best.

The bull-butter men say they will go right along making and selling their nasty stuff, but it will be uncolored. They do not expect a rushing business for a while at least. Pigs may be left to subsist exclusively on green alfalfa, but better results are obtained by giving a small quantity of grain with it. Exceedingly large returns are obtained from the small quantities fed, as the alfalfa being green and bulky really needs the grain to balance its effect. The bulky pasturage expands the digestive tract of the pig, thus enabling it to utilize a large quantity of feed when the finishing period comes, which is a very important consideration. Excellent results may also be obtained by cutting the alfalfa and feeding it green to the hogs, but pasturing is of course more satisfactory. Alfalfa may be pastured lightly with hogs the second year after sowing, but it is better to wait until the third year. Under no consideration is it safe to the alfalfa to pasture it the first year.

The Shorthorn boom is up again and should have reached its apex if the present breeders expect to remain long in business. At a sale in Iowa the other day fifty head of females went at an average of $938.20 a head.

PEDIGREE IN PART.

Sired by SIDNEY 2:19¾, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05¼ (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Hattie dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4340, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18¾ Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21¾, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:16, first quarter in 0:40¼, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902.

JOTTINGS.

HICK'S VALLEY is one of the pretty spots in California in the Coast Range of mountains, about eight miles from the thriving and busy town of Petaluma. The town mentioned is in Sonoma county, but the valley is in the county of Marin and is one of its choicest gems of the many that form a brilliant cluster in that political division which lies north from San Francisco and along the shore of the broad Pacific Ocean. A pretty little trout stream, San Antonio creek, is the dividing line between the two counties, and after crossing it the road from Petaluma begins to rise until the first summit is reached and then Hick's Valley lies below in all its beauty of hay and grain fields, pasture lands, orchards and peaceful homes dotted here and there on the landscape. Here is the Brown Ranch, the home of that handsome stallion Meridian 2:12½, owned by Brown & Brandon, two of nature's noblemen, and most successful stock and dairymen. There are nearly four thousand acres of rolling and level land in the Brown Ranch, the larger portion of which can be cultivated by the plow, and is well watered by never failing springs. Marin county is known as the leading dairy county of the State, and Hick's Valley is one of its choicest sections. The hills and dales are covered with wild oats and native grasses so rich and abundant in the spring that the cattle cannot keep its growth down, and the warm suns of June cure it into hay as it stands, and cattle and horses thrive and fatten upon it during the summer months.

Messrs. Brown & Brandon are engaged principally in dairying and are milking about four hundred cows at the present time. A butter making plant was installed a year ago, and the squares labelled Hick's Valley Creamery meet such ready sale that the demand is always ahead of the supply. The cows are of mixed blood, but the Ayrshire is in favor and there are several pure blooded bulls and heifers of this breed on the farm, from which the stock will be much improved within a few years. At present the output is about a pound of butter to the cow each day, the drying of the pastures at this season causing a lessening in the flow of milk. The cows begin coming in about the 1st of September, and during the rainy months the creamery is run to its full capacity.

Recognizing the fact three years ago that good road horses were becoming scarce and that well bred stallions were needed to improve the stock in that section of Marin county, Messrs. Brown & Brandon purchased the stallion Meridian 2:12½ and placed him at the head of the horse department of their splendid domain. While none of Meridian's get are of racing age, the two year olds, yearlings and sucklings by him are the very best evidence that they chose wisely when selecting this son of Simmocolon. Meridian was a good race horse and won many hard fought battles during his career on the turf. He is now just ten years old. He has been in active stud duty but three years but has been largely patronized during that time. He is a very vigorous and prepotent stallion, his get bearing a very strong resemblance to him with almost unvarying uniformity. Last year he was mated with 64 mares and 57 foals resulted. This year he had served 61 mares up to the date of my visit to the farm, and three or four more were booked. Meridian was bred by J. D. Smith, of Livermore, California, and is by Simmocolon 2:13½, son of Simmons and Colon by Strathmore. His dam is Sidane by Sidney, second dam Addie S. by Steinway, so he has three crosses close up of the great Strathmore. His record was made at Chico in 1897, in a four heat race in which he won the last three heats in 2:13½, 2:12½ and 2:14. Next year a few of his three year olds will be worked and there is no doubt but he will be among the producing sires in the Year Book of that season.

My visit to the Brown Ranch was on Saturday last. Accepting the kind invitation of Capt. N. P. Batchelder, of this city, who was going up to look at his mare Corinne Neilson and a couple of her colts, to accompany him, we reached Petaluma about 9:30 A. M., and securing a rig at a livery stable made the trip to the farm in about an hour and a half. The road is an excellent one, the grade over the hills being gradual and easy and through a most delightful country rich in crops of wheat, barley, hay (just cut), dotted here and there with orchards and literally sprinkled with white chickens—for the country about Petaluma is the home of the White Leghorn and egg farms are numerous.

On the road we met Robert Brown driving a spanking team, one a six year old Gossiper gelding that may be out to the races next year. With his mate this horse was earning his oats by hauling to town several hundred pounds of the Hicks Valley Creamery butter and seemed to be feeling proud of his job, as well he might be. After entering a protest against not being notified of our coming so that he could have remained at home to entertain us, but saying that Brandon would show us around, Mr. Brown said he would see us in town on our return, and we drove on. We found Mr. Brandon driving one of two mowers that were at work cutting a crop of splendid oat hay. And herein lies the secret of the success of these two gentlemen. Both are practical farmers and stockmen and neither is afraid of work. They can do anything, from the general superintendence of a big farm to mounting a mustang and roping a wild steer, and do it right. Both are gentlemen of education and refinement, good entertainers and most genial companions. Mr. Brown is a director of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association and a very valuable member of the board. A man of calm and excellent judgment, he is one of the best men in the judges' stand I ever saw. The only fault I can find with this firm of Brown & Brandon is that they are both bachelors. Men like them should be raising families as well as cattle and horses.

The horse market is in a peculiar state here in California at the present time. Any horse that has size and fair looks, and is sound and broke to harness, will be bid on lively when put up at auction in this city as there is a big demand for horses that are fit to put at light or heavy work. Broodmares however, are slow sale, and while there has been more breeding done this season than for several years past, and the shortage of horses is recognized by everyone, few seem to want broodmares at any price. One reason is that good pasturage is becoming scarcer every year and the remark is heard at every sale: "I would bid on that mare, but I have no place to keep her." At the sale of Hon. Jesse D. Carr's horses on Thursday of this week, broodmares with stout handsome colts at their side by Boodle Jr., went for from $30 to $90 each. Some of these mares were old, it is true, from 14 to 16 years, but they are worth three or four times the sums paid for them. The very fact that the big pasture ranges are becoming few and far between is pretty good evidence that horse values as well as cattle and sheep values need not be expected to ever go much lower than they now are, no matter what contingency may arise. Country farmers should attend these city sales this year, and bid on well bred and likely looking mares and fillies that are offered. It is a speculation wherein they can't lose, at present prices.

The best of starters get rattled at times and incidents like the following, which is clipped from a Baltimore paper, occur every year:

"Starter Evans got rattled in the fourth heat of the 2:16 pace at Gentlemen's Driving Park to-day. He gave the word to go and rang the recall bell at the same time, and all the horses were stopped by their drivers excepting Evadne, whom Hentzelch drove around the track. Evans read the rules and declared Evadne the winner and all the others distanced. The bettors all but mobbed the starter."

This shows how necessary it is for a driver to know something about the rules. The driver of the mare Evadne was the only one in this race that was thoroughly alive to the situation in this case and did the proper thing, as he knew that the rules said there shall be no recall when once the word is given. It would be a very good thing for those who intend to campaign horses on the circuit this year to secure a copy of the rules and put in a few evenings before racing begins in perusing its pages. It is a good thing to know what to do at the proper time. The man who does, and acts upon his knowledge, will find it very advantageous.

When William Simpson, of New York, engaged W. J. Andrews to train his horses, at a salary of $5000 a year, Mr. Simpson thought he was paying well for the reputation which Mr. Andrews had previously achieved. Mr. Simpson changed his mind, however, when Mr. Andrews developed John R. Gentry into a world beater and showed the owner, in one year, on this horse alone, a profit of $25,000. Mr. Andrews also raced Bouncer, a filly which Mr. Simpson bred, with great success, winning with her the Transylvania race at Lexington, Ky. Very warm friendship thereafter existed, and still exists, between Mr. Simpson and Mr. Andrews, and as John R. Gentry 2:00½ and Bouncer 2:09 were the most successful racers Mr. Simpson ever campaigned, out of an ownership of 1000 horses, it was arranged last spring that Bouncer should be bred to Gentry. Mr. Simpson wrote Mr. Andrews last week that the produce was a very handsome, large bay colt, with an unusual parental speed inheritance, which averages below 2:05. The proud owner intends to enter this colt in every possible stake, and the man who raced the sire and dam so successfully is expected to be the driver.

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

Answers to Correspondents.

S. L. W., Bonanza, Oregon—A bets Bob Wade holds one-quarter mile record. B bets Jim Miller holds it. Which wins? How many horses ever ran a quarter of a mile in 21½ seconds?

Answer—Goodwin's Turf Guide, the authority in these matters, gives Bob Wade as the only horse that has run a quarter of a mile as fast as 21½ seconds.

R. G., City—Did the pacing horse Thomas Ryder 2:13½ ever win a race. A claims that he did but B says he did not. Please state which is correct.

Answer—A is right. Thomas Ryder won many races, and in his career was seldom outside the money. In 1893 alone he won seven races.

R. E. Alvarado.—1. Please give me the breeding of Echo Jr. by Haggin's Echo, owned by Gen. Frisby, of Redding, Cal. 2. What did the service fee use to be for the crack hound For Freedom? 3. I have a yearling colt who has lumps all over his neck and shoulders, caused by mosquitoes; he is always rubbing the hair off. Can you give any advice as to what to do to give him relief?

Answer.—1. Echo Jr. by Echo 462, dam Ila by Priam, son of Whipple's Hambletonian 725; second dam by Kentucky Hunter. 2. We do not know whether For Freedom ever stood for public service. Write to J. H. Rosseter, 900 Grand street, Alameda. 3. It is unlikely that mosquitoes are the cause of the trouble. If so, anything that will keep them off should effect a cure. Your colt's blood is probably out of order. Describe the case carefully and write to our veterinary department.

First District Fair May Be at Pleasanton.

There is a probability of the Golden Gate Fair Association, representing the first district, holding its fair and race meeting at Pleasanton this year and if so the directors will find that the result will be a better fair and race meeting than has been the rule in recent years when the fair was held at Oakland.

The idea, if Pleasanton is chosen as the place, will be to hold an old fashioned country fair with a pavilion full of exhibits, a big stock and cattle show, and a race program in which harness racing will be the main feature. This can be done at Pleasanton with the assurance that there will be plenty of entries in all departments. The Nevis pavilion will accommodate many exhibitors and be a very popular resort during the evenings. There are many fine cattle and horses that would be shown, and the celebrated Pleasanton track will certainly attract the best horses in the State to race over it if good purses are offered.

The greatest objection to Oakland as a place for holding the fair is the track, which is feared by harness horsemen, although it is one of the best running tracks in the country. It is a heavy track, raised in the centre like a county road and trotters and pacers find it difficult to show their best speed over it.

Pleasanton is a horse town and the people of that part of Alameda county all turn out to anything in the shape of a horse show or races. The district fair would draw a tremendous crowd without a doubt were the fair held there.

Vallejo Races on the Fourth.

The Golden Gate Park Driving Association will hold its Fourth of July races at Vallejo this year and has already arranged the following program:

2:40 class, purse $150—H. W. Miller, Princess Irene; V. J. Guinasso, Walter Wilkes; M. M. Donnelly, Kitty D.; J. G. Cuicello, Pedro; Dr. McLaughlin, Bondy C. 2:30 class, purse $150—G. L. Swett, Velma; F. Gomet, Verona; H. Shottler, Echora Wilkes; J. G. Cuicello, Bay Run; S. Sprague, Clara L.

2:20 class, purse $150—S. G. Cuicello, Gaff Topsail; M. M. Donnelly, Mack; J. O'Kane, Al Sandy; H. W. Miller, Lady Falrose; D. Mizner, Sable Le Grande.

Vallejo Road Race, purse $100—B. Best, Don Pedro; T. Smith, May Girl; J. Weir, Pansy W.; W. Devlin, Teddy; T. Ryan, Phallas; T. Burke, unknown.

Every arrangement for the accommodation of the public will be made by the club and a good day's sport is anticipated. The round trip to Vallejo from this city costs but one dollar by boat or train.

Valuable Horses Burned.

A dispatch from Portland, Oregon, dated June 25th, says: "Fire last night destroyed an entire block of frame buildings bounded by Seventh, Park, Glisan and Hoyt streets. Thirty-five horses belonging to the Wakefield-Morse Transfer Company were burned to death, among them three valuable pacers, Zombro C., Ana J. and Maymont. A number of people asleep in the Park Lodging House escaped with great difficulty. The total loss is about $35,000 and insurance $20,000." The colt Zombro C. was a very fast and promising son of Zombro 2:11, and won a race at the Driving Club's matinee the week previous. He pulled a buggy and a heavy driver a half-mile heat in 1:21. He had been worked but one month.

Notes and News.

The price paid for Alcy 2:13½ by C. W. Lasell is given out as $5000.

Frank Dale, Edwin Gaylord's good colt by Charles Derby, won at Denver last Saturday. Best time 2:23½.

Remember that Woodland, Los Angeles, Ventura, Salinas and Santa Barbara entries close on Tuesday next, July 1st.

The Kings County Fair Association has changed the date of opening its meeting from September 15th to September 22d.

A green pacer in training for the races this year paced a quarter over the Sacramento track one day last week in 29 seconds.

Woodland's entry list will close on Tuesday next. Don't forget that Woodland's meeting is always one of the best on the circuit.

Neva Simmons' (2:11½) best mile to date in her work this season is 2:17. She is strong and sound and bids fair to be a great winner again.

The running events at the county fairs in California will be hard to fill this year and nearly all the thoroughbreds are out of the State.

Monkey 2:27½ by Adirondack is the first horse in Oregon to go inside the list this year. He made his record in the matinee race at Irvington track last Saturday.

Golden Gate Fair, District No. 1, may be held at Pleasanton this year. It is a safe bet right now that it will be one of the best attended meetings held on the circuit.

In the list of entries to the $5000 McDowell Stake for trotters of the 2:10 class, to be decided at Lexington this year, appears the name of John A. McKerron by Nutwood Wilkes.

The Windsor meeting, which always precedes the Detroit meeting, will open on July 7th this year. Many of the horses that are entered at Detroit will start at Windsor.

Dr. Ira B. Dalziel, the well known and popular veterinary dentist, and proprietor of The California Horseman, will be the Grand Marshal of the 4th of July procession in this city.

Dolly Bidwell 2:09½, the winner of the $10,000 trot at Providence, R. I., last year, will be retired from the turf after this season, as she will be bred to Bingen 2:06½ before she begins her campaign.

The American Sportsman, published at Cleveland says: "Sir Albert S. 2:08½, the fast California pacer, has not been asked to do much during the past three weeks, as he has not been just himself."

The free-for-all pace will have two active performers to dispute with Anaconda and Prince Alert this season. Coney 2:02, who is now in Ed. Lockwood's stable at Poughkeepsie, and Searchlight, at Charter Oak Park.

A report comes from Granite State Park, Dover, that Thomas W. Lawson's M. & M. Stake candidate Juntorio, one of his recent purchases, is quite sick and it is possible she may not come to the wire this season.

It is said that A. H. Miller of Buffalo has made a third offer for the sensational filly Zephyr. The first was $15,000, the second $17,500, the third and last $20,000—all declined with thanks by her owner, J. C. McKinney.

The highest price of the Carr sale was $270 for a two year old filly by Nutwood Wilkes, absolutely green and just out of pasture. The buyer was offered $300 for the filly three minutes after she was knocked down to him, but declined the offer.

Millard Sanders worked the pacer B. S. Dillon 2:25, a mile in 2:12 at the Glenville track on Tuesday of last week. B. S. Dillon will probably be a starter in the Chamber of Commerce Stake as an application has been made for him for a nomination in that $5000 event.

"Where's that trotter your boss was drilling so hard last month?" asked one swipe of another at the track. "Out on the firing line," answered the man who had seen service in the Philippines.

Boswell Jr., foaled 1883, bred at Honolulu by the late Harry Agnew, brought to this State and again returned to the Islands, won a race at Honolulu on the 14th of this month, the two heats being in 2:34½ and 2:39.

San Jose will be a good place to spend the 4th of July this year. There will be several good races at the San Jose track and a line can be had on some of the green trotters and pacers that will race through the California Circuit.

There are many parties looking for carriage and road teams at the present time, and quite a number that have teams for sale. There is quite a difference, however, in the opinions of buyers and sellers as to values, and few sales are being made.

Earl King, an unbroken two year old colt by Stamboul 2:07½ from Gypsy Earl 2:19½ by Earl 2:25, was sold for $1000 a few days ago at E. H. Harriman's Arden Farms, in Orange county. The buyer was a Wall street banker, who will, it is said, send the young trotter to Europe.

Mr. William Hendrickson, the well known veteran horseman, has purchased from Henry Schlosser, the stallion Clay S. 2:13½. This horse has been in the stud at Petaluma for the past two years and the yearlings and sucklings by him are very much admired. Clay S. did quite a heavy business in the stud this year.

At the farm of J. C. Linneman, Lima, Ohio, is one of the highest bred fillies in the world. She is by Norval, dam by Wilkes Boy; second dam by Baron Wilkes, third dam by Nutwood, fourth dam by Strathmore, fifth dam by Woodford's Mambrino and sixth by Abdallah 15.

Dora Doe 2:12½ is going like a winner this year. One day last week Mose Hart worked her a slow mile but let her step fast in the last half which was in 1:04. The four eighths of this half were as follows: 16, 16½, 14½ and 17, thus making the first quarter in 32½ and the last in 31½. She drew a 55-pound Toomey cart in this workout.

C. W. Anthony, of Galesburg, Ill., is the owner of a uniquely bred filly just foaled. The sire is Lindau by Allerton 2:09½, dam Hindes by Allerton; second dam Elloree 2:08½ by Axtell 2:12. The dam of the filly is Madeline Allertell by Allertell 2:18½, son of Allerton, and Ekhoen by Axtell. The youngster is inbred to Allerton three times and to Axtell twice.

Dr. J. Hammond, of Byron, Cal, who owns the mare Blue Bells by San Diego, has a yearling colt from her by Altamont 2:26½ that is a beauty; a suckling one week old by Welcome 2:10½ that is one of the best looking youngsters foaled in Contra Costa county this year, and thinks he will now send the mare to Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½. With a good mare that is a regular breeder one can soon have a lot of well bred ones and Doctor Hammond is on the right track.

At the opening matinee of the Hartford Driving Club held June 20th, one hundred and twenty-five rigs were in line and in all but two instances the horses were hitched to pneumatic tired vehicles. Secretary Gocher's old whirlwind Guy 2:09½ was driven to the old high wheeled sulky that the horse Thomas Jefferson 2:23 drew in his races thirty-five years ago. For the pleasure of the large crowd present the pacer, Searchlight 2:03½, was worked a few heats between the races, finishing one in 2:09½, the last half in 1:04, and seemed to be going easy.

Charles Thompson, of the Stanford Stock Farm, was severely injured last Wednesday afternoon at the Palo Alto station. He was unloading a carload of horses, when the train whistle suddenly blew, frightening the animals. In his attempt to stop a stampede he was kicked and knocked down. His right arm was shattered at the elbow and his chest injured. He was carried unconscious to the office of Dr. Moss, where he revived in half an hour and was able to sit up and speak. Although now 70 years of age he will probably recover. He has been one of the head men on the farm for many years.

Sir Albert S. 2:08½ will make the first start of his Eastern campaign at Buffalo on Monday, August 4th, the first day of the Buffalo meeting. He is entered there in the 2:08 pace, a $2000 stake. The other entries in this race are Capt. Brino, Fred S. Wedgewood, Direct Hal, Don Riley, Twinkle, Kanawha Star, The Private, Capt. Sphinx, The Admiral, Dan R., Martha Marshall, New Richmond, Council Chimes, Star Hal, Pauline G., The Bishop, Chestnut, Amokin, Sphinx S., Vice Regal and Terrace Queen. Millard Sanders writes that Sir Albert S. is in good shape and expects to make a good showing with him.

Many good trotting bred stallions continue to be exported. The stallion B. B. P. 2:09½, by Pilot Medium, has been bought for export to Germany and is now on his way across the Atlantic. The son of Pilot Medium took his first record as a three year old when he was one of the sensations of the year. At Chicago that season he beat such crack trotters as Expressive, Onoqua, Baron Dillon and Billy Parks, and at Terre Haute he won over a field of ten, including Bouncer, Cut Glass, Queen Allab, Baron Dillon, Silurian and Norvin G. His three year old record was 2:13½, which he reduced as a four year old to 2:09½. After his four year old campaign he seemed to go back in form and although he was trained he never became prominent again. At one time he was converted to the pace, but at that gait he was not a success. He is a well-bred horse, still young, and in Germany should be popular in the stud.

The pacers that are entered in the same races where Ed Geer's green horse, Direct Hal, is named, had better look "a leedle out." Report comes from Cleveland that the son of Direct worked a mile in 2:08½, last half in 1:03½ on Thursday morning of last week. This is the fastest mile made this year at the Glenville track and shows that the overdue horse is a good one. Geers has kept Direct Hal back for two years, but "everything comes to him who waits."

In the centre of a field at Waverhill, Suffolk, England, is a large flat stone covering the grave of a mare which died in 1852, inscribed as follows: "Polka. She never made a false step. Ecclesiastes, 3, 10th verse." A reference to chapter and verse shows the following: "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth the other." This is probably the only instance of a text from the Scriptures appearing on a memorial stone to an animal.

A race follower cautions the public to look out for Mabel Onward. He says he saw her make Dan Patch do his level best at the finish of a workout mile on the Empire City track. She has been withdrawn from the Billings matinee stable in order to start in the Grand Circuit. She won her two starts last fall at Memphis, the first in 2:12 and 2:11½, and the next in 2:12½, 2:10½, both to wagon. She was got by Shadeland Onward 2:18½, and is a sister of Phoebe Onward 2:12½, their dam being Sentinel Belle by Grand Sentinel. Shadeland Onward is one of the very best sons of Onward. His dam, Nettie Time, produced the great race horse Temple Bar 2:17½.

Gold Standard 2:16½ by Marshmurdock, a fast pacer in the stable of Frank Loomis, fell dead at the Colorado Springs racetrack during the meeting. Standard had been started in the 2:25 pace, taking the first heat in 2:17½. In the second heat he finished second and in the third heat dropped back to third. He was distanced in the fourth heat, developing symptoms of keen distress. Hurried to his stable, he expired before anything could be done to relieve his pain. The trouble was gastritis. Gold Standard took a mark of 2:16½ at the Pueblo meeting of last week, where he had won handily. In all his racing he is said to have never finished behind the money and to have usually won. He belonged to J. Parrott, of Chicago.

It is rumored that Judge William H. Moore, of Chicago, will go into the show ring next fall with a stable of harness horses rivaling the best in the country. He owns a park four-in-hand team that cost $27,900 and a road four of Russian Orloffs for which he paid $11,800. The Russians are all grays, mottled like leopards, and they make one of the most attractive fours imaginable. It is said they can trot a 2:40 clip before a coach. Judge Moore's park four is made up of the noted trotters Doctor Pitzer 2:12½ and Billy Finch in the wheel, with Drummer Boy and Bugler in the lead. The wheelers represent an investment of more than $15,000, Judge Moore having paid $9000 for Pitzer at private sale and $6900 for Billy Finch at auction.

The owner of Lord Derby 2:06½ is said to have delivered himself as follows recently: "I have confidence in Lord Derby and he will defeat Boralma in the race at Hartford, August 2d. I am also quite confident that the New York Driving Club will win the Boston Challenge Cup in Cleveland the first week in September. The New York Driving Club will enter Lord Derby, Chain Shot and The Monk. C. K. G. Billings will also have an entry. I will drive Lord Derby in the cup race. I have just had completed for the race the lightest wagon ever built. Complete it weighs only 41 pounds. The builder wouldn't even paint it, as that would add to its weight. We hope to take the cup to New York this season, although Boston has a very good show, as I understand that Boralma will start in the cup race."

Mr. Lawson, has been compelled, much against his will, to close the gates of Dreamworld against the public. People were flocking there in such numbers as to seriously interfere with the work of the employees. No less than 172 people went down to the farm by train one morning last week. Persons having business at the farm, or breeders, will be admitted on applying at the office at the main station gate. This is what Mr. Lawson has to say regarding the step that he has been forced to take: "I deeply regret being compelled to take this action, as I would like to have every one to see Dreamworld, its stock and its methods, but I have no choice, as the unprecedented numbers of those who wish to see the farm make it impossible for any number of employees to take care of those things that are absolutely necessary in the running of the farm, and at the same time do justice to visitors. I believe if I do not at once shut down I will be compelled actually to abandon the project."—American Horse Breeder.

The brown stallion Kinney Lou by McKinney 2:11½, in the stable of Budd Doble, is considered by good judges to be about the slickest green trotter in training at the Indianapolis track. Doble has been going very slow with him since his arrival here, and the "stop watch" crowd hasn't had a chance to see him trot any fast miles yet, but Mr. Doble has stepped him through the stretch two or three times at a 2:04 gait, and as he trotted a mile in 2:16 this spring before he left California, it is possible that he has the material for another champion. On breeding alone this son of McKinney should be one of the gamest of the fast ones, as his dam is old Mary Lou 2:17, the chestnut mare by Tom Benton that the late John McCord of Sacramento used to campaign along with that all-day trotter and own brother, Shyleck 2:16½. There was another fast and game brother, the pacer Ned Winslow 2:12½. They were all out of Brown Jenny by David Hill Jr. 17139, the next dam Old Brown Jenny by Black Hawk 768.—Western Horseman.

At the State Fair Track.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 18, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: A few words as to how the horses of the capital city are doing. In the first place, speaking of the track, Mr. Martin, the lessee, is doing all he can to please his patrons and they speak of him in very complimentary terms. The track is not as fast as some of the tracks of the State but at the present time is in very good condition and the parties working over it are satisfied.

In looking over the different stables we will start with the string of that very reliable trainer, Mr. S. C. Tryon. In his string is the Electioneer stallion, Azmoor, he has served forty-seven mares this year to date and is good for three or four more, he is looking good and strong and we look for some of his colts to be among the fastest in the State. Then comes Polka Dot by Mendocino, dam Maud Merrill by Antevolo. She is looking strong and doing well. The best work Mr. Tryon has done with her is a mile in 2:22, a quarter in 32½. Without a doubt this young, promising mare will prove herself very fast.

A young mare by Sable Wilkes, the property of Supervisor T. C. Snyder of Yolo, has as yet had no work to speak of. She has worked a mile in 2:36, a quarter in 35 seconds, she has a very pleasant way of going, and is as square a trotter as ever stepped on iron. Her dam is by Harold, and her breeding and performance mark her as a promising mare.

Next is one of the most promising fillies in California, two years old, by Stickle (alias Jumbo) by Silver Bow. The dam of this promising young mare is by Col. K. R. She can show a 2:30 clip and can do it as handily as any one could wish.

Then comes a pacing mare, by a son of Falrose 2:19, the property of Mr. Jasper of Wheatland. She stepped a mile yesterday in 2:22½, the half in 1:08, and has a good way of going. Mr. Tryon looks to see her go a good mile by Fall.

A bay gelding owned by Lester R. Nichols of Vallejo has proved a surprise and has developed phenomenal speed. He stands 16½ hands high, is six years old, by Tom Benton, dam Superba by James Madison. He worked a third heat last Wednesday very handily in 2:17, the track that day not being particularly fast. He went the first quarter in 36½ seconds, finishing the mile in 2:17, the last half in 1:06. He goes without boots of any kind and any person can drive him.

The trotting mare, Swift Bird by Waldstein, dam by Poscora Hayward, in this string, has not had much work but can show very fast. Mr. Tryon looks for this mare to get a mark of 2:17 or 2:18 by Fall.

Then comes a bay gelding, six years old, by Knight, dam by Alaska, second dam the dam of Flying Jib. He is the property of Wm. Lambert and was purchased at the last Rancho Del Paso sale and has only been at the track about ten days. In his work yesterday he showed a great deal of speed and is very promising.

A bay gelding by Bay Bird is the property of Gen. A. W. Barrett of Los Angeles, and was purchased at the last Rancho Del Paso sale. He has not worked much as yet, but has a nice way of going.

Mr. Tryon also has another bay gelding, the property of Gen. Barrett. This colt was sired by Algona, dam by Alaska, second dam the dam of Flying Jib, making him in blood lines a brother to Flying Jib. He is a pacer, moves very easily and can show a 2:40 gait to a cart.

The next is a brown mare by Dexter Prince, the property of Geo. Shoyler, of Colusa. She has recently worked a mile in 2:29½ and is expected to get a mark of 2:20 or better this fall.

Mr. Bigelow, of Woodland, has a string of four at the Sacramento track, which he brought over about ten days ago. They are as follows:

A two year old filly by Alex. Button, dam by Del Rey. She is a pacer and the property of O. A. Lowe, of Woodland. She is a very promising young filly, but will not start in the races this year.

A three year old by Dictatus, the property of Jas. Marshall, of Dixon. She is a pacer, dam by Waldstein. She stepped a half in 1:10 recently, with about four weeks' work, and did it in such a way as pleased Mr. Bigelow very much.

El Primero by Diablo, a four year old out of Lucy B. 2:17½ by Alex. Button, has been worked but a short time, but has shown a good burst of speed.

Gertie A., a four year old filly by Diablo, dam by Sidney, has a nice way of going; paced a mile last Saturday in 2:19, last half in 1:06.

Mr. Sam Hoy's string is composed of eight head. Mr. Hoy heads the list this spring with the old campaigner Kelly Briggs, who worked a mile here the other day in 2:15½, the last half in 1:05½ without an effort, and looks as if he is a stronger and better horse than ever.

Margaretta, recently sold by Mr. J. E. Terry, has a mark of 2:12½. While 2:17½ is the fastest mile she has been at Sacramento, with a half in 1:06½, she is looking well and doing her work handily.

Rita H., a green pacing mare by McKinney, dam Brilliantine, has done but little work, but has shown considerable speed.

The stallion Demonio, a full brother to Diablo 2:09½, is also in Mr. Hoy's string. He is the property of Mr. Ben Rush, of Suisun. In conformation he looks a better horse than he ever was. Mr. Hoy expects to give him a good mark before the season is over.

A black colt by Ora Wilkes out of a dam by Belmont, although a green horse without a record, has shown good work and is very promising.

A three year old filly by Demonio out of a mare by Nutwood Wilkes is also in Mr. Hoy's string and he thinks one of the best prospects he ever handled.

A four year old green pacing horse by Falrose, dam by Stirling, worked a mile to-day without an effort in 2:24½, going the last half in 1:06½.

Mr. Hoy also has a green mare which he is training for the district road races of Yolo county.

Walter Mastin brought his string of six over from Woodland about ten days ago. Any one of them can go a mile better than 2:20. The animals of this good string are as follows:

The best of the lot at present is John A. 2:12½ by Wayland W., dam Lady Moor by the Grand Moor, which makes him very strong in breeding and one which can be looked to for speed until the race is over. He is dark seal brown in color, stands 16½ hands in height and weighs about 1200 pounds. For breeding, as well as speed, he should be considered as one of the great stock horses of the State. John A. made a record two years ago at Woodland in the third heat of 2:12½. This horse to-day is in the pink of condition and going strong and straight. He paced a mile, before leaving Woodland, in 2:12½. Mr. Mastin let him step the last half last Saturday at this track, which was a trifle slow that day, and for all that, he did the half in 1:04, the last quarter in 30 seconds flat. You can look for this horse to be one of the coming horses of the State, barring accidents.

The next best thing in this string is Penrose by Falrose, dam by Brigadier. He is now five years old. He got a mark last year at the State Fair of 2:21½ in the fourth heat. He won the race there very handily. Mr. Mastin looks for this horse to go a mile in 2:10 or better before the season is over.

Third in the string is Mayme H. by Falrose, being a full sister to Penrose and a four-year-old. In her work at Woodland she stepped a quarter in 31 seconds, the last eighth in 14½. Mr. Mastin thinks she is the best prospect in his string. She is a fine large mare, bright bay in color, and is moving strong and straight.

Fourth is Tuberoze by Falrose, dam Mischief 2:22 by Brown Jug. This one is a square trotter, and worked a mile at Woodland about two weeks ago in 2:22, last half in 1:09, the last quarter in 33 seconds, finishing strong. He has every prospect of being a great horse before the year is over.

Fifth is Dixon Maid, a beautiful, big mare by Falrose, a square trotter, perfectly green, and in only seven weeks' work stepped a mile in 2:19½ at the Woodland track about ten days ago. This mare's first dam is Tempest, her second dam was a draft mare (a full-bred Clyde). Mr. Mastin says she is one of the gamest mares he ever handled, and looks for her to trot a very fast mile before the races are over.

The breeding of this string of horses speaks volumes for Mr. Mastin's fine stallion Falrose.

Sixth is a green pacer sired by Alex. Button, the property of A. B. Rodman of Wheatland, and with very little work moved a mile in 2:21 at the Woodland track about eight days ago. He is a good looker and a very fine prospect.

Hi Hogoboom has five in his string at present. Among this lot is one of the best three-year old pacing colts in the State, the property of Bart Cavanaugh. This fellow has not been named as yet, but his breeding is as good as any one could ask for. He is by Gossiper, dam by Almont Patchen. Stands about 15.3 and weighs about 1000 pounds. In conformation is about perfect and one of the handsomest colts in the State, bright bay in color. This fellow has stepped a half mile recently in 1:07½. Hi worked him the other day the home quarter in 31½ seconds. He is not being prepared for races this year, but just working him along good and easy; but next year, Mr. Hogoboom says, they will have to attend to their knitting when they beat this fellow out. Mr. Cavanaugh refused $1200 for this colt recently.

The next is a seven-year-old horse belonging to James Faris Jr. He is by George Dexter, dam by Monroe Chief. This is a trotter and has worked a mile in 2:25, and as good a looker as one wants to see.

He has three pacers in his string, two by Diawood and one by Lynmont. All of these youngsters are showing well, and Mr. Hogoboom speaks of them as a very promising lot of young horses that will be hard to beat next year.

McKinney's New Owner.

The Western Horseman, published at Indianapolis, Indiana, in its issue of June 20th, published a long article on the purchase of McKinney 2:11½ by Henry B. Gentry, from which we abstract the following: "On Monday of this week there was consummated a trotting stallion and harness speed sire deal the importance of which to the trotting horse interest of the great central West has not been approached since the sensational purchase of the great Axtell (3) 2:12, nearly a dozen years ago. Several months ago Mr. Henry B. Gentry of Bloomington, Ind., famous the country over as the head of the firm of Gentry Bros., owners of the Gentry Bros.' great chain of trained animal shows, the delight of the women and children of the land, who owns a couple of very fine stock farms at Bloomington, made up his mind to go into the trotting horse breeding business, and at the same time determined to possess himself of as good a trotting stallion and speed sire as could be found in the land. Dr. P. O'Rear suggested McKinney as the sire coming up to Mr. Gentry's high requirements, in which opinion the editor of The Western Horseman, when confided in on the subject, fully agreed. It was suggested to Mr. Gentry that 'McKinney would cost a lot of money, he being in a class by himself as a sire,' to which Mr. Gentry made reply: 'I am yet a young man and in easy circumstances financially, but I am both too old and too poor to invest in other than the best, and if McKinney is the best sire in sight, he is the stallion I want.' Not until Budd Doble located here, a few weeks ago, fresh from California, and intimately acquainted with both McKinney and his owner, Mr. Charles A. Durfee of San Jose, Cal., was a way found for opening negotiations for McKinney on the plan that promised his purchase at his actual value, and it was through Mr. Doble that the deal was closed on Monday. After the deal was closed we asked Mr. Gentry what we should say about the purchase price, and, with his characteristic frankness, he replied: 'Tell the truth, of course. In this instance my business is the public's business.' The price paid was just $25,000, no more, no less, and Mr. Durfee is to have the use of the stallion till August 1st, when he will be brought to his new home, the Gentry Stock Farm, Bloomington."

Hambletonian Blood at Arrowhead.

In an article by an Eastern writer which appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of two weeks since, reference was made to the fact that Boralma 2:07, Mr. Lawson's great trotter, has seven crosses of the blood of Hambletonian 10, and while this doubling of the blood of the Hero of Chester is not only popular with horse breeders but is producing great results, there are comparatively few horses that trace to him through as many different lines as does Boralma.

Down at Mr. M. S. Severance's Arrowhead Stock Farm in Los Angeles county, there are several fillies and colts that are so rich in the blood of Hambletonian 10, that their breeding is remarkable, two of the fillies having no less than nine crosses to William Rysdyk's great horse.

One is a filly by Derby Heir, son of Chas. Derby 2:20 and Bet Madison 2:15½. The filly's dam is the famous mare La Belle (2) 2:16 that is by Sidney 2:19½, out of Anna Belle 2:27 by Dawn 2:18½, son of Nutwood 2:18½. The other is also a filly and is by Direct Heir, son of Direct 2:05½ and Bet Madison. The dam of this filly is Rose Drop, a mare by Sidney out of Oak Grove Belle by Arthurton.

There is another filly at Arrowhead that has seven crosses of Hambletonian and a colt that has six crosses. The filly is by Direct Heir out of Irene Benefit by Benefit, and the colt is by Derby Heir out of Bonnie Director, a mare by Director out of Regina 2:18 by Electioneer.

If this colt by Derby Heir, having six crosses of Hambletonian 10 blood is mated with the filly out of Rose Drop when they reach a suitable age, the resultant foal will have fifteen crosses of the blood of the famous horse that is really the founder of that great family of horses, the American trotter.

Fresno Driving Club.

There is life in the newly organized driving club at Fresno, and on Saturday, July 12th, the first matinee will be held. It is proposed to hold regular matinees thereafter on the second Saturday of each month. The club has seventy members already, all of whom are regular road drivers and enthusiastic over the outlook for some first class sport in the friendly contests that are to make up the matinee programs.

Secretary Hudson has already sent out the entry blanks to members and expects a large entry list. The speed committee will classify the horses according to their speed as near as possible and not according to records.

The Stockton Program.

There is no more progressive organization than the Stockton Driving Club, and it has done much to attract the attention of visitors to the Gas City. It is composed of enterprising and energetic young men who recognize the fact that nothing can be accomplished without work, and they pull their coats every year and enter upon the project of holding a fair as though it were a business proposition.

The splendid program for this year's meeting has been prepared. It will consist of ten events for harness horses, equally divided between trotters and pacers.

For the trotters there are five rich stakes, the leading one of which is $1000 for trotters of the 2:24 class, and has been called the Chamber of Commerce stake. The other trotting events are $500 each, for the 2:40, 2:30, 2:19 and 2:14 class horses.

For the pacers the Gas City stake is $1000 for 2:20 class horses, and the others are $500 each for the green class, the 2:25, 2:15 and 2:12 classes.

Never has the Stockton track been in better condition than at the present time. It is safe and fast, and will be kept in first-class order during the summer. The meeting will be held during the week immediately after the State Fair at Sacramento. Entries will close August 1st.

A Great Field of 2:10 Trotters.

The McDowell Stake of $6000, offered by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association, has received thirty-two entries, probably the greatest number of trotters ever named in a class that fast. The names and records of the horses are as follows:

Walter Keim 2:11½, Antezella 2:10½, Fereno 2:10½, Ozenam 2:11½, Sister Alice 2:10½, Lady Thisbe 2:11½, Anzella 2:10½, Col. Cochran 2:10½, Wauban 2:11½, George Anna 2:09½, Lady Geraldine 2:11½, Early Reaper 2:09½, Dolly Bidwell 2:09½, Mabel Glen 2:11, Hawthorne 2:13, Metallas 2:11, Susie J. 2:10½, Miss Sligo 2:10½, Idolita 2:12, Neva Simmons 2:11½, Leola 2:11½, Improvidence 2:12, Glory 2:11½, Poindexter 2:11½, John A. McKerron 2:10.

This stake was first given in 1896, and was won that year by Baron Rogers, the best heat being in 2:13½. The following year Pilot Boy was the winner, 2:10 being the fastest mile in the race. In 1898, The Abbot captured first money and the record for the race dropped to 2:08 in the second heat. In 1899 Myron McHenry drove Bonatella to three winning heats after Peter the Great and Tommy Britton had each taken a heat. In 1900 York Boy won, with the California mare Neeretta in second place, and the fastest heat of the race was 2:10½. Last year Millard Sanders took first money in the race with Dolly Dillon 2:07, winning in three straight heats, the time being 2:10½, 2:10½ and 2:10½. The California mare beat Onward Silver, Toggles, Lita W. and Miss Sligo on this occasion.

That 32 entries can be secured to a 2:10 class trot is remarkable, and shows what an advancement has been made in extreme speed during the past year. Last season there were but fourteen entries to this race.

Leander R. Peck, of Providence, is now the owner of the three year old Medio by Mendocino, purchased at the Cleveland sale by James Golden.

Dash Racing Would Mean Early Racing.

[The Horseman]

If dash races were in vogue on the trotting turf, the season, which is barely opening, and which will not commence in good earnest until the opening of the Grand Circuit at Detroit on July 14, would now be at its height. Trainers are naturally loathe to enter their horses in harness races at this time of the year for fear of getting into a long drawn out race which might result in putting their horses out of condition for the rest of the season. A series of early meetings could be given on the dash system for trotters and pacers, commencing early in May, and the horses would experience no bad results from such early racing. No real lover of the American trotting horse will believe that this animal possesses less endurance or stamina than the thoroughbred. The latter have no advantage of climate in preparation for their early work, although it is undeniable that a runner can be galloped in the mud, but in training this excuse would not hold good, for neither the trotter nor runner would be put on edge in this kind of going. No one contends that the early races do any great damage to the thoroughbred, and the trainers of light harness horses would have a chance to secure much early money if the races were conducted on the dash system, or even on the two in three.

It would be a distinct advantage to the trotter to commence his racing season early in the year. As it is now, it leaves about three months for the best horses to race for the money. Reports have been quite frequent this year of fast trials, and if the system of racing would allow it, these fast trials could as well be made in public races, where there would be a money reward for the show of speed. As it is now, these fast trials are merely for the satisfaction of the owner and trainer, when they would well be turned to public account. It is an undeniable fact that the public is more anxious for the early racing than is ordinarily the case later in the season. It is the man on the market first with his goods that gets the money, and the same would hold true in harness racing. A number of years ago the racing season in the Northern States commenced as early as the middle or latter part of May, but the system of long drawn out races resulted in so many cripples that it was found advisable to delay the starting of the horse until later in the season. It was the old three in five system that worked to the disadvantage of the horse, and if the races would be conducted on a more liberal basis, with fewer heats and quicker action, there would be no reason why the trotting season should not commence in good earnest by the first of June all over the country.

Professional Jealousy.

Professional jealousy among trainers of harness horses is one of the most contemptible faults among horsemen that can possibly be named. The trainers who are always running down their contemporary's charges, or who even haven't a good word to say for them, are altogether too numerous. When one considers the situation the conditions only make the position of the trainer so offending most ludicrous. A case in point: Only last year a trainer who was calling a certain horse in a fellow reinsman's stable "a duffer of the first water," the very next day had to play second fiddle to the same horse and trainer in a race. The lesson is obvious. The good horses are not all in one stable, and the good trainers are numerous enough to prevent any one man from arrogating to himself the distinction of claiming (by inference) to be "the only great I Am." Moreover, it invariably follows, from my observation at least, that the bombastic, all-important trainer is the one who invariably lives off the owner rather than from the purses which he wins, a detriment to the sport, handicapping the laudable efforts of enthusiastic owners, and an all-around nuisance that should be treated with the contempt his conduct merits.—Palmer Clark.

Coney and Giles Noyes Change Owners.

Messrs. Valentine and Eddie Lockwood, who purchased Coney 2:02 some two weeks ago from H. T. Dykeman of White Plains, N. Y., sold the black whirlwind on Thursday last to A. C. Fiske of New York. While the price was not given out it is known that Mr. Fiske paid Valentine and Lockwood quite a neat profit. Coney was shipped back to the Empire track from Poughkeepsie on Friday and joined the stable of Bob Davis, who trains Mr. Fiske's horses. Mr. Fiske sold during the week to W. J. Clark of New York the pacing gelding Giles Noyes 2:05½ for speedway purposes.

A Few Points to the Amateur Exhibitor in the Show Ring.

[BY AUREL BATON.]

The first advice I would give to anyone is, don't get smitten on your horse, because if you do and you get left, you will feel it badly. You must like your horse and appreciate him, but don't fall in love with him too much. It is as bad to get too much affection for your horse, as to get too much attached to a woman—a little does very nicely; too much makes it annoying for both.

If you care too much for your horse you will spoil and ruin him. You must have a limit how far to go. If you care too much for him, you will not see his faults and mistakes, and so will not be able to correct them. If you care too much for him, you will not stand defeat. Keep a cool eye and a half cool heart, otherwise you will never succeed in the ring. After the show is over pet and caress your horse as much as you like. It will do him good, but don't do it too much before entering the ring. I don't mean to say be rough with a horse, as I, for myself, hate to see one punished. The quieter you are to a horse the better he will behave. The rougher you are the more unpleasant he will be.

After once you have selected the horse you intend showing, say, for instance, in a harness class, purchase a suitable vehicle and harness, and if possible have it made to order to suit the horse—to fit him comfortably. A ready made pair of shoes might fit you, but undoubtedly they will not fit as well as though they had been carefully made to order. Purchase your vehicles and harness after buying your horse. Then you know what you are at. Do not buy them before purchasing your horse. One bit of advice I would give is, to have everything in symmetry—horse, trap and harness, and if you need any livery have that also in keeping with the turnout.

Don't bit your horses too sharp, and don't shoe them too heavy, unless they absolutely need it. Shoeing and biting are the two most important and essential factors in the show ring. When you purchase a horse, get his feet and his mouth in shape first of all; then see that his neck will be in shape. Look at your horse's teeth and see whether they are in good condition.

Do not overwork your horses before showing them, and then again don't keep them too fresh so as to show ill manners, but always go after a happy medium. You will find it will be more satisfactory.

Do not abuse your horses before entering the show ring, as music, spectators, etc., will naturally excite them. Many an abused horse becomes an excited and nervous roarer in the show ring, though absolutely sound as to wind.

Do not rush your horses too much, and then again do not let them fall asleep. Don't crowd other exhibitors in the show ring, and vice versa. Assist, as a good sportsman, other exhibitors. If another horse is more speedy than yours, there is no harm done in letting him pass you, or doing the opposite if pace should count in the class.

In one word, keep your eyes open, your hands and heart cool, and you will be satisfied with yourself when leaving the ring, whether with or without a ribbon.—Rider and Driver.

Origin of the Term "Jimtown."

Almost every horseman knows what is meant when a horse makes a "Jimtown" break, but few have any idea of the origin of the expression. Way back in the early '60's Mr. Dan D. Moore, of Xenia, Ohio, had a sorrel pacing horse called Coon that used to be trained at the Jimtown track, a short distance from Xenia. This horse had a habit, either natural or the result of a trick taught him by his driver, of making a jump into the air when being passed by another horse, and a single shifting of the bit or at most a see-saw, would land him on a square pace. The distance he would gain by the single jump was such that Balhard would not care to state, for fear it would discredit the story. At all events, the Coon's habit of breaking got to be styled "Jimtowns," after the track where he was trained, and gradually the term was applied to other horses exhibiting the same peculiarity. There may be other versions of how the term came to be applied, but this one has the benefit of age and plausibility.

Do you want to know just how fast your horse can go either in his preparatory work, or on the road, or in his race? If you want a timer, stop and split second, either a timer simple or a timer and watch combined and one that is guaranteed to be perfectly accurate call on A. Hirschman, 10 Post street, (Masonic Temple) this city. He has the greatest variety and sells them with an assurance of their accuracy. We know Mr. Hirschman to be in every way safe and reliable and cheerfully commend his goods to our readers.

GREEN'S RUFUS	The Baywood Stud, San Mateo
SIR GIBBIE 2d.	James McDonnell, Portola, San Mateo C

CALIFORNIA HORSES will be pretty well represented on the Eastern trotting tracks this season, but very few California owners will race strings on the Grand or other circuits across the mountains. Santa Rosa Stock Farm has a string of good ones in the hands of that excellent trainer, Millard Sanders, who also has the three year old colt Bavard, by Directum, owned by Judge W. E. Greene of Oakland. Orrin Hickok has Clipper 2:06 and Thornway belonging to Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick of San Francisco. These two strings comprise the entire California contingent that will race down the big line beginning at Detroit, July 14th and winding up at Lexington in October. Among those who made entries, but found at the last moment that their horses were on account of sickness or accident not up to Grand Circuit form, are C. E. Clark of Fresno. W. G. Durfee of Los Angeles and Juan Galeagos of Mission San Jose. Mr. C. L. Griffith, owing to the death of his brother, sent his entire string of horses in training to the Blue Ribbon sale at Cleveland where they were disposed of with their engagements and if campaigned they will be raced in the names of their new owners. While Californians will not be very numerous therefore in the lists of those owning starters in the big Eastern events this year, horses bred in this State will figure quite conspicuously, and its reputation as a producer of fast harness horses will be kept up. There is hardly an event scheduled for any of the Grand Circuit meetings but has one or more California bred horses entered therein, many of them coming from that famous nursery of champions, Palo Alto Stock Farm. It may not be a California year over East this season, but there are horses there that will keep the State's name before the public in a prominent and commendable manner.

DASH RACING is again being advocated by many editors and turf writers through the columns of the journals devoted to harness horse affairs. While this mode of racing is a most excellent one in theory it fails to do all that is claimed for it when put into actual practice. In the first place trainers, owners and drivers of horses that cannot be depended upon to go out and show their best in the first heat trotted in a race, look with disfavor upon the scheme. They argue to themselves that one chance is not enough where one pays five per cent of the purse for the privilege of starting, and if they are to be counted out entirely on account of a break or some other trifling accident the ancient and honorable three in five system is certainly better for them. There is not one particle of doubt that the average owner and trainer would much rather start for a $1000 purse with three chances to win it than to enter in a $333 purse where the final result depended entirely upon the first heat. Associations that give harness meetings cannot possibly survive and at the same time give the same purses for dash races that are now offered for those under the old three in five rule. The famous M. & M., a ten thousand dollar race for 2:23 class trotters is one of the leading features of the Grand Circuit. Does any one believe for one moment that it would draw one-half the entries were it made a dash race? Certainly not. The $500 which is paid for the entrance fee of starters would be considered too great a risk were the race a dash. It is absurd to think that the dash system would be popular in any of the great stakes now so numerous throughout the East. When harness horse owners are willing to race their horses for purses of two or three hundred dollars the dash system may become popular, but so long as generous purses and stakes are the rule at harness meetings, on which the starters are compelled to pay an entrance fee of five cent, just so long will the three-in-five system retain its vogue and popularity.

THE JUDGES' STAND has been a subject for more discussion than any other part of the racing game, but it will not be out of place at the present time to say a word or two more. The harness racing season will open soon and it is very important that nothing be done on any association track in California this year that will tend to injure in any way this grand sport. The judges can prevent crooked work being done as well as punishing those who do it after it is done. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure on all occasions and this is as applicable to the racing game as to any other. By placing men in the judges' stand who know the rules "and knowing dare maintain," much good can be accomplished, but associations should go beyond this. There should be at least one judge appointed whose principal duty shall be to keep his eye out for jobs and crooked work of every kind and to nip them in the bud. The important personage who sits in the stand and looks wise, may be as honest as the sun, but unless he has the "job" shown him he never sees it. We are not believers in the total depravity of the human family and are firmly convinced that at most meetings a majority of the races are on the square and honestly trotted or paced. But one crooked heat will cause enough talk to make the public think the whole meeting is dishonest and if a man is in the stand that can prevent these things much good will be accomplished and much evil prevented. It will be the duty of every board of directors that gives a race meeting this year to make a supreme effort to get the very best men in the stand they can possibly procure, and having done so to lay down the law good and strong that racing must be strictly to rule.

WOODLAND'S FAIR AND RACE MEETING will be one of the big events of the California Circuit this year, and horsemen must remember that entries to the harness races close Tuesday next, July 1st. For many years Woodland has had the reputation of giving the best race meeting of any of the district fairs, owing to the fact that it occurs on the week immediately preceding the State Fair, and it seems that all the horsemen want to start there if possible. Its track is always fast, and as records made at Woodland do not bar the horses making them from any races at Sacramento, there is always a great scramble for first money in the events over the Yolo county track. On Tuesday next, ten classes, five of which are for trotters and five for pacers, will close with Secretary C. F. Thomas at Woodland and every event should fill. The purses are most liberal, ranging from $600 to $750 for the aged classes. Owners are requested to enter their horses in two classes as the program will be so arranged that they can start in both events by placing the races in which they are entered far enough apart to permit of it. In all these purses horses are to be named with entry. Remember the date, July 1st, and remember also that Woodland's fair will be one of the big features of this year's circuit.

COLUSA'S MEETING will open August 11th. A program of twenty races is advertised in this journal to come off at this meeting, the entries to the harness events closing July 15th.

LOS ANGELES ENTRIES will close next Tuesday, July 1st. There are thirteen classes all told. The free-for-all horses are given $1000 to race for in both the trotting and pacing classes. There are nine purses of $700 each and two of $600 each, making the Los Angeles program worth entering in by owners of the best horses in training. There is no better place to race than Los Angeles, and as its meeting winds up the circuit it will be the last opportunity offered to race in California this year. Fill out your entry blanks and mail them so that they will bear a postmark not later than July 1st.

THE THIRD PAYMENT in the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stake, $6000 for foals of mares bred in 1901 will be due and payable July 1st. This payment is $5 and failure to make it declares the entry out. Those who own foals of this year that are not entered in the stake and who desire to secure nominations, should apply for the same by Monday next. There are a few mares that failed to foal, and other instances where the foals have died. These nominations can be transferred under the conditions of the stake to other colts without regard to ownership. Those having entries should not fail to make this third payment.

AMERICAN HORSE SHOW BLUE BOOK is the title of a volume recently issued by that excellent Chicago journal, Couch and Saddle. This book gives the records of all the horse shows held in the United States during the year 1901. The book contains over 400 pages and is well illustrated with portraits of the winners on the tanbark and their owners and handlers and drivers. A series of articles touching equipments and so forth that should be used in the various classes in the show ring should prove of much value to exhibitors and managers alike and the coaching rules and regulations most generally enforced at horse shows are also included.

SALINAS CITY, one of the most thriving places in California, will be the place where the Monterey Agricultural Society will hold its meeting this year. This is the association of which that venerable and honored pioneer, Hon. Jesse D. Carr, is President, and John J. Kelly the Secretary. Eight purses for harness horses, ranging from $300 to $500 each, are advertised to close July 1st, which falls on Tuesday next. See that your entries are mailed in time if you want to race there.

THE SALE of Hon. Jesse D. Carr's horses came off too late in the week to get a full report of it in this week's issue. The broodmares sold at rather low prices, averaging about $75 each. The colts and fillies that were two, three and four years old sold better, several bringing over $100 each. The young stallion Boodle Jr. was shown to the crowd before the sale, and was very much admired. The young colts by him were extra good lookers.

VENTURA'S PURSES are very generous this year. The free for all pacers are given $1000, and the free for all trotters the same. The meeting opens August 6th and there are eleven harness races on the program with purses ranging from $500 to $1000. Entries to these races close next Tuesday, July 1st, and you don't want to miss Ventura if you have a horse ready to race. See the advertisement.

SANTA BARBARA will hold a race meeting this year. The 19th agricultural district will hold its annual fair at this point and has provided a good racing program, with purses of $250 for harness events. The fair begins August 12th and the entries close Tuesday next, July 1st. If you want to race at Santa Barbara, mail your entries to H. B. Brastow in time to have them postmarked July 1st.

OWNERS OF RUNNERS will take note that the Buffalo Racing Association advertises in this issue a list of big stakes to close July 1st for the great meeting of 1902 and also for stakes to be run in 1903. The conditions of these stakes are set forth in the advertisement. Jos. Swigert is the Secretary and his address is 817 Mutual Life Building, Buffalo.

A postal just received from Geo. T. Beckers at Portland, Oregon, states Zombro has been bred to twenty-six mares there up to the 25th of June. Mr. Beckers also writes that in the fire which occurred at Portland on the 24th inst., Mr. T. C. Condon lost all his horses. Zombro C., a colt by Zombro who had worked a mile that day in 2:29 was among the horses burned as was also Anna J. 2:16 in foal to Zombro and a suckling by that horse at her side. Another that was burned to death was Maymont by McKinney out of McMinnville Maid. This will be a severe loss to Mr. Condon and he will have the sympathy of all horsemen.

That Successor to Cresceus.

"I see by the papers that George Ketcham thinks the trotting stallion Pegasus that he will race the coming season, is destined to be the successor to Cresceus. And the Toledo man ought to know what he is talking about for he has brought out one world beater and it will surprise no one if he gets another." Thus said the Amateur as he laid down the morning paper in which he had read the dispatch that occasioned his remark.

"Very likely," said the Old Campaigner, "very likely. But not altogether probable. Maybe Ketcham never said it. But if he did he may not be able to prove that he is a real dyed-in-the-wool prophet. This horse business is not as much of a cinch as some folks believe it to be and when it comes to picking out the successors to the kings and queens of the turf even the smart fellows who know how to breed them by rule, and never do it except on paper, generally find themselves several miles in the air without any parachute. When Goldsmith Maid was the boss of the pike there were no less than several hundred of successors picked out for her and among the whole heap the name of Rarus was never mentioned. Yet the gelding of nearly unknown, and almost no-account, breeding came along and got the glory that had been picked out for, and cut to fit, a whole host of the purple-bred kind. It is not unlikely that the advent of Rarus as a real champion jolted loose more theories and beliefs than any other one thing that ever happened since the first sulky was built. St. Julien was only a nibbler at the bait for a long time, but he was bred to trot, so they all said, and I guess Hickok got the same notion in his head and that is why, using all his arts and patience, he at last succeeded in making him trot. Maud S. sort of shook the boys up when she came out and gobbled the crown, but they dug into her breeding and concluded they ought to have picked her the day she was foaled. I always fancied the chestnut mare's pedigree, it was so satisfying to all concerned. There was the double cross to old Abdallah and the one strain of Pilot Jr., to tickle the trotting purists, and the cross to Boston that gratified the thoroughbred fellows, so that nobody had any real kick coming.

"After Maud S. came Jay Eye See who reigned for a day and after him, with Maud wearing the crown again for several years, we had Sunol. And all that time the wise men were picking out the coming champion. Part of the time Ben Kenney was chasing her through a plowed field in Kentucky to make her forget how to pace, but no one selected her to get the laurels. The fellows who ought to have known and who really thought they did know, were finding more kings and queens than there are in ten decks and never a one of them lighted on the correct article nor came within miles of it. After Nancy Hanks had done wonders they still ignored her because her sire was Happy Medium, whose reputation as a sire of soft ones was as wide as the nation. Allerton had a bite out of the cherry, but the know-it-alls couldn't see any medals on him nor any place to pin even one, because his dam was an old mare the Stouts let go at work horse price. Then, after Nancy had rubbed it in on the prophets until they all shouted 'enough,' in pranced Alix and made everybody like her game. Directum came and went as a colt.

"Then for a champion trotter we had The Abbot. Of course he was the selection of a big majority, over the left. You know all about the high opinion, in your mind, everybody had of Chimes and his get. But The Abbot got the coveted title. Then, if we are to believe the fellows who can always tell you what is going to happen after it has occurred, they all turned to the family of Robert McGregor, and announced that it would produce the next champion. What they might have done if they had known how near George Ketcham came to putting him to death because he was so little and mean looking and sickly they would have added a long list to the sudden deaths that are caused by heart failure. But they didn't know. They were too busy studying pedigrees and writing essays about the best bred trotter in the world to see the new star rising in the vicinity of Toledo, O., whence had never before come a champion trotter or anything that looked like one.

"After Cresceus got to be the whole banquet it was so easy for the whole capoodle of them to tell you why he was the best ever. And they are guessing at it just as hard to-day as ever before. If they hit it they will have the first and only notch on their sticks. They are of the same stamp, as guessers, as were the fellows who refused to back Peter Stirling for last year's Futurity because they had been told that his mammy produced two bad ones. It does beat all how much weight a little over-the-back-fence gossip will have in the horse business and especially in horse racing. It is no secret that a lot of people expected to make money last year betting against Audubon Boy because of the general impression that his sire was no great shucks. But the chestnut colt got the money. You can take a horse over into the corner of his stall and tell him there is a blot on his 'scutcheon, but that won't have any effect on him. If he can deliver the goods he will do it even if he upsets all the theories and notions that ever were hatched.

"And when anyone tells you that he has picked out the next king of trotters you tell him, politely, but firmly, that when he is ready to show you just to name the day and you will be there with your clock. But let me tell you about the successor to Cresceus. He will come along one of these days, probably, and go a faster mile than was ever before timed. And he will be a great horse, if the one mile is all he can trot. Yet it is my hope that when we have a new champion he, she or it, as the case may be, will be all that is to be desired. In order to please everybody I would want sire and dam to be natural trotters, with records of 2:10 or better and with pedigrees standard for five generations, after that pure thoroughbred. That would give all the breeding theorists a chance to prove that they are correct and would afford a lot of fellows who are now crying in the wilderness an opportunity to say I told you so. But it is even betting that the next champion trotter will have ancestors back of the third remove that couldn't get their names on a country stud boss bill if they were so unfortunate as to be alive in these days of the advanced standard."—Ken-tucky Stock Farm.

Vallejo's Program.

There were one or two errors in the advertisement of additional purses offered by the Vallejo association as it appeared in this paper last week and also in the entry blanks sent out. The correct list of purses to be closed Monday next, June 30th, is as follows:

2:40 Trot.....$500	Green Class Pace.....$500
2:15 Trot.....500	2:15 Pace.....500

In the 2:40 trot and green class pace horses are to be named with entry. The 2:15 trot and 2:15 pace are nomination purses, for which entries must be made June 30th, but horses are not named and eligible until August 1st.

In the advertisement last week a free for all pace was advertised, which was an error, as it should have read a Green Class pace. Vallejo will have the opening and one of the best meetings on the circuit and every horseman in California who has a horse eligible to any of these four additional purses should have an entry there.

Scoring in Harness Races.

Incessant scoring of trotting horses in an effort to get an equable start is a thing of the past except with neophytes in the starter's position, says the Detroit Free Press. It depends almost entirely upon the starter whether the scoring shall be prolonged.

The driver in a race will soon "catch on" to the kind of a man occupying the starter's box. One driver can occasion great trouble and annoyance if he so desires, and this will frequently be the case if there is leniency and incompetency shown on the part of the starter. Some leniency may be shown a driver with a refractory and bad-acting horse, but the experienced starter will know just when there has been enough delay, and will act accordingly. An experienced starter will know also when a driver is employing tactics to delay a start, and will make short work with him. Nearly all the drivers, and horses as well, at the present day are professionals and know exactly what is expected of them when they take their places on the quarter stretch. It is not often that a driver wishes to delay a start, specially when the clip is fast. Now and then a driver from the pines may find it difficult to adapt himself to the exciting conditions of scoring with a big field of horses, but the starter, if he knows his business, will soon straighten him out and familiarize him with the work.

The position of starting judge is a very important as well as a very onerous one, and it is not every one that is capable of doing it. It is not enough that a starter should be a good horseman and have an accurate knowledge of the rules. He should be a judge of men, and have the faculty of seeing quick, thinking quick and acting quick. A conscientious starter will have no friends in a race whose faults he will condone when it becomes necessary to apply the rules. It has been said that a man "cannot start horses and keep his friends." This is not true as a rule. We believe that a majority of owners and drivers have more respect for the man that shows no favor; one whom they know to be honest. An unjust or partial starter will soon make himself obnoxious to the public and the performers, and his services will not long be in demand. The public will not tolerate an ignorant or partial starter. To sum up, then, a starter should be a judge of men as well as of horses, he should be firm yet courteous in his demeanor and conscientious enough not to be influenced by the ties of friendship.

Dan Patch and Harold H. Matched.

Dan Patch 2:04½, the unbeaten son of the great Joe Patchen, and the Canadian sidewheeler, Harold H. 2:04 by Roadmaster, are to meet at Windsor, Ont., in a match race. Myron McHenry, who is looking after the fortunes of the Patchen horse, made the announcement. The race will be pulled off during the meeting that is held annually at Windsor, the week before the Grand Circuit opening at Detroit. Arrangements for the race were completed in New York just before McHenry started west with his stable. Harold H., who is to try to beat the black fellow, something that he could not do last year, is being prepared for the campaign at his owner's home in a little Ontario town.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Stonehenge vs. Some Field Trial Setters.

The most remarkable feature in the Laverack breed of Setters is the extraordinary extent to which inbreeding has been carried, as shown by the pedigree of Countess, given by Mr. Laverack in his book on the Setter. By examining this carefully, it will be seen that every animal in it is descended from Ponto and Old Moll, which were obtained by Mr. Laverack in 1825 from the Rev. A. Harrison, who lived near Carlisle, and who had kept the breed pure for thirty-five years. Four names only besides these two are found in the right hand column and these four are all descended from Ponto and Old Moll, as will be seen at a glance by referring to the names in italics in the middle of the table. Thus it appears that they alone formed Mr. Laverack's breed, though he often stated that he had tried the introduction of alien blood, but finding it not to answer he had abandoned the produce and resorted again to the original stock. This has led to the belief that the pedigree is incorrect, but he was very positive in his statement. If correct, it certainly is the most remarkable case of breeding in and in I ever met with.

The supporters of the opinion that Mr. Laverack's pedigrees are incorrect adduce two arguments against him: first, that he had shortly before his death given different pedigrees of his dogs, and, secondly, that the average duration of life in each generation, from Dash and Belle to Countess, Nellie and Sam, was fully nine years, which is certainly very remarkable, though within the bounds of possibility. The first of these arguments does not go for much, as we all know that after a man has passed his seventieth year his memory is not often to be relied on; and as to the second, though per se highly improbable, it is, as I have above remarked, by no means impossible. But the discussion of this point is of little practical interest, the "Laverack" breed having been sufficiently tested in practice to stand on its own merits without regard to any theoretical opinions. No one disputes that it is inbred to an extent which few would care to imitate; and if it could be proved that a cross had been occasionally introduced, instead of being considered to have lost in value, I should estimate it more highly. The discussion, therefore, is purely one of curiosity, and need not influence any breeder in his selection of a breeding stud.

To this inbreeding is, no doubt, to be attributed the fact that the Laverack Setters are very difficult to rear, and that a large proportion of them die of distemper. Whether or no the average working "form" of the breed is a high one, is very difficult to decide; but undoubtedly Countess and her sister Nellie were grand specimens of the high-bred Setter. Nearly all the pure Laverack dogs which have been shown are too Spaniel-like in shape to please my eye, the only exceptions I remember being Prince and Rock, and to some extent the well-known Sam, brother to Countess and Nellie; nevertheless, they have not the Spaniel carriage of the flag alluded to above, which is in them generally trailed like that of the fox, and without any lashing or feathering. Probably it is owing to the excessive inbreeding of the Laveracks injuring their health that they have not succeeded as well as might be expected as sires; but, at all events, from whatever cause, a good deal of disappointment has been felt by breeders on that score. Nevertheless, for work the breed still maintains the high character gained for it in its purity by Countess, Nellie and Garth's Daisy, and for its crosses by Ranger, Dick, Dash II., Field's Daisy, Prince, Ginx's Baby, Glen, Rhoda, Druid, Norna and Nora, and last, but not least, that excellent little bitch, Mr. Lloyd Price's Queen, by Blue Prince, out of the Rev. S. East's Quaver II., bred by that gentleman from his own old Shropshire blood.

A great many different strains of English Setters might be adduced from all parts of the country, but notably from the north of England, with claims superior to those of Mr. Laverack's strain, up to the time of the institution of field trials. Among these were the Corbet and Graham breeds, those of the Earl of Tankerville, Lord Waterpark, Mr. Bishop, Mr. Bayley, Mr. Lort, Mr. Jones of Ascot, Major Cowan, Mr. Withington, Mr. Paul Hackett and Mr. Calver, the last two being a good deal crossed with Gordon blood. None of these strains were, however, so generally known beyond the immediate circle of their owners' friends as to have gained a universal reputation; and it was not till the public appearance of Mr. Garth's Daisy, and afterward that of Mr. Purcell Llewellyn's Countess and Nellie, that the Laverack strain attained its present high reputation. Before Daisy came out Mr. Garth had produced a brace of very bad ones at Stafford in 1867; and it was with considerable prejudice against them that the above celebrated bitches first exhibited their powers, in spite of the high character given them by Mr. Lort, Mr. Withington and other well-known sportsmen who had shot over them for years. It is Mr. Lort's opinion that Mr. Withington possessed better dogs than even Countess, but it must not be forgotten that private trials are generally more flattering than those before the public.

I come now to consider the value of Mr. Llewellyn's "field trial" strain, as they are sometimes grandiloquently termed by their "promoters," or, as I shall term them, the Dan-Laveracks, being all either by Dan out of Laverack bitches, or by a Laverack dog out of a sister to Dan. As a proof of the superiority of this cross to the pure Laveracks "Settor" states that "during the last two years ten of this breed" (Laverack) "and ten of the Duke-Rhoebe and Laverack cross have been sent to America, the former including Petrel, winner of the champion prize at Birmingham, Pride of the Border, Fairy and Victress; the latter including Rock, Leicester, Rob Roy, Dart and Dora, the same men being owners of both sorts."

At the American shows both sorts have appeared, and the Rheobe blood has always beaten the Laverack. At field trials no Laverack has been entered, but first, second and third prizes were gained at their last field trials, in the champion stakes, by dogs of the Rheobe blood, all descended from Mr. Liewellyn's kennel." I confess that, in my opinion, this does not indicate any superiority in the one over the other, as far as regards field trials, since they were not tested together; and, in reference to the superiority of the Dan-Laveracks on the show bench, it is of little interest to my present inquiry, but I unhesitatingly state that so far as my judgment and opportunities for forming it go, "Setter" is quite correct. Dan himself was a very fine upstanding and handsome dog, and his stock might therefore be expected to resemble him, while the Laverack dogs are nearly all heavy and lumbering, and the bitches, though very elegant, too small and delicate for perfection. But, as I have before remarked, the Laveracks have not shown very delicate noses in public, and indeed I have always considered them rather deficient than otherwise in this quality, which is the worst part of the Setter as compared with the Pointer, and should be regarded, therefore, as the first essential in estimating any of its strains. Now, though I have always regarded Duke himself as on the whole a good dog, especially in pace and range, and have estimated Dan and Duke, the result of his cross with Mr. Statter's Rheobe, favorably as compared with the Laverack litters as shown in Bruce and Rob Roy, yet I never considered Dan as a good cross or the Laverack bitches, because his sire always showed a want of nose similar to that of the Laveracks themselves. Duke is said by "Setter," and I believe correctly, to have received a high character from Mr. Barclay Field for his nose as exhibited in private, but he was notoriously deficient in this quality when brought before the public, going with his head low and feeling the foot rather than the body scent. In proof of this defect it is only necessary to say that he was beaten by Hamlet and Young Kent in this quality at Bala in 1867, when the judge gave him only thirty, one out of a possible forty for "nose"; while at Stafford in the following spring Rex found birds twenty yards behind the place where he had left his point, and thereby gained the cup—Sir V. Corbet, the breeder of Duke, being one of the judges, and loud in admiration of Rex's nose, and the same time finding fault with that of Duke. Indeed, this defect was always made the excuse for E. Armstrong's constant interference with him by hand and voice—whether rightly or wrongly I do not pretend to say, but it evidently marked that clever breaker's want of confidence in his dog's nose. Of Rheobe herself I do not recollect enough to give an opinion as to this quality in her individuality; and among her produce I do not remember any but Bruce and Dan that displayed even an average amount of scenting powers. Rob Roy was notoriously deficient in nose, and Dick, brother to Dan, in his second season was constantly making false points, and is so described in the report of the Southampton trials of 1872.

For these reasons, although I have always considered the Duke-Rhoebe cross superior to the two Laverack-Rhoebelitters, I never expected Dan to get such a good bitch as Norna in point of nose and correct carriage of head and flag, according to my ideas. If Norna, as alleged by her owner and "Setter," as well as by the Field reporter at Horseheath, is superior to her, I can only make my apology to Dan, and admit that he has turned out a better sire than I expected, and than might have been gathered from the performances of Laura, Leda and Druid at the Devon and Cornwall and Sleaford trials of 1874, which I saw. These two bitches were slow and without any style whatever, while the dog, though moderately fast, was well beaten by Ranger at Sleaford at all points. In 1875 it is true he turned the tables on Mr. Macdonald's dog, who was out of all form at that meeting, but he could only get second to Viscount Downe's Sam, who was consequently at once added to Mr. Llewellyn's kennel. Taking into consideration that the dogs which have been exhibited by Mr. Llewellyn are picked from a very large kennel, and that as far as I have seen them perform they have not proved themselves to be above the average, I can only come to the conclusion that Dan has not done any great good in improving the Laveracks except in size and looks. Neither do I place him or any of his stock in the first rank of field trial winners, only Countess, Ranger and Dash II. forming with the Pointers Drake and Belle a quintet in class A1, as remarked above. Dan came out in public only once, it is true, though winning three stakes at that meeting, but he met the same competitors in all and the victory was virtually a single one. After this he put his shoulder out and never appeared in public, but his brother Dick, who was coupled with him in the braces and went equally with him in the short trial accorded them, did nothing worth speaking of next year, except to win the brace prize at Southampton "by a succession of false points, in which he was splendidly backed" by his companion, Ruby; and to divide the Stoneham Stakes with his only competitor Robin, "neither being able to find birds" though Dick "made many points, all of which turned out to be of no thing," according to the report in the Field, which is no doubt worthy of all credit from the well known ability of the writer. Moreover, Dan at Shrewsbury had a very narrow escape of defeat by Rake, as recorded by myself at the time, so that on mature reflection I have no hesitation in placing him below the first class; but possibly he is entitled to rank in the second along with Plunkett and his son and daughter, Kite and Music (Irish), together with Kate, Rex and Lang (Gordons). To them may probably be added the Dan-Laveracks Norna and Nora, and also Die, the last two winners respectively at Shrewsbury and Horseheath of the puppy stakes, all more or less crossed with the late Mr. Laverack's strain. To sum up, therefore, it may be safely alleged that his Setters have been of great service to sportsmen in giving pace and style when crossed with other breeds.

The points of the English Setter may be described as follows:

When to Strike a Trout in Fly-Fishing.

The old, old question of how and when "to strike" a trout has never been answered satisfactorily to the fraternity of anglers. The method followed by a noted angler and writer whose experiences and advice on the subject are interesting and whose wisdom we found filed away uncredited in our scrap book—was to "allow an instant of time to elapse between the sight of the rush or swirl of the trout and the act of striking. The duration of this moment of time is as impossible to define as it is to tell the fly-casting tyro how long he is to wait for his back-cast to straighten out before he springs it to the front.

"We have since been convinced that the method of striking should be varied on different waters, in some of which, where food is not abundant, the trout are quicker in action, seizing the lure with a rush, than in others, where sluggish currents exist and food is plentiful. We remember an outing that illustrates these conditions. We were camping on the bank of a northern river, where a long, deep pool, with no apparent current, existed, and alder bushes nearly arched the major portion of the stream. From this overgrowth, insect food was constantly dropping into the pool, the trout fed to repletion, and had acquired the habit of lazily rising to the fly, seizing it slowly, and then, leisurely turning tail, would apparently steer for a bottom lair to eat and digest. In this pool we hooked every fish that rose to our flies, and it did not require much time to account for our success. For some years previous, owing to the failure of our eyesight, we had become what is known as a "slow striker," and the sluggish action of these fish in taking and disposing of the lure exactly suited our tardy method of striking. We boated more trout from this pool than was done by two other anglers of the party who were experienced fly-fishers. Just below the large pool the stream became tumultuous, with short rapids and small pools alternating, and here the veriest tyro of the party caught two trout to our one. The fish were eager, coming at the fly with a dash and gone in an instant, and our dimmed eyesight and consequent slow method of striking accounted for the failure to hook them."

This question of how and when to strike will never fail to interest the angler, and we hope some of our readers will yield their quota of information and experience, through which we may obtain a consensus of opinion on the subject. In this connection we append the views of an angler, also taken from a slip in our scrap-book. We do not know its origin, but the writer is evidently an intelligent English angler:

"There cannot be any hard-and-fast rule for 'striking' trout. Presume you are fishing fly with fine tackle; a trout rises in a moderately still pool some fifteen yards away; you cast at the fish a foot or two above him; up he comes to your fly; you don't 'strike.' The result is you barely feel your fish, and he is not hooked, but is frightened. Another fish rises in a similar place; your procedure is the same, excepting, immediately you see the fish rise, or perhaps take down your partly floating line without breaking the water; you give a sharp, not hard, stroke. Then you are fast in the trout, and the odds are you land him.

"(Striking is a sine qua non for successful trout-fishing in a pool of still or moderately running water, and always make your stroke when you see the fish rise; never wait until you feel him. You very often see trout take your fly before you actually see the 'murl' from his rise, and consequently before you feel him jerk or pull your line. Light travels quicker than feeling, much more so when the gentle touch of a trout to a fly is to travel from the extreme end of your line down to the rod-butt at your hand. Far more trout are lost by not having the hook driven home more quickly than there are by being too quick on to them. Indeed, under ordinary circumstances, it is almost impossible to be too quick upon your fish.

"As to fishing in streams, very often the weight of the water, acting on the line, makes a sufficient strain to insure the hook driving into the fish. When you find the fish has hooked himself, if you have not struck him, do not do so then, as you might shake the hook free. I was once watching a man flogging a stream. He hooked a fair trout, or rather a trout hooked itself. The fish rolled over several times, when suddenly the fisherman gave his rod a tremendous jerk. In answer to my inquiry, he said he had previously forgotten to 'strike' his fish, and evidently thinking it a case of 'better late than never,' did so several seconds after the fish was hooked. Luckily in this instance the trout stuck on. Even in a stream it is always advisable to 'strike' a fish if you see him rise at you—and advise as above: Don't wait until you feel him. One day I was fishing a rough stream, in a bright sun. I saw a trout put up his nose at my fly; though I did not feel a pull, he felt one, for I 'struck,' and was fast in a nice trout. A similar fish did ditto the next minute, and underwent a like operation, and both graced my basket.

"To sum up, in ninety cases out of a hundred the trout must be 'struck,' and as your sense of sight must be quicker than that of your feeling in all cases, 'strike when you see the fish rise to your fly.' These remarks, of course, refer only to fishing with artificial trout flies of an ordinary size. In fishing with natural flies, give your fish time to turn before 'striking' him. Trout do not so easily feel the deception when it is covered with a natural insect. In cases where the floating May fly (green drake) is used for quickness in 'striking,' it is not so requisite as when you are fishing with sunken flies.

"I can only say I am in favor of 'striking' the moment I see the trout rise. My reasons are that if the fish does not hook himself in the act of taking the fly, he discovers his mistake instantly, and expels it at once; whereas if you manage to 'strike' the moment he takes and closes his mouth on it, you are almost certain to hook him before he has time to spit it out. Many trout are hooked but slightly in this way and perhaps escape; but I am of opinion that many fish are caught by 'striking' at the rise that would otherwise escape.

"In fishing either stream or pool regularly over, cast the fly across, or slanting considerably upward, and let it float down the current of its own accord, till it comes gradually full round, managing your rod so as all the while to keep the line and flies under such command that should a trout touch the hook unseen below the water you can detect him on the instant. This action is simply a tightening feel, as the trout is generally previously hooked from the natural resistance of the floating line. If he is not felt to be hooked, then it is necessary to pull full up, and make another cast; but never let the first pull-in feeling for a trout be so decidedly forcible as to be called a striker, for it ought not to be done with a third part of the force requisite to lift the line clear of the surface, as is necessary when making another cast. Indeed, in casting generally, for either salmon or trout, the angler should never snatch his line quickly from the water, but give it a gentle pull, and let the lifting it be a second and brisker action, as a large trout, or sometimes a salmon, may be following the fly, and may readily at that particular instant be just seizing it; and, if you lift it with foolish force, the fish is struck off from the gut in his mouth."

No man can cast "a gentle fly" unless he is born with the "knack of it;" it can never be taught in its perfection for stream use, but hundreds of anglers, not to the manor born, have successfully landed the beauties of the brook, and many thousands of accredited fly-casters will, during the season, swarm the streams of the country whose lessons in fly-casting should commence with the rudiments of the art, but when the trout are eager and the waters are rapid and high, the most inexperienced of these tyros will catch trout on the crudest of tackle. But their lesson has just commenced, and it is well for them to know and be encouraged by the fact that if they will diligently study the habits of the fish, the lay of their haunts, the hours of feeding, etc., etc., they (the fishermen) may develop into partial masters of the art, albeit their forty feet of line may be bunglingly thrown and their feathered lures be oftener in the tree branches than on the water.

Fish Lines.

James Watts has been enjoying the fishing at Lemoyne on the upper Sacramento.

An 18 pound salmon was caught this week by S. A. Heller at Lemoyne on the upper Sacramento. The fish was taken on a spoon.

On Tuesday next, July 1st, the open season for striped bass will prevail. The outlook for a season of plentiful sport is looked forward to most enthusiastically by a majority of the local anglers.

Reports from the Truckee are encouraging; the fishing is evidently improving and will soon be at its best. This week a box of fine trout, sent down from Boca by Jeff Wells, was received by Dave Thom.

Reports from Russian river, in the vicinity of Guerneville, state that black bass are very plentiful in the river above the dam. The season for black bass will open on Tuesday next, July 1st, and remain open until January 1st.

Halibut are kept alive and fresh for the English market, on the long trip from the fishing grounds to entry port, by tying the tails of two fish together and suspending them in the water. In many cases when the fish are landed the tails are almost severed.

During the close season in June for striped bass, the diversion has been, trips to San Leandro bay, where the anglers found sport with stingrays and sharks. These fish are hard customers when they are hooked; it is like pulling against a truck horse to bring a big shark or ray to boat or beach.

Some fine trout have been recently taken out of Mud creek, which empties into Tomales bay near Camp Pistolet. Chas. Breidenstein and Bert Spring one day last week caught a number of fish 16 and 20 inches long, plump and in the finest condition. The fishermen say the trout put up the gamiest kind of a fight.

Stockton striped bass fishermen have solved the spoon problem for fishing the San Joaquin and adjacent tributaries. The spoon in vogue with the up-river sportsmen is in outline the shape of a small fish cut out of heavy tin. A single hook is used, fastened to the spoon near the tail end. The device works satisfactorily it seems.

Salmon fishing in Monterey bay seems to be getting somewhat better. Last Sunday Walter Burlingame hooked a fish weighing over 30 pounds, James G. Chesley and William Larsen were also out in boats fishing, the party landed three other fish weighing 18, 12 and 9 pounds respectively.

The Monterey side of the bay is now full of immense schools of sardines. At Capitola and Santa Cruz the fish caught run smaller in weight, from three to five and six pounds as a rule. The fishing there is reported to be going better daily, although nothing remarkable has yet been achieved. Herman Oelrichs indulges in salmon fishing daily, starting out on the bay from the beach near the Hotel Del Monte.

The largest salmon caught in Monterey bay this season turned the scales at 55 pounds.

The fish caught at Monterey at present are taken four or five miles out, the anglers finding it necessary to fish deep for the king of the water.

In fishing for salmon, particularly where the angler finds it necessary to get his sardine baited hook or spoon down to any depth, the bugbear to the sport of playing the fish is found in the heavy sinker used, anywhere from half a pound to sometimes two pounds of lead. This heavy drag on the fish and correspondingly excessive strain on rod and tackle has a tendency to make hard work of the fishing and cuts out generally all the sport of playing the fish.

This unwelcome feature of salmon fishing can be readily avoided by the use of a simple and effective device in arranging the trolling tackle, so that when a fish seizes the bait or spoon a quick strike will have the double effect of securely hooking the fish and also of unloosing the lead, which then drops to the bottom, leaving the line easier on the fish and allowing the salmon to fight and go into all the antics it pleases whilst endeavoring to get rid of hook and line.

The usual salmon trolling rig is arranged to have the hook or spoon attached to a barrel swivel at one end of the snell, which is usually about three or more feet long; a swivel is also at the upper end. At this end of the snell the swivel ring is fixed to the sinker, the other end of the sinker being attached to a third swivel at the end of the line proper.

The device for dropping the sinker can be arranged as follows: at the end of the snell attach to the swivel a short piece of line, say seven or eight inches in length, have the other end tied securely to the swivel at the end of the line. In hanging the sinker on the line, take a piece of lighter or at least much weaker string or line than the trolling line itself, tie one end to the line end swivel, pass the lighter line through the eyes or rings of the sinker and tie up short to the end swivel ring of the snell. By so doing a bight is caused in the trolling line. When a heavy strike is made, this or the tugging of the fish will break the short piece of line upon which the sinker is hung, the latter immediately drops off and the angler has the line in shape for playing his fish properly and saves a lot of wear and tear on his rod.

This device will work to a charm and is only to be tried to have its benefits appreciated. The loss and cost of lead sinkers is a mere peccadillo compared to the other expenses and when the increased pleasures of the fishing are taken into consideration.

Several local anglers have tried to get a day's salmon fishing at Santa Cruz recently and they are not very loud in their praises of the abilities or efforts of the boatmen who cater to the wants of salt water anglers at the resort mentioned. In most cases, instead of fresh sardines being provided for bait, and properly too, the boatmen insisted on the fishermen using salt sardines which they provided. The sardines being somewhat scarce on the Santa Cruz side at the time referred to, the fishermen were seemingly either indolent or too indifferent to procure supplies of fresh bait. After trolling for awhile further attempts at salmon fishing would be deprecated and efforts made to have the anglers adjourn to the reefs near the shore, where the boat could be anchored and bottom fishing indulged in. This, of course, would enable the boatmen to indulge in a few cigarettes and a comfortable siesta. Most anglers who fancy salmon fishing think this system is not worth the charge of $5 a day for a boat and a plausible boatman.

This indifference to the sportsmen's wants may work all right with unsophisticated summer outing visitors at Santa Cruz, but it will not give the resort the reputation among the angling fraternity that the salmon fishing to be found there entitles it to.

It is not considered en regle to fish with more than a single rod, although many experienced and conscientious anglers use more than one. Two rods are perhaps permissible when still-fishing, particularly for salt-water fish in a slight tideway, one with a sinker attached to the line to feel the bottom, the other, without sinker, adrift seventy-five to one hundred feet on the tide and below the surface at different depths, regulated by the length of line and flow of current. This method has the advantage of finding the depth at which the fish are feeding, which, once found, the angler uses, as his judgment indicates, one or both rods. Our practice is the use of a single rod, single hook, single gut leader and no sinker, wherever the fishing conditions permit, but we have many salt-water angling friends who catch as many and often more fish than we do, who believe in heavy tackle and taking "all the chances." They get as much fun out of their method as we do from ours, and they cannot be called "fish-hogs" either. The law of angling ethics is an unwritten one.

Request Him to Resign.

Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner Potter of El Dorado county should have his commission revoked. If the story published in the Sacramento Record-Union is true, Mr. Potter betrayed an amount of ignorance and lack of official backbone that is lamentable.

A negro and three white men were caught by Potter last Sunday between Elk Grove and Franklin. They had been ostensibly out rabbit hunting, when overhauled by the deputy (?) their game bags were found to be filled with young doves. The men were "held up for awhile and severely lectured for violating the game law." "Mr. Potter was tempted to arrest the men, but on reflection, he was in doubt as to his legal right to exercise his official functions outside of his own county."

Mr. Potter did not reflect, he evidently was incapable of it, or he would have acted differently. The simple outcome of the matter was, that he was incompetent to fulfill his duty as an officer when the occasion required him to do so.

As a matter of fact, a violator of the law, when caught in the act, can be arrested by any citizen. Potter was commissioned by the State Board and should have known that, if necessary, he could act as a fish and game deputy anywhere in the State. We would suggest to the Board of Fish Commissioners that Mr. Potter's commission and badge be recalled and given to a more capable man. The Board does not need any more lecturers on the official staff, "Dustproof Harry" fills the bill acceptably.

AT THE TRAPS.

The Union Gun Club will hold their second live bird shoot at Ingleside to-morrow. The shoot will commence at 10 o'clock a. m. sharp. Three events are on the card; other races will be arranged, time permitting. The first event will be a six-bird race, entrance $2.50, $5 added, high guns, three moneys. Event two, twelve-bird race, entrance $5, $10 added, class shoot, three moneys. Event three, $2.50 entrance, $5 added, high guns, three moneys. Birds will be included in these events and charged for at the rate of $3 per dozen.

The further announcement is made that an appetizing lunch for the shooters will be provided for by Mons. Guillaume S. Wattles et Thomas L. Lewis.

To-morrow the Oak Park Club (Sacramento) men will hold their first tournament. All lovers of the gun are invited to attend. The club members have got some very nice prizes for their merchandise shoot, and it will be worth every shooter's time, in that vicinity, to compete for them. If a shooter does not win a handsome prize he will go home contented, for the sportsmen of the Oak Park Club will certainly give all who attend a good time.

The Millwood Gun Club members will gather at Manzanita Station, Marin county, to-morrow. The club monthly shoot will be held, followed by a business meeting and banquet, so announces the Secretary, Wm. Mersfelder.

The Capital City Gun Club regular blue rock shoot was held at the Kimball & Upson grounds, Sacramento, last Sunday. In the club match Judge Hughes broke 25 straight. This is the third straight made by a club member this season.

F. Ruhstaller, Jr., was high gun in the 100 bird race, breaking 87, Weldon 81, Upson and Blair 72, Gusto 65, Brown 61.

Kindsberg won the first money in the first pool shoot, breaking 24 out of a possible 25. A summary of events and scores follows:

The Golden Gate Gun Club live bird shoot at Ingleside last Sunday had but a slim attendance. The weather conditions could not have been better for a shoot. In the club match at 15 pigeons, J. J. Sweeney and W. E. Murdock killed straight and divided first and second money. C. A. Haight with one bird dead out and C. C. Nauman with one lost bird divided third money. Following the club shoot a 15 bird pool race was shot, Murdock, Sweeney and Nauman divided the purse on straight scores. Mr. Achille Roos made a straight score in this match, shot for birds only and was in fine form. The scores made were the following:

The Santa Rosa Gun Club will hold an open to all shoot on July 6th.

Trap shooting is apparently having a boom throughout the interior of the State. Many gun clubs have recently been organized. The sport seems to have attracted the attention of many new shooters and bids fair to maintain a renewed interest among sportsmen.

On the 15th inst. C. C. Nauman and George Sylvester shot off, at Ingleside, a tie for the A. M. Shields cup. Nauman won the cup, breaking 50 blue rocks straight. The cup was then given back to the Union Gun Club by Mr. Nauman and will be contested for again on July 20th.

The Bisbee Gun Club will hold a tournament at Bisbee, Arizona, on July 5th. Eight events are listed on the program. Class shooting will be the rule and moneys divided into 40, 30, 20 and 10%. Targets will be 3 cents each and will be thrown from a maugtrap.

At a recent shoot of the Vallejo Gun Club the results were: Out of 75 targets shot at, W. Beverige 41; seventy birds, A. G. Flickenger, 65; sixty birds, J. W. Lynn 15, D. Beverige 45, F. Lovering 41, C. H. Drake 44, C. Mitchell 29, V. V. Harrier 22; fifty birds, C. L. Winchell, 19; thirty-five birds, F. Dexter, 21; ten birds, F. Dunphy 7, J. Wier 6.

The first live bird shoot of the Santa Rosa Gun Club was held Sunday afternoon at Recreation park after the ball game. In the shoot between Mr. Murphy and District Attorney Webber, the former secured fourteen birds out of fifteen and the last fell dead out of bounds. Mr. Webber secured eleven birds out of fifteen, and had two others fall outside the boundary. This was Mr. Webber's first shoot at live birds. A second match at twelve birds each was between Messrs. McCutchan and Lowry of Windsor and Mr. Weltz of Santa Rosa. Mr. McCutchan killed eleven birds, Mr. Lowry got twelve and Mr. Weltz nine. Mr. Lowry only found it necessary to use his second barrel twice. After the shoot the contestants were entertained at dinner at the Occidental Hotel by Mr. Murphy. The members of the gun club are elated over the success of their first shoot.—Santa Rosa Republican.

Trap shooting is somewhat on the boom at Chico. Thirty-two shooters faced the traps on the 15th inst. at the shoot of the Chico Gun Club. The big event of the day was the team shoot, every shooter on the ground being chosen by either Captain Johnson, of the Easterns, or Captain Barham, of the Westerns. The Captains had a rifle boxed in a manner to indicate that it was a big gun, to be presented on conditions sealed and to be opened after the contest. After the match the conditions were read—"To be presented to one of the three lowest on each side, the winner to be determined by a contest, miss and out."

In the team shoot thirty-two men lined up, each man to shoot at 15 birds. The Easterns won by 30 birds, the scores of the individual shooters being as follows: Johnson 13, Richards 14, Loshbough 10, Brooks 12, Miller 9, Stauffer 12, Simms 7, Waddams 12, Kerr 6, H. D. White 13, Sweeney 2, E. B. Collins 11, Gunby 10, Hamilton 5, B. Collins 10, Rice 10.

The Westerns' scores were: Barham 13, Thomasson 15, Simpson 8, Goodspeed 9, Nichols 5, Stansbury 9, McLennan 7, Boyd 8, Faulkner 7, W. White 8, McEldowney 7, Demarais 6, H. Thomasson 8, Peek 7, Day 11, Salisbury 8.

Kerr, Sweeney, Hamilton, Nichols, Day and Demarais shot for the rifle. Kerr broke two birds and won, Nichols being the only other shooter to kill the first bird. The regular shooters at the traps made fairly good scores during the day. Those shooting at 100 each broke as follows: Johnson 91, Thomasson 89, Brooks 79, Miller 66, Barham 88, Richards 87, Stauffer and Loshbough, who shot at 90 each, broke 70 and 67 respectively, and H. D. White broke 68 out of 97.

At the regular medal shoot at 20 birds, the scores were: Johnson 17, Miller 16, Loshbough 14, Richards 19, Thomasson 17, Brooks 18, Barham 20.

The California Inanimate Target Association is to all intents and purposes an institution of the past. At a meeting of such representative officers and club delegates as could be convened on the 23d inst., the sentiment of those present was for disorganization, because under the existing state of affairs it would be impossible to carry out any proposed measures or transact any business whatsoever as the then status of the organization was such, by reason of the disbandment of several clubs, that under the governing constitution and by-laws nothing could be done by the Board of Governors in accordance therewith. This contretemps could have been avoided had there been a meeting last year any time previous to the withdrawal of several clubs and their representatives when the proper amendments, etc., to the by-laws, &c., could have been adopted.

After the affairs of the old association were wound up, the preliminary formation was made of a new organization, based on similar lines, but further reaching in its scope. The new association was called the Pacific Coast Trap Shooting Association. Temporary organization was effected with Dr. W. S. George, of Antioch, President; pro tem, T. L. Lewis, Vice-President; W. J. Street, Secretary. These gentlemen, together with A. M. Shields, were constituted a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws and formulate rules. The next meeting will be held at the call of this Committee.

It is the intention of the organizers to have an individual membership of shooters, instead of a club representation. Membership in the new association will be open to all sportsmen of the Coast.

The idea is a good one and should be fostered. There are at present several separate Coast organizations in existence; the interests of Coast shooters and a mutual advantage will be enhanced under the banners of a general and comprehensive organization, the successful operation of which we hope to chronicle later on.

Those present at the meeting were: Dr. W. S. George, President; J. B. Hauer, T. L. Lewis, Vice-Presidents; W. J. Street, Secretary-Treasurer; Jos. J. Sweeney (proxy), J. Peltier (proxy), M. J. Iverson, J. Gordon and G. Herring.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Lady, Woodlawn Kennels' Boston Terrier, received from George Bell, of Toronto, is heavy in whelp to George S. Thomas' Endcliffe Premier.

We would like to hear from owners desiring to dispose of two English Setter puppies, a dog and a bitch, different breedings; a Cocker Spaniel dog a year old, and house broken; a Gordon Setter dog puppy, state age and breeding.

The Dog, a new aspirant for a position in the arena lighted by the rays of the dog star, is on our desk. Its typographical make-up is neat and inviting, the illustrations are good and clean cut. The new journal is issued as an illustrated fortnightly.

Grand Master II was purchased this week from Mrs. W. J. Spotteswoode by Mr. J. H. Dorian and is now duly installed in Nairo Kennels. We have rarely seen a St. Bernard change so much for the better. Grand Master II is now in most splendid shape, his coat could not be beaten, he has filled out and developed grandly, has a good body, strong and shapely front legs and good hindquarters and straight hind-legs, and carries himself like a big, sound dog should, but so often does not, do. He is remarkably good in head and expression and if in the same condition at the next show will give the best of them the closest kind of a run, if not a drubbing. He is by Ch. Grand Master out of Bonnie Doon, a bitch owned by Mr. Dorian.

Two new species of dogs have recently been received in the Zoological Garden in Dresden, viz.: a Siamese dog and a Brazilian Deerhound. The former bears much resemblance to the Australian dingy. The head is short, thick, and flat at the top, sloping down to the point of the nose. Eyes brown, pointed ears bent forward, and short neck. Color dark brown, differing in this respect from the dingy, which is yellowish red. The breast is low and broad, back short and straight. The tail is short, strong, bushy and erect. Hair straight and short. The Deerhound from Brazil is a handsome animal, of somewhat wolf-like appearance.

A letter from Hollister informs us that the Pointer bitch Fay whelped last week three dogs and three bitches, all nicely marked, to Bruce S.—he by Donner out of Sally L. Two previous litters, thirteen puppies (8 dogs) by Fay are all coming on finely. Of the first litter Otto Feudner now owns Philosopher, who is in the hands of John Lucas; he will be entered in the next Pacific Coast Derby. Remy Fredericks owns another dog puppy, now being trained by John Kohn. F. W. McClellan, of Belmont, and Fred S. Johnson each own a young dog from the same litter, both now broken to field work. Hip Justins has a bitch (broken to gun) who recently whelped two puppies. Of the second litter, W. S. Damon has a bitch puppy six months old; James P. Sweeney, of this city, and H. W. Davis, of Auburn, both have dogs; the remaining dog puppy is owned in Hollister. A likely bitch puppy, partially broken, is now in this city and will be kept and trained by her owner.

Gabilan Kennels' Fairland Pet is coming on nicely and is expected to whelp next week. She resembles Buckwa in type, color and markings. Lady, another English Setter bitch, is in whelp to Count Danstone.

There are few owners, among the large and ever increasing numbers of ladies who possess famous and interesting kennels, says the Illustrated Kennel News, who have done so much towards extending the boundaries of popularity as has the Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison. By popularity is understood the two forms of success—recognition by the Kennel Club and appreciation by lady owners, and as the greater contains the less the appreciation ought to take precedence of the K. C. recognition. Mrs. McLaren Morrison has opened the eyes of a myopic multitude to the charms of many rare and interesting breeds; it is her ambition to bring forward and make known those that might otherwise peek and pine in the seclusion and insignificance that absence from K. C. classification necessarily implies; and she has succeeded admirably in her role of canine Columbus. Through her efforts, united with those of Mr. Alan Francis, the Lhasa Terrier has come to stay; the lovely Thibet Spaniel is winning its way slowly, but, with the weight of her influence, surely; the Iceland dogs have found admiration and justice, for they are quick, sagacious, affectionate and hardy; and now the Samoyede dogs are passing through a period of probation that should also result in success. Samoyede dogs are full of individuality, as is always the case when a breed is of practical utility to its owner, and its faculties are, therefore, cultivated. They are full of intelligence and sense, and make capital pets, for they are very clever and very affectionate.

The Samoyede dogs are considered the "sacred dogs of Archangel," as each bears a white mark on its breast, which the natives liken to the form of a cross. They are most loving and faithful dogs and soon win their way into the affection of their owners.

An interesting item of news in connection with the L. K. A. Coronation Show in June is that the first separate class ever arranged for Samoyedes will be provided, and possibly even two classes may be forthcoming, which enterprise the owners of these dogs may feel justified in attributing to the warm interests of Mrs. McLaren Morrison.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

THE FARM.

Pastures for the Pigs.

The pasture for the swine of all ages is a very important matter in growing hogs. There is no time in the life of the hog that a nice, well kept pasture is not a valuable adjunct to the industry, says the Nebraska Farmer. It is especially valuable to the little growing pig to the breeding sow and to the shoat that is merging into hoghood. In fact, there is no condition of swine growth, from the suckling pig to the mature fat hog, for which a pasture is not serviceable.

The hog pasture must be more than an open lot or field, barren of nutritious grasses. Many hog pastures are little more than exercise lots. They have no pasture grasses growing on them, some never had, others have been pastured so close by overstocking that they have ceased to be pastures. The grass has given way to weeds and they are devoid of the real advantages that swine should receive from pastures.

It is not necessary to fence off large tracts at great expense and call them hog pastures. A hog pasture cannot be made from native grasses. It requires a tame grass pasture for swine, either alfalfa or red clover. Other grasses are sometimes used and may be used to advantage if made into a solid, permanent pasture.

The cheapest, quickest and best hog pasture is the alfalfa. It is a rank grower and keeps ahead of the hogs, this is an important feature, to have a pasture that is a full supply for the herd of swine. In pasturing hogs, it is best to have small inclosures and arranged so the herd can rotate in grazing, taking one pasture one week, another the next and so on, thus keeping on practically fresh grass all the time. A few acres can be made to pasture a large number of hogs when confined to suitable lots.

The hog pasture is an auxiliary to the feed lot. It should not be made to take the place of the feed lot or the corn crib. The hog raiser who makes a success of hog raising and hog feeding will use the pasture to help in the growth and health of his hogs. A large hog lot with adjoining pastures is a convenience that the hog raiser should provide on the farm. The hogs can thus be let onto the pastures at will and shut off to suit the demands.

The pasture is almost as important as the feed lot. If you have not the alfalfa hog pasture you should lose no time in starting one. Some sow rape for the hogs to pasture on, others sow rye, while some sow sorghum. Any green crop is better than a dry lot. Swine of all ages should be supplied with a liberal allowance of green feed and the more permanent this supply can be made the cheaper it will be and the less liability to neglect in this important feature of hog feed.

When Brood Sows Should Be Sold.

Many farmers and breeders, thinking their brood sows too old for longer service, market them when they are just in their prime. The age of brood sows has much to do with their value as workers. They should be retained as breeders as long as they breed regularly and produce good litters. When a sow, three or four years of age, fails in this respect, the trouble may be traced to underfeeding too much of the time, breeding when too thin in flesh and keeping her in that condition while in farrow. Too often this half-starved condition causes the sow to become unruly and hard to keep in an enclosure and she is apt to eat whatever is within her reach, whether or not it is the kind of feed she should have, says the Prairie Farmer.

Oftentimes a sow when inclined to break through her inclosure can be restrained by ringing. In the meantime and before the sow has to use her nose again the weak places in the fence should be strengthened. A rail fence, light in weight and easily broken, is not of much use in restraining a hungry sow.

Many farmers accept it as a fact that the moment a three year old brood sow becomes unruly she must be disposed of.

When from two to six years old a brood sow should be a regular worker. If her strength and vigor seem to break during these four years of work, do not cast her aside, but give her a short period of rest. This rest is more profitable for the owner than to send the sow to market and put a young untried one in her place. Continued grain feeding, especially corn, in too great quantities, quickly lessens the sow's usefulness. Eating the hard corn wears out the teeth before the other parts of the body show signs of weakness.

One sure sign of old age and diminishing value is too many runts in a litter. When one or more runts appear in a litter of ten or more pigs, the farmer, as a rule, does not place this against the sow. But if at each succeeding farrowing the number of runts increases, then he is justified in sending the sow to market and selecting another to fill her place. Occasionally a sow can be bred till she is nine or ten years, and sometimes longer. The idea that a sow is no longer useful after she becomes three or four years old should be done away with and the sow used as long as she is valuable as a pig-producer.

The Gas Engine's Answer.

You ask if I have a trade? I certainly have. When I am on the farm I saw wood, grind feed, shell corn, churn, butter, pump water, etc., and when in town I run printing presses, ice cream freezers, ventilating fans, dynamos, elevators, coffee mills, and have many other jobs. Now I want a place and am willing to work cheap. I am a self-contained gasoline engine, and not confined to any one place. If it is not convenient for you to bring your work to me, I can go with you and put in as long a day's work as you wish me to. Write for prices and terms. Certain chemicals of a disinfectant nature are sometimes put into milk for the purpose of destroying germ life. Salicylic acid, boracic acid, borax, formalin and carbonate of soda are the principal reagents used in this way. Their effect on the germs is not as marked as is supposed. As they can be added only in small quantities without detection but little is used; not enough to destroy the bacteria but simply to check their growth. Although these substances are not regarded as poisons they may have an injurious effect on the system when taken continuously in milk in small doses. A French commission, appointed to investigate the effect of such use of salicylic acid on the public health, reported that the addition of it or its derivatives to food, even in the most minute quantities, should not be permitted. Formaldehyde has an adverse effect on the digestibility of casein. It is believed in general, as these agents are successful in preventing natural fermentations, they will retard digestion in about the same proportions. The danger of preservatives is increased by the fact that they are used by ignorant persons who think that if a little is good more is better and therefore use them in excess. Another objection is that one accustomed to use preservatives may depend upon them as a substitute for cleanliness.

Shorthorns seem to keep penetrating farther and farther into the wilds where they have heretofore been unknown. English statistics show that a number of breeders in one town in Schleswig-Holstein paid 450 guineas for the bull Victor at the Riby Grove sale last summer, and a similar company paid 165 guineas for another Shorthorn bull at Lord Brougham's sale. Two bulls of this breed were sent to Japan, and one lone youngster was expatriated to Siam. Some very choice females were sent to Australia from English ports and some score and a half good bulls to New Zealand. South Africa took about twenty-five Shorthorn bulls from British breeders, and a larger number were billed to Russia, some having as their destination points far in the interior of Siberia.

Four fancy 117 lb. Colorado woolled lambs sold in Chicago last week for $7.60 per cwt.—the highest price of the season for woolled lambs, while some 66 lb. spring lambs brought $7.65. Some hogs brought $7.35 to $7.45, and steers $7.25 to $7.50.

A short time ago a rumor went forth that in view of the declaration of peace in South Africa the British had stopped the purchase of army mules in this country. This rumor was created by the sending out from St. Joseph, Missouri, of a press dispatch saying that telegraphic instructions had been received there ordering British agents to stop purchasing horses and mules. Inquiry develops that no such instructions have been received. More horses are needed now that the extreme uselessness of foot soldiers has been fully proved and it is no more than fair to presume that from this time forward the United States will always sell more or less of these horses to the European powers.

In several parts of the old world and in Australia the dairymen are working with a milking machine that is called a pulsator. This machine reproduces on the teat of the cow the alternating pressure that the calf uses in sucking and the human milker in milking. Reports are received from New Zealand of many dairymen having to reduce their herds on account of inability to get milkers to do that kind of work. Others again have dropped dairying for the same reason and have gone into stock-raising or grain-growing. Certainly the introduction of any machine that would really do the work of milkers would enormously increase the output of dairy products. The farm hand would receive it with joy, for he milks only because he is obliged to do so in order to hold his job.

PEDIGREE IN PART.

SIRE BY SIDNEY 2:19¼, sire of 17 in the 2:15 list, 7 better than 2:12, 3 better than 2:10, and Lenna N. 2:05¼ (champion record), and 96 in the charmed circle. Hattie dam of Monterey, is by that great sire of broodmares, Com. Belmont 4340, son of Alexander Belmont 64, sire of Nutwood 2:18¾. Barona, his second dam, is by Woodford's Mambrino 2:21¼, and his third dam, Miss Gratz, by Alexander Norman 25, sire of Lula 2:15; fourth dam by Gray Eagle, thoroughbred. His blood lines are of the choicest, and his wonderful speed has justly come to him. He is a grand stallion to look at; he has size and conformation to make him what he is—a king among stallions. His first crop of foals, two years old now, are very promising, as Walter S. Maben writes me as follows:

"I worked the Monterey two-year old to-day, March 26th, a half in 1:16, first quarter in 0:40¼, last eighth in 17 seconds, so you see he can step some and has but little work. He can trot faster than any colt I ever saw and do it easier."

Maben also writes that the Monterey colts are all fine, big, good-looking colts, and look to him (Maben) to be the real thing for stake winners. It will not be long before the breeders will be breeding to Monterey at a much larger fee than his present price. One thing is sure, it is hard for a stallion to work himself up without the support of the breeders, and yet I don't think that the cranks can keep him down, for if he reproduces himself the foals will be of such high class that the public cannot overlook them. Nowadays colts must be game to win big purses, and on this score I am on top, and speed also. Monterey will make this season, 1902.

JOTTINGS.

Peter Williams, who took a day off from work on his fruit farm to come to the city this week, makes the suggestion that some of the associations offer a fair sized purse for a mixed race for 2:09 or 2:10 trotters and pacers. He says that there does not seem to be much chance of starting his horse Monterey 2:09 this year unless races of this description are offered, as classes for trotters with records of 2:10 or better will not fill. He says he is willing to trot Monterey against the 2:10 class pacers, and while he realizes that it is a handicap to a trotter to start him against the side-wheelers, he is willing to do it in this instance rather than get no racing at all. Monterey is just out of the stud, where he made a very fair season and was bred to a good proportion of well bred mares, but he is getting plenty of slow work (fifty or sixty miles a week) and is looking and doing well. If he got to a race of this class in good shape he would make the side-wheelers wiggle mighty fast to beat him, as his record is not the measure of his speed by considerable.

A friend sends me word from Portland, Oregon, that Henry Helman's good trotter Ned Thorne 2:11 by Billy Thornhill has gone wrong and been thrown out of training. Helman doesn't propose to be left out of the fast classes up north however, so he has put Boodle 2:12 at work and will try and get the son of Stranger ready for the races. I mentioned this fact to a horseman here who "knows Boodle intimately," as Farmer Bunch would say, and he ventured the prediction that Boodle would race well and perhaps reduce his record. This reminds me that there are quite a number of stallions in California that have been on the retired list for some years that could be made ready to race and in all probability be able to knock a few seconds from their records. Boodle was foaled in 1886, and is therefore sixteen years old, but he is as stout and vigorous as ever in his life and when taking exercise trots with a more even gait than when he took his record at Los Angeles in 1895. Goldsmith Maid, the dam of his sire, got her record of 2:14 when she was seventeen and had trotted in many a hard race through several years of campaigning before that time.

Miles in 2:15 are getting rather frequent according to reports from the different race tracks, quite a number of pacers and not a few trotters being credited by the track gossips with showing speed of this high order. I have heard of miles this fast by pacers at Stockton, Vallejo, Pleasanton, Sacramento, San Jose and one or two other places, and the San Jose, Alameda and Napa tracks are quoted as the scene of miles trotted in 2:15 during the past week. A mile in 2:15 under the most favorable circumstances in June will not insure a horse's ability to step three heats that fast in August, however; that is, it won't with a majority of conservative horsemen. The old plodder that goes four or five heats on workout days in from 2:20 to 2:25, never showing a burst of 2:15 speed during any part of it, but comes out eager and anxious when led out for his jog next morning, is more likely to win than the horse that reels off a heat or two in 2:15 one day and wants to lie down in his stall the week following. No trainer whose horse is working miles around 2:20 these days and doing it nicely without an aftermath of filled legs and other ailments need get frightened about the fast miles he hears of the other fellow's horse doing. The more haste in the early months the less speed in the later ones is often, yes, very often, the case. If your horse is a trotter or pacer that shows speed and stamina enough to make you think he is a race horse, keep him in as good shape as possible and try to have him fit and able to go three or more heats in the race he first starts in. Never mind the stories about the speed of other horses. The only time you will know for certain how your horse compares with them is when you meet them in an actual race.

One of the best looking daughters of McKinney 2:11 that has been seen on the training tracks of California is Sam Hoy's mare Rita H., whose picture appears among others on the front page of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN this week. She is a large dark bay, I should judge full sixteen hands and weighing 1050 at least. She don't look a bit like a pacer, but she is one of the slickest sidewheelers in the country. Her dam is a mare called Smut by Prompter 2305, and her second dam was by Tecumseh. Prompter was a son of Blue Bull, brought to this State by the late Dr. M. W. Hicks, and there are a very large proportion of his get that have size and good looks. A lot of fast pacers carry the blood of Prompter. He sired Creole 2:15 that in turn sired Javelin 2:08. A full sister to Creole is the grandam of Sir Albert S.

2:08. The dam of Rita H. is also the dam of Brilliantine 2:17, a dun colored mare that could pace a half mile in a minute and might have had a record of 2:10 or better could she have been controlled during the first part of the mile. Rita H. is unlike Brilliantine in appearance and action. She has a good head and her burst of speed is phenomenal. She worked a mile in 2:14 last year as a three year old, and Mr. Hoy concluded she was good enough to keep for a year. She looks to me like a very high class mare, and as she is well entered through the California circuit we will have a chance to see whether she is or not. Her first start will be at Napa, where she will meet a bunch of greens that are all pretty warm. Gertie A. by Diablo is one of the green things entered in this same race at Napa. She is the mare Det Bigelow purchased a few weeks ago from a Rio Vista farmer and has already worked a mile better than 2:15. She is not a very heavy mare, having a make-up considerably like a thoroughbred. Her neck is rather long and lean and she looks like a mare that will pace very fast when in good condition. Admonte by Advertiser is another pacer whose reputation as a whirlwind has already reached here from Los Angeles. He has beaten 2:15 several times lately it is said and has a look-in for first money in this race. He is entered by S. D. Washington, a colored trainer who understands how to condition a horse as well as the next man. T. B. Barstow of San Jose may be right up in the front rank with his mare Alone by his horse Nearest 2:22, full brother to John A. McKerron. Alone has paced some very fast trials, and her way of going is just about right for one to go through the circuit with. Chas. Whitehead's filly The Mrs. is another good one, and is much talked of around Stockton, as Topsy was last year. There are three or four more entered in the green class pace at Napa, and when they meet look out for one of the best races on the circuit. One thing that makes me think it will be a great race is the fact that if you tell the owner of any horse entered how fast you have seen one of the others work he does not look a bit frightened but insists that his own horse will be in the money no matter how fast they go. So I look for a lot of good contests in this class during the circuit.

While at the Sacramento track a few hours last Saturday I was shown a bay gelding owned by Lester Nichols of Vallejo. Vet Tryon is training him and no better looking six year old gelding have I seen led out for inspection for some time. Mr. Tryon tells me he is one of the best road horses he ever saw, being one of that up headed toppy sort that have plenty of life and spirit but are not afraid of cars, automobiles or anything else. He has always had speed and the very first time he was shod when a three year old stepped a quarter in 32 1/2 seconds, which is phenomenal to say the least. As he wears no boots of any kind on the road or track and can be driven by a lady with safety he is highly valued by his owner. His breeding is given as by Tom Benton. The fact is his dam Superba by James Madison was bred to Tom Benton and Hawthorne both in 1895. This gelding looks to most horsemen more like Hawthorne than he does like the Bentons. His head is very much like that of Little Thorne 2:07, but he is a much larger horse, standing over 16 hands. I understand Mr. Nichols has a gelding that mates him, although not quite so fast. This fellow can pace a mile in 2:15 or better almost any day and if the mate can keep up with him at a 2:30 clip they should make a very high-class team. Mr. Nichols believes they can pole in 2:20.

Azmoor 2:20, the Electioneer stallion that Mr. H. W. Davis of Auburn purchased at the Palo Alto sale last January for $210, is a grand looking horse. He is 15 1/2 hands, a handsome bay and weighs all of 1200 I should think. He is twenty years old but one would never guess him at more than half that age. Mr. Tryon, who has had charge of him, reports that Azmoor has served forty-eight mares so far this year. The horse looks good for a dozen years of service yet and was certainly a good investment. I suppose some would not consider him a fashionably bred animal even though he is by Electioneer, as his dam was a thoroughbred mare. Well, as this thoroughbred mare is the dam of three trotters with standard records and has a Williamson's Belmont cross in her veins, Azmoor is in my opinion as well bred as any trotter in America. Azmoor has produced three in the 2:15 list, was a consistent race horse and that he is a good individual no one can deny. Look out for his daughters; they will be producing 2:10 performers pretty often before long. One of them started off last year with Rowellan 2:15 as a three year old. The Electioneer and thoroughbred blood makes a mighty combination when mixed just right.

When the late Tom Keating purchased Don Derby, full brother to Diablo 2:09, for James Butler, of New York, there were many whisperings among the members of the Knocking Club that a gilded brick had been worked off at a good price. Keating gave the colt some pretty stiff work and the result was a swelled set of legs and the knocking became louder and louder. Don Derby went East and last year was started twice. He won the first heat of his first race, which was a five heat affair with nineteen starters, and although he was 2-2 in the last two heats, which were won in 2:11 1/2 and 2:12 1/2, and second in 2:11 1/2 in a big field in his second race, the knockers beat a regular tattoo on the horse's reputation and made it look like a defective piece of armor plate after a trial in resisting solid shot from an eight-inch gun. Mr. Butler has never believed Don Derby was of the gilded variety, but pure stuff, and from the way the five year old son of Chas. Derby and Bertha is working he certainly has a pretty good foundation for his belief. One day last week he saw John Kelly drive Don Derby three workout heats and the pacer stepped them in 2:10 1/2, 2:09 and 2:08 1/2. Now, a gold brick horse never stepped three miles like that, and while Don Derby may have to go against horses that have more speed and fail to win, the fact that he is a fast and game horse has been thoroughly demonstrated to my mind by this three heat workout. Since the above was written the New York Sun of last Friday has arrived, giving an account of the second matinee of the New York Driving Club at the Empire City track. One of the events was a two in-three race at mile heats between Mr. Butler's Don Derby 2:13, Mr. Billings' Hontas Crook 2:07 1/2, and Mr. Jones' Dr. Monical 2:09 1/2. The race was won by Don Derby in straight heats in 2:10 1/2 and 2:11. This race was to wagon, and the second quarter of the first heat was in 30 seconds, and Don Derby finished both heats very handily. Yes, Don Derby is a gold brick—but of the 24 carat kind.

There was a collision at the San Jose track one day last week that was a very lucky one for two men and two very valuable pacers, so far as their lives are concerned, but rather disastrous financially, as a speed cart and a sulky were smashed to smithereens. Dr. Boucher and John Gordon had agreed to work their pacers, Miss Logan 2:06 1/2 and Yukon, together. The Doctor got away first and Gordon, with the little Bay Bird horse, thought it was a go and started after the mare. Boucher concluded to turn and come back, not knowing that Gordon was coming at speed, and just as he pulled out a horse coming the reverse way took the room necessary for Gordon to pass and the latter collided with Dr. Boucher, with the result that both sulkies were smashed. Fortunately Miss Logan got clear of the harness and ran round the track. Gordon fell right under the heels of Yukon and the little horse behaved like a gentleman. He stopped still and did not offer to kick once. Gordon was extricated from his perilous position, Miss Logan was caught and when examinations were made there were nothing worse than a few slight scratches to be found on men or horses, but the cart and the bike were out of business and two new ones had to be purchased.

Douglas Cone, the well known capitalist, farmer and stock breeder, of Red Bluff, was in this city this week. He says the story about Budd Doble taking his stallion Kinney Lou over East is all right, with the exception of the statement that Doble bought the horse. Kinney Lou is still the property of Mr. Cone and Doble will race him over East and give him a low mark, as Mr. Cone says the services of the horse are in great demand in Butte county and he does not want to sell him. A picture of Kinney Lou with Budd Doble up behind him adorns the front page of the Western Horseman of June 20th. The son of McKinney is a very handsome horse.

Stockton's Big Meeting.

Six thousand dollars in purses is offered by that sterling organization, the Stockton Driving Club, for harness races at its fair and race meeting to be held September 23d to 27th inclusive, this year.

The Chamber of Commerce Stake, $1000, is for 2:24 class trotters.

The Gas City Stake, $1000, is for 2:20 class pacers. Five hundred dollars each is given the 2:40, 2:30, 2:19, and 2:14 class trotters.

Five hundred dollars each is given the 2:12, 2:15, 2:25, and green class pacers.

In the five hundred dollar purses horses are to be named with entries which close August 1st.

In the $1000 stakes nominations must be made August 1st, but horses are not to be named until Saturday evening, September 8th, at the close of the Woodland meeting.

Stockton has one of the best tracks in California and the Driving Club will spare no pains to make this the best meeting ever held over it.

This meeting follows the State Fair and immediately precedes the Breeders' meeting at San Jose, so that those who race at those two meetings, should enter at Stockton as it is right in line.

Notes and News.

Racing has commenced.

Good program at San Jose Saturday.

Vallejo's meeting opens the circuit August 11th.

Vic Shellar 2:15½ worked a mile in 2:14½ at San Jose last week.

Zombro 2:11 has been mated with 80 mares so far this season.

Big money at the State Fair this year. See the purses advertised.

Monterey 2:09½ will be put in training again for the races this year.

Entries for the purses which closed July 1st will appear next week.

C. J. Hamlin, now 83 years of age, will attend the Blue Ribbon meeting at Detroit.

Dan McCarthy purchased a pair of mares the other day for $190 and the following day got $400 for them.

Ed Geers says that quarters in 30 seconds are more injurious to horses at this time of the year than miles in 2:12.

There is a great demand for good swipes up North. Nearly every trainer in Washington and Oregon wants one or more.

Payments were numerous in the Breeders Futurity for foals of mares bred in 1901. The full list will appear next week.

Jack Garrity, who is working Robert I. at San Jose track, will give that son of Hambletonian Wilkes a low mark with ordinary luck.

James Berryman is now occupying the stalls at Alameda track that were vacated by J. M. Nelson when the latter took his string East.

Parties wanting to ship one, two, three or more horses East can hear of an opportunity by addressing this office within the next week.

The owner of Coney 2:02 will not start the pacer until fall. Then he will be out loose for the world's record, now held by Star-Pointer 1:59½.

Effie Logan, dam of Sir Albert S. 2:08½, is to be bred to Diablo again by her owner, Mr. McNerny, of Honolulu. She will be sent over this month.

It is reported from New York that Johnny Dickerson is getting along splendidly with Anaconda 2:01½ and can rate him and place him as he desires.

Marysville is trying to raise a guaranteed fund of $3000 for the district fair this year. The date of the fair is the week of August 25th to 30th inclusive.

Barney Simpson is training a couple of Chas. Derbys at the Alameda track that are highly spoken of. One is a trotter, the other a pacer, and both are fast.

There are only three or four of the get of Prof. Heald's stallion Pilot Prince in training this year, but they will all be able to enter the list of standard performers.

Look over Stockton's program. There are purses for all classes of trotters and pacers—none less than $500, and two big stakes of $1000 each. Entries close August 1st.

Budd Doble has shipped his horses from Indianapolis to Cleveland. He has the stallion Kinney Lou and the road mares Maud Newman and Neerbell, besides one or two more.

Bonnie Direct 2:05½ is being jogged and worked a little. He has just ended a good season in the stud. He may be sent to lower his record this fall at some of the district fairs.

Humboldt Maid 2:14½ is to be out again this year and the game little daughter of Waldstein is said to be trotting quarters in 32 seconds handily and looking like a record reducer.

Hartford will have both of the $40,000 races. The Boralma-Lord Derby race will be settled at Charter Oak Park on August 2d and the Boralma-The Abbot race on August 30th.

Primrose by Falrose won a race in straight heats at the matinee of the Los Angeles Driving Club last Saturday, the heats being in 2:11½ and 2:11. Sweet Marie was second both heats.

Ed Winship, the bay gelding by Raymon out of Gipse, the dam of Gazelle 2:11½, reduced his record to 2:15 at Denver last Friday in the second heat of a race he won in straight heats.

Jack Groom will be on the circuit again this year, and although he may not have another Sir Albert S. his horses will be well mannered and in good condition, and he will get the speed out of them if they have any.

Golden Gate Fair Association will hold its meeting at Pleasanton. With the $2000 offered by the citizens of that place and a two years' appropriation of $7000, a rattling good fair and race meeting should be held.

Reports are to the effect that Country Jay has trotted a half in 1:01½. If this is true and he holds his form as well as he did last season, there will be some one besides Country Jay looking for a hole in the fence to get through.

Monte Carlo by Mendocino is omitted from the table of horses that took new records in 1901 in the Year Book. but in the summaries of his races, his record of 2:14½ is properly given. The record was made at Sacramento at the State Fair.

The black pacing stallion Stipulator by Titus (full brother to Direct 2:05½) out of Grace Kaiser, the dam of Coney 2:02, is now in training at the Joliet, Illinois, track, and working miles around 2:10. He is owned by Kay & Wilson of Los Angeles.

Monroe Salisbury returned last week from his trip to Cleveland and Salt Lake City. The consignment of road horses he sent to Salt Lake sold at good prices—none less than $500 and the highest $1000. His venture was a most successful one.

See the big purses hung up by the California State Agricultural Society. Two purses of $1200 each, four of $1000 each, a stake of $500 for three year old pacers and a special race for amateur drivers, with $1000 worth of prizes. Entries close August 2.

Hans Frellson is training a big gelding by Direct 2:05½ at Napa that will be a factor in the slow trotting classes on the circuit. This horse belongs to Captain Matson, of this city, and has never raced, but is a very likely candidate for 2:15 honors this year.

Says the New York Times: A 3000-pound automobile capable of running one mile in 50 seconds, and doing it, is as much out of place in a road race or anywhere on the public highways, as a Gatling gun introduced into a hotel for the purpose of killing cockroaches.

The Electioneer blood is coming to the front this year with a rush. The brown gelding Edgewood by Election (son of Electioneer and May Queen by Norman) won the second heat of a race at Belmont Park, Baltimore, June 17th, in 2:12½, distancing the field.

The meeting at Minneapolis opened July 1st. While no account of the results had been received up to the time of our going to press, there was a report here yesterday that Will Welch won second money in the race in which he started the pacer Uncle John by Chas. Derby.

The three heats by Charlie Mac at Pueblo in 2:16½, 2:17½ and 2:18, winning about as he pleased, was a great performance for a poor half-mile track. Charlie Mac worked a mile in 2:10 at Denver the week following and did it easily, as his trainer did not intend to step him better than 2:12.

A little "funny business" was tried in the sixth heat of the 2:15 class trot at Colorado Springs, June 13th, but the judges nipped it in the bud, called it no heat and declared all bets off. In this heat the judges alleged that Silversign was not driven to win and that McKenna was shooed in.

Ed Geers' mare, Bessie Hal, the dam of Direct Hal, is likely to be a great broodmare in the near future. A Buffalo man recently saw Mr. Geers' assistant, Ben White, drive her four year old son, High Pointer by Cloud Pointer, brother to Star Pointer, a mile in 2:15½, a half in 1:04½ and a quarter in 31½ seconds.

The first new 2:15 performer of the year is the pacing mare Evadne by Red Wilkes. She has carried a record of 2:15½ since 1897, but during the recent Baltimore meeting she reduced it to 2:14½. She is the twenty-second of Red Wilkes' get to get into the 2:15 list, and her sire is still living and vigorous at 28 years of age.

The three year old filly Bugle by Athel, brother to Arion 2:07½ out of Nancy Stam by Stamboul 2:07½, second dam Nancy Lee, dam of Nancy Hanks 2:04, is regarded as a high class trotter. She is owned by Hon. Hugh J. Grant of New York, and Scott McCoy recently drove her a mile in 2:20, last quarter in 33 seconds.

O. M. Danielson, proprietor of Danielson Stock Farm, has sold the celebrated pacing stallion Manager 2:06½ to A. G. F. Stice, proprietor of Rose Hill Stock Farm, Brookfield, Mo., where he will head the stud. He also took two yearling fillies with him—one by Manager, dam by Pangold, the other by Manager, dam by Ambassador.

In the spring prize at Vienna, Austria, five American bred horses started, the winner being Maurine 2:13½, she beating Henrietta 2:12½ rather handily, trotting 2800 meters in 4:02 1-5. Greenbrino 2:10½ was third, Helen A. 2:17½ fourth, and Contralto 2:10 fifth. The winner was in receipt of 20 meters from Henrietta and 100 from Greenbrino.

Sudie D., yearling record 2:35½, and once champion yearling, foaled recently a bay filly by Wanderer, son of Pedlar. She has been bred to Freedom 2:29½, champion yearling of his day, and her owner says that if he has good luck with her he will have the foal by Freedom trained as a yearling, with a view to lowering the present yearling record of 2:23, held by Adbell.

H. R. Ward, who is training Under-Sheriff Daly's good Altamont colt Osmont at the Napa track, was thrown out of his sulky the other day by the breaking of a rein, but beyond a few bruises was not injured. The colt was caught before he had done any further damage. Osmont is working miles around 2:20 and will very likely get a mark down in the teens this year.

Sam Hoy, who lives at Winters and runs over to Sacramento twice a week to work his horses, spends part of the time when he is at home making goo goo eyes at a two year old by his stallion Bayswater Wilkes out of Claribel by Privateer, that paced a mile in 2:25 as soon as he knew how to go straight in the shafts. This two year old is owned by Ben Griffin, of Winters.

No trotter at Lexington track moves more impressively in harness than Carrie Bel, record 2:14½ at three years old, in J. H. Thayer's stable. She was one of the few really high class three year olds out last season, and as she shows marked improvement this spring over the form she displayed at this time last year, having gained in substance and speed, the chances are that she will fully sustain the claim made for her, that she is one of the surest 2:10 probabilities in training.

Adbell 2:28, the champion yearling trotter of the world, and lately bought by W. W. Estill for $10,000, has just six foals four years old. Of these, two are Futurity winners, Rowellan, three year old mark, 2:15½ trotting, being the fastest by the records. Another has a mark of 2:25½, while one is in the breeding ranks never developed. That leaves two to be accounted for, and it is said that both have shown speed enough to win in the Grand Circuit. At the November sale in Madison Square Garden two yearlings by Adbell averaged $725 and six weanlings $558 per head, showing how highly he is appreciated as a sire.

Good judges who have seen Lord Derby 2:06½ in his recent workouts at Detroit are of the opinion that if he continues to act as he is acting now, he will not only beat Boralma in his race with that horse, but he will also beat The Abbot when he meets his former stable companion. The son of Mambrino King seems to have forgotten the erratic notions that handicapped him last year and is now one of the cleverest horses imaginable. His trainer, George Spear, is one of the best men in the business when it comes to getting into the confidence of a bad acting horse, and he and Lord Derby seem to understand each other thoroughly.

At Los Angeles this week the horses belonging to Mr. Fred B. Taylor were sold at auction. The bright, particular star of the stable was Primrose 2:13 by Falrose. She went to J. Barnett, of Albuquerque, N. M., at $1300, and it is understood that she is to be raced in the Middle West. Milo M. Potter started the bidding at $400, but soon dropped out and the bidding was left to Byron Erkenbrecher and Barnett. Erkenbrecher's last bid was $1250. The other animals brought the following prices: Bay mare Adelaide to C. J. George, $200; bay mare Bessie Holly to C. A. Sumner, $200. The other stable paraphernalia went at low figures.

Ex-Queen Nancy Hanks 2:04, has foaled a bay filly sired by Bingen 2:06½, at Forbes Farm. It is own sister to Admiral Dewey 2:14½, last season's sensational three year old, and highly prized by his owner, J. Malcolm Forbes. Since retiring, Nancy Hanks has produced Marion by Arion; Princess of Monaco by imp. Meddler; Admiral Dewey 2:14½ by Bingen 2:06½; Markala, by Peter the Great 2:07½, and now the Bingen filly—a grand family, all fillies save Admiral Dewey. Marion and Princess of Monaco are used as broodmares, the former having recently foaled a handsome filly by Bingen. No other turf queen has proved as prolific at the stud as has Nancy Hanks.

The first heat in 2:10 for the year was paced at the Readville meeting on Wednesday of this week by the mare Carthage Girl by Dedron, a pacing grandson of Onward. Carthage Girl took a record of 2:13½ last year and started at Readville Wednesday in a purse of $500 for 2:12 class pacers. She won the second heat in 2:09½, the first mile in 2:10 in a race this year, and also won the race. The racing at Readville was especially good for the opening of the season. Three races were given. In the last race of the day, the 2:21 class trot, Vendome by Iran Alto, sold at the Blue Ribbon sale in May, was a starter, but was outside the money. The three heats of this race were in 2:15½, 2:13½ and 2:16½. Mrs. Brown by Hinder Wilkes was the winner.

Walter Maben has won the Occident Stake several times—winning last year with the Zombro filly Italia. He is training another Zombro at the present time, at the Los Angeles track, that looks like an even money shot at this stage of the game for the stake this year. She has a peculiar name—Zombowette—but she is a trotter all right. Last week Walter worked her a mile in 2:18½, the last half in 1:07½, which is money winning speed for sure. She is entered in the Stanford Stake as well. Her dam is by Silver Bow. Walter sold a Zombro filly the other day for $700 that he would like to buy back at the price. She is just thirteen months old and last week stepped a quarter for him in 41 seconds and an eighth in 19½. Mr. W. Coleman, of Los Angeles, is the owner of the filly now. She is entered in the Breeders Futurity, $6000 for foals of 1901. Charles Winship told Geo. Beckers, the owner of Zombro, before he left for Oregon, that he expected to see him retire soon on Zombro's earnings and purchase an automobile, but George answered: "Not on your life; the sight of one makes me sick, let alone the smell of the vile machine."

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

Horse News From the Horse Centre.

PLEASANTON, June 30, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—With profound regret I am compelled to inform you that I have disposed of my interest in the black three year old colt Excel to that prince of good fellows, A. J. Molero of Monterey, California, for no other reason than the present lack of funds in the Gamble family treasury.

With age and proper management, which all stallions must have to become renowned, I predict for him a future not only as a great sire but as a 2:15 or better trotter, and no gentleman ever sat behind a more perfect road horse than this handsome and high bred youngster. If any bachelor will drive this son of Axtell through Golden Gate Park once, the public will notice very soon thereafter in front of some place of worship a long string of carriages, the organ will be playing the wedding march and there will be rice scattered all over the lawn. If not it will be the driver's fault and not the colt's. The only link now missing in Mr. Molero's chain is the Stam B. link. This horse is the next coming great sire of California high class harness horses.

In and about Pleasanton there is a quiet state of affairs at present. Chas. Griffith has a small but select string at work in Bert Webster's care.

Monroe Salisbury has just returned from Cleveland and Salt Lake and is now enjoying seeing his fast gelding Monte Carlo 2:14½ work out over this track. From the little that I have seen of this sweet going gelding, all the prospects for the 2:12 and matinee classes have not been shipped to the other side of the Rocky Mountains.

William Cecil has a promising lot of youngsters by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½.

George A. Kelly is trying to purchase my red vest to wear when he drives his handsome young colts—one by McKinney 2:11½ out of Bonsilene 2:14½ by the only Stamboul, the other a roan by Antrim (sire of Anzella 2:10½) dam by Jay Bird, sire of Allerton 2:09½.

S. K. Trefry still predicts that he will get all the money in another season with his daughter of Zombro 2:11, and his two speedy young geldings by Diablo 2:09½.

Honest and merry Worth Ober has a few handsome roadsters left yet, but will ship them to-morrow to the Sharon Estate farm at Hanford. It will be as sad for me to give Mr. Ober the parting handshake as it was for me to give Excell my parting tap upon his handsome and intelligent head.

The people of this thriving and enterprising town of Pleasanton and suburbs are delighted over the prospects of the Golden Gate Fair Association holding its next fair here in August. No sooner did the directors of that association make known their wants to three or four of our leading business men than notice was served on all that there would be a meeting held in Nevis pavilion. The place was packed with people at the appointed time. After the meeting was called to order, and remarks made by a few speakers, the chair appointed a committee of three, headed by that never tiring hustler and excellent caterer, D. F. Tillman, proprietor of the Rose Hotel, a house familiar and popular with all weary and worn out travelers and horsemen as a place of rest and refuge. The committee was appointed for the purpose of calling upon the citizens with a subscription list to aid the fair, and in less than four hours the amount required by the Golden Gate Association was at its disposal. It is now up to them. Yours respectfully,

STAM B. EXCEL GAMBLE.

San Jose's Fair and Race Meeting.

Owing to the national holiday falling on Friday this year, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN goes to press on Thursday, the day on which the San Jose fair and race meeting will open. The program of races for the opening day will be as follows:

Trotting, 2:40 class—purse $500—C. A. Durfee, Lijero by McKinney; W. G. Durfee, Coronado by McKinney; L. Anderson, Cicero by —; Chas. L. Becker, Faust by —; W. Masten, Tuberosa by Falrose; E. P. Heald, Prince Howard by Dexter Prince; T. J. Crowley, Babiola by Chas. Derby; J. A. Kidward, Kitty C. by —.

Pacing, 2:25 class—purse $500—C. W. Welby, Yukon by Bay Bird; T. W. Harris, Dan Alden by Nutwood Wilkes; W. Masten, Dixon Maid by Falrose; E. P. Heald, Nance O'Neill by Pilot Prince; W. H. Williams, Motanic by Chehalis; R. I. Moorhead, Robert I. by Hamb. Wilkes; C. F. Bunch, Del Oro by Oro Wilkes.

July 4th, the national holiday, will be specially celebrated with one great feature after another, an endless variety of good clean sport.

There will be a race for the 2:16 class, pacers and trotters, entries for which closed yesterday.

The great mule race will be driven by Durfee, Bunch, Gordon, Lafferty, Garrity and James. Mr. James brought his fast mule Hawkeye from Iowa with him and has an open challenge to any mule on the coast. It is virtually California versus Iowa in this great contest. This mule showed great speed in the workout Saturday.

The long distance female rider of the world, Mme. Sally Powers of Texas, the cattle queen of that State, will ride five miles against Britt Gruell of California, horses changed every mile on the fly. There will also be an exhibition of bronco and quick riding and the riding of a wild steer by Britt Gruell.

On July 5th, two good races will be given, with entries as follows:

Trotting, 2:25 class—purse $500—W. G. Durfee, Petigru by Kingward; L. Anderson, Cicero by —; E. P. Heald, Lady Rowena by Pilot Prince; C. L. Becker, Faust by —; Geo. E. Stickle, Stickle by Silver Bow; J. A. Kidward, Kitty C. by —.

Pacing, 2:12 class—purse $500—W. G. Durfee, Primrose by Falrose; Jos. Gabriel, Wild Nutling by Wildnut; Frank Hal, I Direct by Direct; T. W. Barstow, Fredericksburg by Nephew, Jr.

During the day Dr. Boucher's great mare Miss Logan 2:06½ will race against C. A. Durfee's runner Siverado. The runner is to be handicapped an eighth of a mile.

It is expected that the live stock exhibit will be an especially good one as a number of breeders have signified their intention of showing their stock.

San Jose will be a good place to spend the latter part of the week.

State Fair Prospects Excellent.

The State Board of Agriculture met last Saturday at Sacramento. Present: President Spreckels, Directors Cox, Rush, Terry, Johnson and Paine.

The premium list was revised on up-to-date ideas and new classes in live stock were provided for—special up-to-date changes in all classes.

The poultry classes are provided now to cover all breeds of birds, 125 classes.

Professor Carlyle of Wisconsin was appointed judge of live stock classes, H. Bower of poultry classes.

The dairymen's convention will be held; also the Creamery Association's buttermakers' contest at the coming fair.

The Speed Committee was authorized to announce twenty-four harness races and forty-eight running events.

The following purses for trotters were announced: 2:30 class, purse $1200; 2:20 class, purse $1000; 2:15 class, purse $1000.

Pacing races—2:25 pace, purse $1200; 2:18 pace, purse $1000; 2:13 pace, purse $1000.

Pacing purse for three year olds, purse $500. To close August 1st. Horses to be named September 1st. All heats three in five, and a horse not winning a heat in four to go to stable, but retain his position in race.

The amateur driving races for a trophy of $1000 for pacers and trotters.

The remaining fourteen races for harness classes, for which liberal purses will be offered, to be announced in August, to close September 1st, when horses are to be eligible, and the Speed Committee will appreciate information as to classes that will produce good contests from all horsemen interested in the advancement of the interest of harness horses.

The running stakes are of the same value and conditions as last year—the overnight purses from $200 to $300, will be overnight events and announced before the opening of the fair.

The following committee was appointed to confer with the Chamber of Commerce Committee to advance suggestions to secure an attractive exhibit at the pavilion: Grove L. Johnson, F. Cox, Charles Paine and Secretary Jackson.

A vote of thanks was passed thanking Mayor Geo. H. Clark and the Board of Trustees for reducing the license from $500 to $5.

The Secretary was authorized to communicate with the different band leaders to secure the best available bands for the coming fair.

From the correspondence and applications received the Board is satisfied that this fair will be the most attractive yet held in Sacramento, especially valuable to breeders of live stock of all classes.

Poultry raisers, dairy interests, horticulture, viticulture, etc., special new and attractive up-to-date exhibits are promised for the pavilion.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the President.

From correspondence received the Directors are more than satisfied that this fair will be the most attractive on educational lines and exhibits yet held by this society, especially on up-to-date live stock in all branches, poultry, dairy, viticulture and horticulture.

Especially new and attractive exhibits are promised for the pavilion.—Sacramento Record-Union.

Changes in Breeding.

With the revival of horse breeding as a profitable industry, the fact must be recognized that there has come a complete revolution in this business. The old methods will no longer prove profitable. We must raise for profit distinct types of horses for the market, and not generally all-round useful horses. We must define in our own minds the different types of horses in demand, and then work toward the production of the best specimens of one or more of these types.

These types, briefly stated, are the road, carriage and coach horse, the cab horse, the draught horse and the American trotter or road horse. One of these types should be selected in breeding horses for market, and the peculiar characteristics of each one studied and carefully understood. Breeding for a specific class is the only kind that pays to-day. The man who breeds on the old lines is doomed to failure. His horses will bring so much less in the market that there will be no margin left for profits.

One reason why horses became a drug in the market ten years ago was because farmers and breeders produced a surplus of horses which had no particular characteristics. They are not specially good in any line. Then a demand slowly grew up for horses which would excel in one particular class, and this has steadily increased until to-day it has become universal. The evolution in breeding has thus made it necessary for the farmer and breeder to know his particular class of horses thoroughly.

Promiscuous breeding does not pay, but special class or type breeding does. Every horse must be bred for a particular purpose, and if at the beginning the animal does not promise any good points for a particular purpose the sooner you can dispose of him the better. The small horse and the horse of mixed virtues have passed forever, and their day will never return.

Breed the large horse that is useful for particular lines on hauling, the road or coach horse, which can travel well, with a fair load, or the trotter, which can make speed. In one of these classes every horse must excel or he cannot bring the high market prices offered. Premiums are daily offered for the best animals of any class.—C. L. Peters, in Indiana Farmer.

From Cleveland comes the following interesting news under date of June 20th: "For the past ten days Dolly Dillon 2:07 has had the honor of doing the fastest quarter in 29½ seconds. She did still better Wednesday, it is said, when Millard Sanders worked her out with a runner at the wheel. The mile was made in 2:11, the last half in 1:01½ and the last quarter in the fast time of 29½ seconds. Lou Dillon also went a mile in 2:14, with the half in 1:06."

Why the Range Horse Bucks.

Range horses often buck. Nearly all range colts buck when first ridden. Eastern horses seldom have this trick. Why is it? The mother of the range colt may have in her veins the best blood. She is not often a broken horse. Perhaps she has never had a rope on her but once—when she was branded as a foal. She is infinitely wiser than the farm horse. She must be or she can not live. When she finds her little colt at her side she begins at once its education. And, by the way, this colt is born strong. There is no weak tendon or flabby muscle or soft bone in this colt. Its mother has ranged over the hills, pawed the grass from beneath the snow in winter and galloped far and wide with the band in summer. She has found sufficient nourishment but has not been overfed. The free active life has imparted to her offspring a strength of tissue and a vitality of body which are in sharp contrast with the farm-raised colt.

The mother takes her colt with her as soon as it has found itself and at once his education begins. "Keep away from that bush, it may shelter a lurking foe; beware that rock, upon it may lie a monster seeking to devour; look, look, look with eyes and ears and nostril, hurry through this thicket, keep with me in the open where nothing can approach us unseen." That is the burden of her charge and the colt heeds well. He learns to flee away over the swelling hills when that other horse comes in sight with that strange beast on his back we call man. Then the day comes when several of the beast-ridden horses approach and circling around the band of mares and colts start them toward the corral. Away they go with a dash, seeking to evade, and turn to the right or left, yet some way those beast-ridden horses always head them and turn them and they come within the wings of the corral. After a little futile dodging and turning the old mare, leader of them all, runs through the bars and they all thunder after her. Then amid the cloud of dust and running, terrified horses, the cow-boy appears, casts his rope, which falls over the colt's neck, and jerks him terrifically backward; another rope entangles his heels and he is thrown violently to the ground, when a cow-boy throws himself on his head; the strangling noose is loosened but he can not rise, struggle as he will, and next comes the hot iron that burns down through the hair and scorches the skin; he thinks he is being devoured but is surprised after a time to be allowed to get up and go. That is his first introduction to the ways of man.

Two or three years pass, then he is again run into the corral. Again, he feels the terror of the rope about his neck. This time he is drawn or "snubbed up" to the post. Then by careful work a raw-hide halter is worked over his nose and onto his head. Then a blind is drawn over his eyes. Perhaps no bit is put into his mouth since practices of "bronco-busters" vary in this regard. Very carefully the blanket is laid upon his back. He may crouch and tremble beneath the weight, he may throw it off. Then very carefully again the saddle is laid upon him. It is a great strong heavy saddle on which a horse may throw himself as often as he chokes and not injure it. Then with great care and patience the cinch is reached across underneath, the man receives it and cautiously puts the latigo strap through up into the ring, then with one quick pull draws it tight. Now he is saddled at least well enough so that he can hardly throw off the encumbrance. Perhaps he does not try very hard. The saddling is finished, the hind cinch is buckled. Then the horse is moved up. He may yet stand trembling in terror; he may now undertake to have the battle out and throw off what he naturally supposes is trying to devour him. And now comes the rider. He sees that every thing is well fastened and in place. He stands (in our mountain country) facing the horse's tail, the reins in his left hand, the quirt hanging from his right wrist. Probably he is as white as a ghost, with fear—not exactly, but it is a time when the blood does not circulate exactly freely. The main difference between the brave man and the coward is that the brave man does things when he is afraid, the coward does not, and the fear disappears in the act of doing. He catches his toe in the stirrup, the horn of the saddle with his right hand and swings into the saddle. If the horse springs forward at the time the advantage of facing towards the horse's tail is evident; he springs right under the rider. As soon as the rider is seated his color comes back, his fear is over when he is in active combat. For combat it is now, no longer any dalliance. The horse realizes that his enemy is astride him. He plunges about, arches his back, jumps wickedly with swift arching back into the air and comes down stiff-legged. That is bucking. The rider hangs on by the grip of his legs, the hold of his reins and the hold of his spurs in the horse's side. Sometimes the boots pull off and then the rider is unhorsed. The horse is simply trying to shake off the man as he would try to shake off a wild beast. After a time if he is a desperate fighter he tries another game; he rears and falls backward and tries to crush his rider. The rider steps swiftly off to one side, is on the ground before the horse and steps on again as the animal rises; that is, if he is a good rider he does this. If he is caught beneath the animal he rides no more broncos. When the horse is tired and sees the futility of bucking he starts to run. That is what the rider wants. His trouble now is over. After he is brought unwillingly and sulkily back to the corral and unsaddled, his rider, if the horse has been a bad and persistent fighter, is nearly exhausted. He lies down for a time and recovers. Three such rides make a "broken horse" on some ranches. And that is why some range horses buck.—Joseph E. Wing in Breeder's Gazette.

More Horse Farewells.

It used to be a custom among play actors and singing people to wring the public heart and public purse by a farewell tour repeated year after year. Patti, it will be recalled by veteran opera-goers, was so affected by the reluctance of the people to lose her matchless voice, that she continued her farewell tours until all her former associates had been long retired, and most of them had become grandmothers. The horse has been going through much the same experience. When the trolley car came the lovers of old Dobbin were told to bid him goodbye; and his extinction has been announced as imminent with every improvement in the automobile and in storage batteries. Yet the horse, although relieved of the hideous burden of overcrowded street cars, has continued to be very much in evidence not only on the farm but in the city streets and along the park drives.

This time Mr. Edison is authority for the information that horseflesh is to be valuable hereafter only as a substitute for beef. He announces that he has brought his new system of cheap and convenient storage so near to completion, and is so nearly ready to fit out every conceivable vehicle with this propelling force, that it would be foolish extravagance for anybody to support a horse or to use his own muscles to push anything along. Should this electrical wizard redeem every promise he has been tempted to make, there can be no doubt that his motor would displace the horse in a vast number of instances. Besides all the delivery wagons of the city, the wagons and perhaps the machines of the farm may yet whiz along by the use of the mysterious force. It is expected that a light runabout, costing but little more than the ordinary buggy and fitted with a motor far less expensive than the horse, will be used by all who can now afford to keep a horse, and that the number of people who will go about on wheels will be greater than ever.

Still, there is reason to think that the horse will continue to be with us. There will always be men who will prefer a high-stepping thoroughbred for their own use to any rattling, puffing automobile. No improvement in road locomotives can suppress the natural affection of men for a good horse. Perhaps for commercial purposes the horse may cease to be used, to the delight of all humane men whose hearts have bled over the cruelties of brutal drivers; but of fine pleasure and racing horses we shall probably always have many.—Philadelphia Record.

Peculiar Cause for Horse's Death.

A post mortem examination of the body of Gold Standard, the pacing horse that died at the Roswell track, Colorado Springs, revealed the fact that the horse did not die of gastritis, as was at first supposed. The examination made led the doctors to believe that the horse died as a result of the windstorm that swept down the track during the race in which Gold Standard competed. There was a heavy clot of blood found in the left ventricle of the heart, and the theory of the doctors now is that the great exertion put forth by the horse in rounding the north end of the track, dead against a violent wind, caused its nostrils to admit such a blast of air that the blood was driven from the horse's head and extremities generally to the heart, where it stopped and formed the clot that impeded circulation and caused death to result. The case is one of the most interesting on record.

Wagon vs. Sulky.

The annual crop of opinions, based on performances as to how much difference there is in speed, if any, between the sulky and road wagon, is close at hand. I believe a model road wagon like the Perren nearer a perfect hitch for trotters or pacers than the best sulky, for the following reasons: The looks and comfort of the driver and horse, and I am willing to leave this point to any person who ever endured for a mile or more the jerking horse-motion of a sulky; feet far apart, body cramped up, no chance to see what is going on, unable to use his arms and handle his horse to advantage, as compared with the well braced, easy, erect, graceful position of the rider in a wagon, who can see in all directions and has the free use of every muscle. If, as many claim, the driver is part of the horse and a factor of balance in a race, the wagon has the advantage from this standpoint, by long odds. Again, I never saw a good gaited horse to sulky that was not equally as good gaited to wagon, to say the least.

On the other hand, many that are smooth travelers at speed, pleasant drivers and that need no protection driven to wagon, are rough gaited, pull or require plenty of boots when hitched to sulky. Game race horses in harness have always shown the same good qualities when tried out to wagon, so far as I have seen and heard, while on the other hand there are plenty that have shown the lack of ability to finish their miles and races in harness that have proven bulldog finishers in all their contests to wagon. There have been instances where pure gaited horses were thrown out of balance by the horse-motion of the sulky and driver, so that they not only required boots, but took hold hard. Others that were rough gaited, pulled, or needed about all the boots in the catalogue, changed only from the sulky to the wagon, steadied perhaps by the extra draft, were nicely balanced, good mouthed and required no protection. There are many other points well known to the average horseman in this connection, not the least important of which is, the difference in the way they are harnessed.

To wagon the rule is to have the harness fit snug, but comfortable, with plenty of room, while to sulky everything must be as tight as possible, especially the girths. If any man thinks the tightness of these girths cuts no figure let him buckle a strap around his chest just below the armpits, so it will feel comfortable, which will represent the horse hooked to a wagon; then buckle the strap as tight as he can, as is done when a horse is harnessed to a sulky, and while cinched up tight by this strap, if he will run as far and as hard as he can, or even draw a few long, deep breaths, I think he will readily see a difference and why some horses stop in sulky harness and not to wagon. Few, if any, horses interfere or hit themselves when running loose in the pasture; many do not require boots for ordinary work, but when wind and muscle are taxed they must have protection, all going to prove the more free and easy a horse can be rigged the better, faster, and more work he can do.

To still further illustrate this important question of tight girths: I have seen horses broken of the habit of rearing up and of lying down when put to work by a rope drawn tight around the girth or around the body just back of the front legs, and in explanation it was said in lying down or rearing up they expand their lungs and it hurts and will punish them, so they soon learn to behave. I have seen this rope tightened so a horse would walk off readily, but after trying once, refuse to trot or run a step until it was loosened. I am confident many horses are temporarily injured and handicapped in their races to sulky by girths that are drawn tighter than there is any need of, depending somewhat on the horse. Some horses, like some men, expand their lungs more than others with the same amount of exercise.

From the above it certainly looks as though the road wagon had a better future prospect than the sulky, though the tendency to extreme lightness may go far and the ensuing fragility become a drawback. Little, if anything, can be gained by building speeding wagons so very light. They should be enough of a road wagon to be comfortable, useful, durable and insure safety.—Palmer Clark.

Rowellan, now a four year old, that raced to a record of 2:15½ last year as a three year old, is working finely again for James Golden, who thinks him as great a trotter as he ever sat behind. Rowellan was bred at Palo Alto Stock Farm and is by Adbell out of Rowena 2:19½ by Azmoor. Azmoor's daughters should be great broodmares. He is by Electioneer out of Mamie C. by imp. Hercules, second dam by Langford, a son of Williamson's Belmont. Mamie C., while a strictly thoroughbred mare, is in the Great Broodmare table, being the dam of three in the list, and has three producing sons and one producing daughter. This is the sort of thoroughbred infusion that is the right thing in a trotting pedigree.

ANOTHER HORSE SHOW is being talked about by the estimable gentlemen who have been identified more or less closely with the former shows held in this city. The general revival of interest in the horse and the increase in equine values are given as reasons why a horse show will meet with popular approval and patronage during the approaching so-called winter months in San Francisco. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, as the representative journal of the horse breeders and owners of this Coast, desires to give its enthusiastic endorsement and approval to the idea that a horse show should be given, and at the same time offer a few kindly suggestions as to the plans and lines by which and on which such a show should be conducted. In the first place, it is taken for granted that the Horse Show Association (a corporation) desires financial success in the proposed venture. To secure this the general public must be sufficiently interested to attend in generous numbers and make the gate receipts large enough to balance the necessarily heavy expenses. San Francisco is not New York. In the Eastern metropolis the very wealthy class is so numerous that the sale of boxes alone provides a fund that insures the horse show promoters against loss, and the program is therefore arranged almost exclusively for their delectation. Experience proves, however, that this plan will not succeed out here on what may yet be called the frontier of civilization. The first show, held in 1894, was arranged on the New York lines and was a success; but it was a novelty and the general public flocked to it in large numbers, and the fact that its receipts were larger than the expenditures was due more to the money taken in for general admission than to any other resource, even though the boxes were liberally subscribed for. At that show a great deal of dissatisfaction arose among the horse owners who were ignorant of the rules which made "appointments" necessary requirements in the exhibition of many classes, and the writer will never forget the strong language with which an old-time California horse breeder expressed his disgust when he was turned out of a class in which he had entered because his horse was hitched to an old-fashioned skeleton wagon that was considered entirely out of place by the judges. The succeeding shows were money-losing propositions, and when the promoters were compelled to go down into their pockets to make up the deficit they lost enthusiasm, and for several years the Horse Show has not been a feature of San Francisco winter amusements. That one can be given here which will be a success from every point of view, financial and otherwise, we do not doubt; but it must be arranged on more democratic lines than former shows. It must be primarily a "horse" show and not a parade of "society." Out on this western slope of the United States we have not yet reached that period in the evolution of the human race where the "400" is revered or even considered worth paying out money to see on dress parade. But we are lovers and admirers of that noble animal, the horse, and we enjoy all manner of contests wherein he is entered, whether it be on the race track or in the show ring. If the San Francisco Horse Show Association contemplates giving a show this winter, we hope it will profit by past experiences. Let the premium list be so arranged that all classes of equines will be provided for, and let the program not be devoted entirely to the display of such horses and such vehicles as only the wealthy can afford to own. Offer prizes for the standard trotters, roadsters, draft and general purpose horses, and make the competitions in these classes as prominent features as the showing of tandems, four-in-hands or jumpers. Cater to the public if you want the public's support, and do not make a program for a select few and expect the great mass of common people to pay their money to see the show. Let it be a Horse Show, with the exhibition of handsomely-dressed fair women and brave men as a side issue. Give it more on the lines of the shows held at Kansas City, Denver, Chicago and other cities in "the wild and woolly West," and it will succeed. The times are ripe for a horse show this winter that will be a credit to California horses and their breeders, as well as to the promoters of the enterprise.

GATE RECEIPTS must be looked to by the associations giving harness race meetings in California this year as their principal source of revenue. When the bookmaker made his advent at the country meetings six or seven years ago, he fixed a price for the privilege of controlling the betting that almost insured the association against loss and made the effort to secure a large attendance unnecessary. As his money was paid for the exclusive right to accept wagers on the speed contests, he took no chances of losing and the result was that unscrupulous men secured the right in many cases and racing was deaunched. This year a majority of the district associations have expressed the intention to permit none but the auction and mutual betting systems on their speed contests, and the result will naturally be a falling off in the revenue from this source. It behooves every association, therefore, to make a special effort to increase its gate receipts and to this end it should devote much attention to its racing program that it may be made as attractive as possible. Honest racing, no long delays, prompt and fair decisions, quick starts and accurate timing will make racing popular with the public and increase the attendance. Advertising should be done in a most thorough manner and as the people of the district must be looked to for the greater part of the attendance, the county papers should be liberally patronized. Special attractions should be provided for each day of the fair, and the public made fully acquainted with these features. Let there be an effort to make the gate receipts larger than ever this year, and less dependence placed on the money obtained from the betting privileges.

A NEW VOLUME, the 41st, is begun by the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN this week, and the paper enters upon its 21st year with as bright prospects for the future as at any time since its first number was issued July, 1882. That its circulation and advertising patronage have steadily increased since passing under its present management four years ago is a matter of pride and satisfaction to its owner, who takes these facts as convincing testimony that his efforts to make the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN a live and reliable journal are appreciated. To all those who, by their friendship or patronage, have aided us in this work, we hereby express our sincerest thanks and can only say that in the future as in the past, we will endeavor to make the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN thoroughly representative of all that is best in the fields which have been chosen for its work.

A CORRESPONDENT of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN writing from Honolulu, wants to know something about the pacer Shrimp 2:15 1/2, reference to which was made in the issue of this paper of August 10th, 1901. The item in question mentioned the fact that at Decorah, Iowa, a couple of strangers purchased this pacer and left after asking the former owner, Ed K. Hooden, that in case any one should ever write him concerning the horse or his whereabouts that he would confer a favor by giving no attention to such inquiries. The inference was that a ringing tour was contemplated. The Honolulu correspondent asks for a description of the horse. The Year Book of 1899 gives it as follows: "Shrimp, brown gelding, foaled 1892, by Jay Gould Jr. 3698, dam by Phantom. Bred by Charles Dean, Waverly, Iowa. Record made at Oskaloosa, Iowa, Sept. 27th, 1899, 2:15 1/2." In another place Shrimp is described as a black gelding. We have no further information about the horse. The correspondent thinks that perhaps Shrimp is the horse Cyclone that recently started and won in the 2:30 class at Honolulu, but it does not seem probable that a horse would be shipped that far to be raced out of his class when one good enough to win could be secured here in California. There has been some talk here recently that the horse Midnight 2:14 1/2 by Nutford, that raced on the California circuit last year might be the horse. We do not know whether Midnight is still owned by the parties that raced him here last year or not. One thing is certain, the Honolulu parties who lost their money in the races won by Cyclone during the recent meeting over there, are leaving no stone unturned to discover whether he is a ringer or not. We hope for all concerned that their suspicions are unfounded.

TWENTY YEARS AGO on the 1st of this month, the first number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN was issued. Among the advertisements that appeared in it was that of John A. McKerron, manufacturer of horse boots and fine harness. Mr. McKerron has been a constant advertiser in this journal ever since, and we do not think his advertisement has missed a single issue. From a modest shop on Sutter street his business has grown to the present splendid establishment at 203-205 Mason street and his horse boots and harness are now sent to all parts of the world. He has customers in Australia, New Zealand, India, Japan and China, and in Europe and South Africa. As a manufacturer of horse boots he stands at the very head and won the gold medal over all competitors at the recent Paris Exposition.

PLEASANTON has been wisely selected as the place for holding the fair and race meeting of Golden Gate Agricultural District, No. 1, this year. The citizens of Pleasanton raised the bonus of $2000 asked in two days and the Directors of the association decided that Pleasanton should have the fair. The track at the "horse centre" has a reputation that extends all over the world and it will be placed in the very pink of condition for this meeting. The program of harness races announced is an excellent one and should attract a very large number of entries. The meeting will follow the one at Napa and precede the Woodland meeting. Pleasanton will have the greatest week in its history when the Golden Gate Fair is held.

CAPT. E. L. MAYBERRY died at his home at the El Molino Ranch, Alhambra, Cal., June 14, 1902. Captain Mayberry was a great lover of the American trotting horse and was the breeder and owner of quite a number of good ones. He bred that grand looking horse Geo. W. McKinney 2:14 1/2 that raced so successfully at Denver and over East for two years. He also bred his full brother Washington McKinney, now owned by Rosedale Stock Farm and considered one of the handsomest horses in California. Captain Mayberry was a man of character and probity and highly respected by a very large circle of friends who will mourn his loss.

OUR PICTURES this week are of four horses that have been more or less prominent during the past week. Boodle Jr. is a young and very promising stallion owned by Hon. Jesse D. Carr of Salinas, who sold a number of young colts and fillies by him at auction last week. Azmoor 2:20 1/2 by Electioneer has just completed a very successful season in the stud at Sacramento. Rita H. by McKinney is owned by S. H. Hoy of Winters, who is working her at the Sacramento track, where she is showing remarkable speed. The bay gelding by Tom Benton, a road horse owned by Lester Nichols of Vallejo, worked a mile for Vet Tryon at Sacramento last week in 2:17, last quarter in 32 seconds.

THE BRAINLESS INDIVIDUAL who rides at a high rate of speed without respect to the rights of others should be curbed in his wild and foolish career, whether he rides in an automobile or on a bicycle, or rides or drives a horse. There should be a general uprising of sensible folk against the genus damphool who uses the speed of his machine or his horse where it will inconvenience others. Smash him, lash him or arrest him. These are the only arguments he can possibly understand.

Owe Much to the Shoe.

Doubtless few among the real number of enthusiasts who read of the performances of our trotters and pacers, says the N. Y. Sun, appreciate the important position occupied by the shoer. We are more or less pedigree experts, and close students of the standard works on the trotter, his breeding, his training and his after career, yet few have ever delved in the farrier's field. Old-time horseshoers carried a great leather pouch and made change from its depths; they had a slate for carrying the charged accounts and as a rule looked so dirty and grimy that we wondered, however they washed for meals. Probably Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's "Village Smith," will never be forgotten by the boy whose reader contained it, as a favorite piece to "declaim" at the monthly session given over to that much-dreaded and awkward part of school life.

To-day we have a new race. Everything about the shop is different. The old bellows no longer occupy half the available room, but improved ones with wheels that stir up the fires, aided by an automatic "blower" and very compact as well as portable, are at hand. There are little scales on the bench to weigh to a nicety all shoes. The horse's toes are rendered at exactly such an angle by means of an instrument placed under his foot. The anvil is smaller and all hammers and instruments used are lighter and more attractive. A platform exactly "level" is at hand, the horses are stationed thereon and a draft made of each foot. Less of hot iron or steel application and the shoe is thoroughly fitted to the foot cold or barely warm, and not as of old, the foot fitted to the shoe all around.

A few ounces give a trotter more stride and more action, or on the other hand may take away an over-plus of stride and lessen his action so as to improve his speed. Some years ago trotters wore long heel shoes behind. It was more to catch the backstrap of the toe boots than aught else, yet, once in vogue, every trotting-bred animal wore them. Long toes forward were the hobby of some trainers, yet when Directum came with his short toes all around, the observing trainer abandoned the projecting front toe with a rush and to-day one rarely sees much "foot" under a fast one. To a nicety can a horse be "gaited" at the instance of the shoer and thus it is, leading stables have their own shoers, at salaries as high as $2500, accompanying them around the circuits working under tents.

A Wheaton, Ill., man made a set of shoes for Star Pointer that improved his speed from 2:02½ to 1:59½, and was engaged to travel with the great horse, giving up his shop and patronage, so it must have been profitable to him. While at his best no one ever shod the champion but this one man. He found that Star Pointer's sole was so thin and acute that a pad was necessary for him to stand on while either forward foot was suspended. To shoe a great horse like Cresceus, The Abbot, Star Pointer, etc., several hours are required usually, and the trainer scarcely takes his eyes off either horse, shoe or shoer. It means much with engagements dependent on keeping a horse at his highest speed and free from lameness.

The veteran breeder, C. J. Hamlin, shod Fantasy, the champion three year old filly, with compressed paper fibre front shoes one season, and she trotted in 2:06 or 2:06½ with them. Mr. Hamlin thought they would be as durable and far lighter than steel shoes. Just why they were not a complete success the writer does not understand. Never since have the Village Farm stars been shod that way at all events.

A Providence genius fashioned an inlaid shoe having oakum within the iron so as to furnish a cushion to break concussion. It never got beyond his own stable. When the "pneumatic age" reached the trotting turf we had a pneumatic shoe on the market, popularly supposed to relieve the concussion, buoy up a horse's action and do a lot towards accomplishing the mile in two minutes. To-day we do not see them. Pneumatic knee boots are, however, in use and keep a horse from pounding his knees to a jelly on the turns. Saddle pads, of the pneumatic order have done much good in relieving sore-backed horses.

About the Horse's Age.

To distinguish merely between the young horse and the old, it is only necessary to remember a few facts. The first is that the milk teeth are present until he is between four and five years old; that the "mark" or dark central depression on the surface of the incisors, becomes gradually worn out, and in a horse over eight years old has nearly always disappeared from the teeth of the lower jaw; that the shape of the tooth is much wider from side to side than it is from front to back. As the horse becomes older the surface becomes progressively narrower, from side to side, and instead of remaining oblong it becomes triangular, and then (in very old animals) flattened from side to side.

In young horses we judge the age by observing which of the milk teeth are present, and which have been replaced. To distinguish between the milk teeth and the permanent, remember that the milk teeth are smaller, whiter, and have a distinct neck. Until a colt is over two years old his teeth are all milk teeth, and the age is estimated from the amount of wear shown on the crowns. Between two and three the first of the permanent teeth make their appearance, and push out the middle two teeth in both upper and lower jaws.

A horse is said to be three years old when these central permanent incisors are fully in wear. During the next summer the second pair of permanent teeth appear, and when they are fully grown and in wear the horse is four years old. Between four and five the last pair make their appearance, and now the horse has what is called a full mouth. So far both mares and horses are alike, but at or near five years old the canines, or "tushes," appear in the male sex only. Up to the end of this period determination of the age is a comparatively easy matter, and anyone who is at all observant can readily give the age of horses by looking at their teeth. After a full mouth is attained the task is more difficult, and it becomes greater steadily in proportion to their age. So much is this the case that it is popularly supposed impossible to tell the age of horses after they are eight years old. This may be true to a great extent among the untrained and the inexperienced, but an expert finds no difficulty in telling the age up to fifteen years with a fair degree of accuracy, and even after that age, can approximate it within a couple of years. To do this, of course, requires much experience and a careful inspection of all the visible indications of age. To rely upon one only, such as the "mark," is to court defeat. All should be observed—the mark, the shape of the teeth, their length and the angle at which they meet in the jaw.

Big Sale of Standard Bred Horses.

On or about July 15th, William G. Layng, the popular live stock auctioneer, will sell at the farm of Lafayette Funck, at Farmington, Stanislaus county, fifteen miles from Stockton, seventy-five head of fashionably bred trotting stock, consisting of mares and geldings, colts and fillies. These horses are by such sires as Director 2:17, Dexter Prince, Ha Ha, Silver Threads, Richard's Elector and Lottery Ticket.

Mr. Funck has been a breeder of horses for some years, and has bred a number of winners and handsome road horses. Those wanting good broodmares, or high class roadsters, should attend this sale, as it is an opportunity to get good sound horses that is seldom offered. There are several well mated teams in the lot and quite a number of young horses with speed enough to make them excellent prospects for racing purposes.

Catalogues will be issued in a few days. Send to William G. Layng, 246 Third street, San Francisco, for a copy.

Harness Racing at Denver.

DENVER, June 27.—Trotting, Ed Winship won in straight heats, George M. second, Vrometta third, Mt. Hood fourth. Time, 2:15½, 2:15, 2:15.

June 28.—Races were postponed on account of rain.

June 30.—Trotting, Hallie Hardin won first, second and fifth heats and race. Time, 2:19½, 2:19½, 2:23½. Commonwealth took third and fourth heats. Time, 2:20½, 2:21½. Purcis T., Congressman Sibley, Celester and Susie R. also started.

July 1.—Pacing, Daniel J. won first, third and fourth heats and race. Time, 2:16½, 2:18½, 2:18. Jess C. took the second heat in 2:15½. Glideaway, Helen Marr, Puritan, Ed Bennett and Sir Adrian also started.

Trotting, Charley Mac won in three straight heats. Best time, 2:14½. Porto Rico and Nancy Kirg also started.

A New Brunswick man, who owns a lot of ordinary mares that are neither standard nor pure bred, but who raises from them colts that he sells regularly at from $150 to $300 when they are three years old, describes the modus operandi as follows: "The first thing I always did was to look over the mare carefully and see where she was deficient, then in choosing a stallion to breed with her would select one that was strong in the points where she was weak. For instance, if my mare was a little heavy in the head, I looked for a horse with a small, beautiful head, and if she had flat feet select a horse with a good cup foot; always bred to a pure-bred, a standard-bred horse, and the best I could get regardless of the service fee, and have found that it pays to do so. I feed the mares oats and hay every day from the date of service until they foal, and keep them at work until within a week of foaling. I feed the colts with the mares, bran and oats twice a day when at grass. During winter I feed a few roots along with their grains, but have no time to get them up a Fifth-avenue hotel bill of fare. I break them to harness the first winter, and the following summer drive them a little in a road cart. Doing a little by degrees they gradually become thoroughly broken in and without much trouble to myself."

Feeding and Watering.

Oats, hay and bran; hay, bran and oats; the poor equine hardly knows in the average stable the taste of any other food; while condiments of all sorts are regarded with holy horror by the master, and used secretly, if at all, by the man, writes a practical horseman in an exchange. Vary the food, daily if possible, each meal if you can. There are lots of excellent materials which are disregarded and which afford a most wholesome change. Slightly damaged grain can be cheaply procured, cooked or steamed, and combined in varying quantities and flavors. Stale bread and cake can often be bought of the bakeries at very low prices per barrel. Numberless foodstuffs are perfectly appropriate for equine use; sugar, molasses, salt, etc., dissolved and sprinkled on hay, etc., will ensure the greedy consumption of even the poorer qualities. Don't think horses must always have choicest timothy hay, best oats, etc., for other grades, perfectly treated, are just as appetizing, wholesome and nourishing. You've eaten hash yourself—if you take such chances and do well, why not your animals?

The watering question is another "bugaboo." Why cannot a horse, even after active exertion, provided heart action and circulation have reached the normal point, have all the water he wants, if its temperature is nearly that of the body? Of course, he can—don't you drink ice water yourself when hot? and if the fool-killer doesn't get you there and then, what harm is coming to him if he swallows a few quarts of tepid fluid? If water is always left where horses can get at it they will never over-indulge, and, somehow, this should always be arranged. You are not always thirsty at 6, 12 and 6 o'clock yourself, yet very much in need of refreshment at odd times—and your horse has the same desires. In fact, if there is one hour in the day when an animal really needs water—and never gets it—it is about 10 o'clock at night, when he has consumed and digested an immense amount of dry provender, and when nature demands that he flush his system copiously. It is astonishing what a difference the attention to this most important detail will make in the condition of horses. Individual preference must be carefully considered also. Many are night-feeders and will only eat heartily at that time. Many shy "doers" require their food in small quantities and at frequent periods; some do better if they can see plainly in every direction and enjoy the association of their stable mates; other misanthropes prefer seclusion. If a horse is a bad feeder he will generally drink pretty well, and his nourishment may be given him in liquid form. No horse will take on flesh or hold it well unless he is a good and deep drinker, and this most important characteristic of the easily fattened steer is equally essential in the horse.

Four horses recently met at the Bridgton, Me., station, which happened to be the destination of their owners, whose combined age was 101 years. They were Hero twenty-five years old; owned by David Kneeland; Old Ben, twenty-seven years old, owned by S. C. Davis, and Gipsy, twenty-seven years old, owned by S. C. Smith, and Rev. E. P. Woodward's horse, twenty-two years old. All were fat and sleek and spoke well for their care.—Maine Farmer.

A Poaching Song.

When the dim, cold night hangs overhead,
And the river runs black below,
When the wings that hissed through the rising mist
Are still, our torches glow.

When the woods roar deep the song of the dark
And the weaving red horse feed,
Our nets we draw—and we curse the law—
For the fisher's sly deed.

So when a skiff shoots out of the mist,
When we hear the gunlock clink,
And the warden's hail, the weighted brail
Drops down, and the float lines sink.

Then the strings we cut and we loose our gains,
And the ripples their splashing veil;
We speak old lies in guiltless guise
For fear of the steel-barred jail.

And if, unwise, he sees the truth,
We may not yield or spare;
His boat shall drift where the islands lift—
And a still, red freight shall bear.

The Game Law.

There is some little confusion apparently concerning the present game laws and the duration of the open and close season. The principal changes made by the last Legislature are embodied in the following synopsis of the law now in force:

Deer—Between July 31 and October 1. No person may kill more than three bucks during one season. Does and spotted fawns cannot be killed at any time. No deer meat nor deer hides can be sold.

Doves—Between July 31 and February 1. Number which may be killed or had in possession limited to fifty during one day.

Quail—Between September 30 and February 1. Number which may be killed or had in possession limited to twenty-five during one day. All sale of quail prohibited. All trapping prohibited.

Grouse and Sage-hens—Between September 30 and February 1. Sale of prohibited.

Tree Squirrels—Between July 30 and February 1. Ducks—Between September 30 and February 1.

Number which may be killed or had in possession limited to fifty during one day. Sale of more than fifty in one day by one person prohibited. Shooting prohibited between half an hour after sunset and half an hour before sunrise. The use of any trap, net, snare, or pound, for the taking of game, is prohibited.

Suipe—Number which may be killed or had in possession limited to twenty-five during any one day.

Trout—Between March 31 and November 1. Sale limited to fish of over one-half pound in weight. Must be taken with hook and line only.

Steelheads—Above tide-water, between March 31 and November 1. In tide-water, between March 31 and February 1.

Black Bass—Between June 30 and January 1. Hook and line only.

The Flight of Shot.

At the Stockton tournament in May, 1896, while one of the events was being shot, we stood for awhile at No. 1 set of traps, watching the splendid work of the Olympic Gun Club team, then composed of six crack shooters, Messrs. C. A. Haight, W. J. Golcher, Jack Fanning, Otto Feudner, Clarence Nauman and A. J. Webb, Len Owens was captain. Nos. 2 and 3 traps were set so that the targets were thrown rather higher than usual, the shooters stood facing the west, the sun was past meridian, the angle at which the targets were thrown and the elevation of the gun was such that several times we distinctly saw the sheen of the almost compact charge of shot fired from the full chokebored 12-gauge guns just before the load struck and smashed the bird. This was the first time a charge of shot in any way or manner had ever been visible to us after it had left the gun, in fact the experience was so novel that we were for a time more absorbed in endeavoring to pick out "shot flashes" in the air than follow the work of the shooters. To many the flight of a charge of shot is an unknown quantity. What the pellets do when the gun is discharged, the effect of gravity and wind or weather, velocity, penetration and recoil are but indifferently understood by many who use the shotgun. With those who are familiar with this subject, it can be noticed that they generally use a load that is effective and one that is sought by other shooters. The subject is gone into here by Mr. Herbert Taylor who contributed the following interesting article to The Sporting Goods Dealer. It is worthy the attention of shooters generally:

How many sportsmen who use a shotgun in the field or at the trap, know just what happens after they pull the trigger? Do they understand the action of the powder, the pressure exerted on the wads and the part good wads play in the making of good scores? What does the shot do in rolling down the barrel of the gun and what does it do after it gets out into the air? These are questions that sometimes occur to us, but are they too hard for us to answer?

Let us see. The powder is ignited by the primer, gases are formed by the disintegration of the materials composing the powder and as they expand, force the wads forward in the barrel. The wads, fitting the bore of the gun tightly, make the gas chamber and prevent the gases from rushing out through the shot. The shot start from rest and acquire a velocity in the direction and parallel with the barrel of the gun. They also acquire another motion; a rolling on their own center, caused by contact with each other and the sides of the gun barrel. This motion is greatest among the shot which touches the walls of the barrel and an additional motion is given to the whole charge; a swirl, very similar to that given to a bullet, by the rifling in a rifle. There is also another force which acts continually upon the shot, but does not take effect until the shot leaves the muzzle of the gun, when it becomes apparent; that is, the force of gravity. These forces, with the resistance of the air and its velocity and direction, act on the pellets of shot and change the direction of their flight, so you can see that the question of hitting a pigeon flying twenty miles an hour, liable to change its direction at the moment the gun is fired, is not so easy as it appears.

Suppose we follow a pellet of No. 7 shot on its voyage. This particular pellet is located right in the center of the charge. It moves out of the barrel surrounded by its neighbors and turns over once or twice on account of the friction of the pellets near it. It goes out of the gun with a velocity of, say, 1000 feet at 20 yards from the muzzle, 950 feet at 30 yards, 860 feet at 40 yards and 695 feet at 60 yards. This reduction of velocity is due to the resistance of the air. The shot forces a path through the air, and the air piles up in front of it and acts directly in the line in which the shot is going. Velocity is the live force; the killing power imparted to the shot, and at 60 yards you would not expect a No. 7 shot to break a target as well as at 30 yards.

So much for the straight away motion. Now let us consider the motion of the shot on its own axis. If the shot is perfectly round, it will roll over and over without changing its direction, but if it is lop-sided, it will not travel straight. As an example, a billiard ball will roll in a perfectly straight line across the table, but a rough ball of the same size and weight would hardly get to the opposite cushion if struck with the same cue. A poorly made shot will have the same difficulty in pursuing a straight path through the air, because the air will catch in its rough surface and deflect it first one way, then another. It is important that all of the shot in a charge should be of the same size, as large shot travel faster than small shot. If Nos. 6, 7 and 8 are mixed up in one charge, the 6s will strike the target on a fence long before the 7s and 8s get to it.

Another point of view is the swirl of the shot in the barrel. This is caused by the friction of the shot on the barrel. The choke stops this swirl partly, but not entirely, for upon this swirl depends the pattern. If there is no choke in the barrel the shot next to the walls of the barrel get the most of this motion and go out of the barrel with a whirl, which widens as it goes. Of course, it takes longer to get to a target 40 yards away than the shot in the center of the load, because it has to travel farther. Its course through the air resembles very much a watch spring, when pulled out by the ends. The pellet of shot which has followed a spiral path through the air will be behind the center shot. It will form the outside of the pattern and will not have as much killing force.

We will now consider the action of gravity upon the whole charge of shot. Briefly stated, a body falling freely in still air acquires an accelerated velocity during each second. It falls 16 feet the first second, 48 feet the second second, 80 feet the third second and so on; so that if a gun is fired in a horizontal position the shot which travel out of the barrel with a velocity of 900 feet per second, will drop 16 feet during that time. In rifles the rear sight is made to move up and down, depressing the breech of the gun and elevating the muzzle, so that while the line of vision remains horizontal, the flight of the bullet is slightly inclined, taking a path like that of a ball thrown from the hand. This elevation of the rear sight is necessary on rifles, because they shoot great distances and the bullet is sometimes two or three seconds in the air. But with a shotgun whose maximum range is 600 feet and the killing range less than 300 feet, we do not require as great an accommodation.

The barrels of a shotgun are made heavy at the breech for the sole purpose of strength and we use this thickness of metal to sight over. It elevates the muzzle slightly, just enough to counteract the action of gravitation on the shot. We cannot prevent the shot from falling, but we can make them go up before they come down and in that way arrive at a given point, 40 yards away.

Every shotgun is made to shoot a little high; it would be difficult to make them otherwise. Rifles, of course, shoot perfectly level, the adjustable sights taking care of the accommodation for distance, but shotguns should shoot high for the reason that most of the game shot at with a shotgun are rising at the time the gun is fired. Targets and pigeons out of a trap are almost always rising, and when they do not rise they are very difficult to hit, because the shooter must not only take into account the speed at which the bird is falling, but the additional fact, that his gun will shoot a little higher than the point at which he is aiming.

Shot naturally drifts in the wind. A strong breeze blowing across the traps plays havoc with the scores. The writer has seen such expert trap shooters as Gilbert, Hicks, Elliott, Budd and Fulford shoot at 160 targets each, with a high average of 80 per cent, and out of twenty expert shooters the most of them were below 60 per cent. The next day the same men, same targets and traps, averaged from 96 per cent down to 80 per cent. The only difference was the absence of the wind. These men shot just as well one day as the other; the trouble was that the shot did not go where the gun was aimed and in order to hit a target, allowances had to be made for the drift. The quicker the shot reach 40 yards consistent with a good pattern, the less liability of failure to hit the object aimed at, so it is well to look at the make of shell and how it is wadded. You would not expect three drachms of powder to throw an ounce and a quarter of shot as far or as quick as it would an ounce and an eighth.

A powder that will burn through at the length of the barrel, gathering force as the gases are formed, will send the shot farther and with more penetration than a propelling medium which ignites instantly throughout the whole charge. There are some powders which explode so quickly that part of the powder is blown out with the wads unburnt. You can tell them by the quick recoil on your shoulder. The quickness of the recoil or its violence has very little to do with the velocity or penetration of the load. A hard wad will sometimes make the gun recoil when the same amount of powder and shot with soft wadding given the same pressure will be hardly noticed.

The leading manufacturers are to be commended for the great amount of time and brains they have expended toward perfecting their product of loaded shells, and it is a pleasure to the American sportsman to know that he can go into the smallest town and find on the shelves of the hardware store ammunition of the highest grade. The United States produces the most reliable primers in the world, the best paper shells and the best powder and shot. The machine loaded shells excel the hand-loaded in one particular, that is, in their uniformity.

The Haunts of the Grizzly.

While it is hardly probable that the grizzly bear will ever become extinct, there can be no doubt that he has come to be a rarity in his old haunts, and the hunter who would seek sport with him now must journey many long and tedious miles from the old time hunting grounds of easy access, into the almost inaccessible fastnesses and canyons of the far Sierras, the mountains of New Mexico and Northwestern Arizona and Coast Range mountains, or deep into the wilderness of the British Provinces. The nature and isolation of his present retreats and the difficulty attending hunting and trapping him there are the only things that will save the grizzly from meeting the fate of the buffalo. It is also natural safeguards, such as these, that alone are now maintaining the giant moose of Manitoba against utter annihilation.

In former days, when the hunter and the ranchman had only their double barreled guns, and even after those guns became breech loaders, the grizzly held but lightly their assaults, and the steel traps that were set to waylay him he frequently made short work of. He actually seemed to welcome the ranchman and the miner and the railroads to his domain, for they brought abundantly of supplies within his reach, which he could make greater raids upon and secure with greater ease than he could supply his wants by hunting and foraging in the woods, the hills and the plains. It was much pleasanter for him to snatch a "critter" from a ranchman's inclosure and lug it away, or to raid a mine camp for toothsome things, than to tackle a wild buffalo bull on the plains.

In those days, a grizzly bear, when he wanted a square meal, didn't think anything of coming down out of the mountains, as careless and unconcerned as a cow going to pasture, walking straight to the nearest ranch, breaking the neck of a cow, and lugging it away, paying no attention to the popping of the charge from the rancher's gun. It wasn't man, nor his coming among them with the ways of civilization that the grizzly feared, but when the repeating guns and the rest of the destroyers began to confront him, he took to pondering on the effect they had, and he gradually, but reluctantly, fell away from the pleasant borderland and sought safety and perpetuation for his race in the deepest isolation.

Some old Rocky Mountaineers are of the opinion, though, that the retreat of the grizzly bear to the inner fastnesses of the greater wilderness is due to the passing of the buffalo. There is no doubt that the grizzly was partial to buffalo meat, and as long as there were buffaloes on the plain, a herd on its journey seldom escaped attack from prowling grizzly bears.

The following story is told by Henry Hoyt, who has spent many years of his early life on the plains and in the Rockies, and is graphically illustrative of the grizzly's fighting capacity and the bravery and prowess of the bison: "I once came upon the dead body of a huge grizzly on a Wyoming prairie. It was ripped open from shoulder to flank. Scattered about, within a few yards of the carcass, lay the dead bodies of four buffalo bulls. The neck of each bull was broken. The dead bear and buffaloes and their wounds told the story. The bear had sought to snatch a cow or calf from a herd as it was passing or grazing, and a bull had rushed to the defense. The bear had killed the bull with a blow on the neck, the grizzly's invariable stroke when in battle with a buffalo. A second bull had dashed upon the bear only to meet the same fate. Then another bull, and another, had braved the slayer of their fellows, and had in turn gone down. But a fifth bull, younger, perhaps, and more agile than the others, had challenged the grizzly, and in the struggle that followed had succeeded in giving the thrust that had forced his horn deep into the flank of the bear.

"But there are plenty of grizzly bears yet, if one cares to undergo the toil and trouble of going where they are. If I were going after sport with grizzlies now I wouldn't stop until I got two good days' journey into the wild mountain region southwest of Blackfoot, Idaho. The man who will camp in that country during the fall months will have a chance to bag the biggest and toughest grizzly bears that can be found outside of the Manitoba Rockies. There are also plenty of silver-tip and cinnamon bears in that region, and some sportsmen think that there is more excitement and danger in hunting the silver-tip than in chasing or being chased by the grizzly. That is a matter of opinion. If any one who has ever stood up and pumped lead from a repeating rifle into a Rocky Mountain grizzly bear, and seen it keep right on in its savage charge toward him, until it fell to the ground riddled by the ceaseless leaden pellets, or has forced him to flight himself, wants to face a more formidable bunch of fierceness and deadly fury than that, he is welcome to it. And I think he will have to go off of the American continent to find it."

Should any of our readers be at all ambitious to hang a grizzly's scalp to his belt we have a good one ready for him. If this sample, from the following description, is not healthy enough, we will try and do better on demand. We will recommend this bear because there is good money in his capture.

This grizzly, known as "Big Foot," is again rampant in the Snake River region, where he has terrorized the stockmen for the past five years. He has resumed operations in his old hunting grounds and the news of his reappearance has spread dismay among the ranchers. The bear is recognized by a peculiar large track that one of his hind feet makes. The foot is deformed. "Big Foot" has a large area between Snake and Salmon river districts in which he "uses." He rarely leaves West Idaho county, but throughout the cattle districts of that section he has worked havoc. Much has been written about him, and also of another famous grizzly. We mean "Reelfoot," whose exploits and depredations in this State, Oregon and even Arizona, if many newspaper stories possess the virtue of truth, give the last-named border ruffian the proud distinction of having died innumerable deaths in divers localities during a long series of years. We are not so sure that he was not killed again a few months ago in Oregon. But persiflage aside, the original "Reelfoot" was an exceedingly hard customer. Another of the same kidney was the free-booter known to fame and the plundered stockmen of Northern California as "Old Clubfoot." The character given this bear was equally as notorious as the reputations borne by the other two. He also is supposed to have been killed a hundred times at least. "Clubfoot's" appearance in any locality was always known, singular coincidence, by a peculiar track made by one hindfoot, or at least half of it; the other half, so tradition hath it, was left in a steel trap as the price of carelessness.

But to return to "Big Foot" before he again escapes or unhappily for the scribes is really killed. The Idaho and Oregon stockmen have watched for him constantly, and have endeavored in many ways to gather in his pelt. Still he meanders winter and summer through his "beat" unharmed. "Big Foot" has frequently been seen. His appearance at a distance, it is claimed, has regulated the liver of more than one startled horseman, whose spurs were rapidly brought into play for a long-distance record. Cowboys who have caught sight of him were either afraid to undertake his killing or were armed only with revolvers. No one has ever fought the brute, which is, it is claimed, as big as a three-year-old steer. He kills with one blow a fine fat beeve, makes a single meal and never returns to his victim. Apparently he is pretty wise. The next day he is many miles away and stockmen rave vainly and offer bigger rewards. At the present time the total reward offered for the killing of "Big Foot" foots up $1500.

On the cattle ranges in some parts of Arizona they are bothered by bears as well as by other wild animals which kill stock. In some sections they have a regular round-up annually of wild creatures. At such a frontier function last August, in a district at the north end of the Tonto basin, up under the rim of the Mogollons, Hook Ludson, a stockman and his two boys participated, Hugh, aged 18, and Pierce, who is 14. The youths had an experience then which illustrates well their handiness with the rope and ability to take care of themselves and bears as well. The two boys were working with the round-up in the Naeglin canyon country, and started one morning to join another round-up outfit that was working about eight miles away. Their course took them down a steep canyon for several miles and then over a steep ridge into another narrow valley.

About three miles down the canyon made an abrupt turn, the walls being several hundred feet high. As the two boys came around this bend they came almost into a large she bear, who was feasting on a freshly killed calf. Both had left camp without bucking on their six-shooters and belts of cartridges, but, angered at the sight of the dead calf, both charged at the bear, ropes swinging in readiness for a throw.

The bear fled down the canyon. The speed of an old, lean she bear is remarkable, and for a quarter of a mile neither boy was able to get close enough to land his rope. Brush, trees and boulders made it a difficult task to cast a fifty-foot rope with certainty, but Hugh at last managed to drop a loop over the bear's head and left fore leg, and swerving his horse to the right, the bear went on one side of a scrub oak and the horse on the other. When the rope tightened the horse was nearly thrown from his feet and the bear turned a somersault.

The younger boy was going at such speed that he nearly ran over the bear as she rose to her feet, but this did not prevent him from dropping a loop over her head as he went by. By this time Hugh's rope had slipped down around the bear's body, and as Pierce tightened his rope Hugh's caught around both hind feet. The bear was again thrown to the ground by a jerk from Pierce's rope, and Hugh, hastily throwing several turns of rope around the horn of the saddle, jumped to the ground and started toward the bear, pulling out his knife and opening it as he went. Watching his chance, he stabbed the bear several times in the region of the heart and then slashed her throat. In a few moments the bear ceased struggling. After scalping the bear for the bounty, the boys cut off a few pounds of the best meat and went on their way as if nothing unusual had happened. But this was only a black bear, not a grizzly.

In the same section lives the Ellison family; they have the record in the last five years of killing more than 200 bears, and one-third as many mountain lions. Four bears were killed in one morning, last fall, out of ten started during the day.

This spring Dena, the youngest girl, roped and dragged to death a black bear, weighing more than 200 pounds, and captured a cub alive, bringing it to the ranch tied behind her saddle.

Cooling Water Without Ice.

Down near the equator where it is hot all the time, and ice is an unknown quantity, the simple native is able to obtain a drink of cool water by taking advantage of the cold produced by the rapid evaporation of water. When a native in one of the boiling hot little villages of interior Nicaragua wants to cool some water, she fills a half-gallon earthenware jar about two-thirds full. Parenthetically we will say "she," because this is a task that requires more energy than any male Nicaraguan was ever known to possess. The jar is made of baked clay and, not being glazed, is particularly porous and soon becomes moist on the outside. Two leather straps are firmly attached to the neck, and seizing these in her hand she begins to rotate the jar swiftly in the air. The mouth is wide open, but centrifugal attraction keeps the liquid from flying out. The average native woman is frail and listless in appearance, but the endurance which they exhibit at this sort of calisthenics is marvelous. It is about the same as swinging Indian clubs. Generally the lord and master lies in one corner of their "jacal," or hut, smoking a cigarette and watching the operation languidly. When the woman thinks the water is sufficiently cool she stops with a dexterous twist of the wrist and hands him the jar. Usually he takes a gulp, growls out "Moocha calora!" which is native patois for "blamed hot," and she begins again, patiently describing pin wheels. In this manner they can reduce tepid water to the temperature of a very cool mountain spring.

In Mexico the natives confine themselves, as a rule, to dampening the jar on the outside and placing it in a current of air. Near the little mountain village of Santa Rosa, on the Mexican Central, there is a cave through which a strong breeze passes at all hours of the day. Sometimes the mouth of the cave can be seen almost choked with water jars, left there to cool off.

A simple method on the same principle is to take one's canteen, or even a bottle, wrap it in pieces of cloth, blanket or sack, making the covering thoroughly wet, and swing rapidly in the air. This treatment will produce an appreciable coolness in the temperature of the drinking water on a hot day.

Stonehenge vs. Some Field Trial Setters.

The standard of the English Setter as given by Dr. Wilson will still be of great value in giving the sportsman and lover of the English Setter a guide that, despite the finical changes in vogue to some extent, it will be well to follow in breeding a dog for work with the gun and in the field:

Skull (value 10).—The skull has a character peculiar to itself, somewhat between that of the Pointer and the Cocker Spaniel, not so heavy as the former's and larger than the latter's. It is without the prominence of the occipital bone so remarkable in the Pointer, is also narrower between the ears and there is a decided brow over the eyes.

Nose (10).—The nose should be long and wide, without any fullness under the eyes. There should be in the average dog Setter at least four inches from the inner corner of the eye to the end of the nose. Between the point and the root of the nose there should be a slight depression—at all events there should be no fullness—and the eyebrows should rise sharply from it. The nostrils must be wide apart and large in the openings, and the end should be moist and cool, though many a dog with exceptionally good scenting powers has had a remarkably dry nose, amounting in some cases to roughness like that of shagreen. In all Setters the end of the nose should be black, or dark liver-colored, but in the very best bred whites or lemon and whites pink is often met with, and may in them be pardoned. The jaws should be exactly equal in length, a "snipe nose," or "pig jaw," as the receding lower one is called, being greatly against its possessor.

Ears, Lips and Eyes (4).—With regard to ears, they should be shorter than the Pointer's and rounded, but not so much so as those of the Spaniel. The "leather" should be thin and soft, carried closely to the cheeks, so as not to show the inside, without the slightest tendency to prick the ear, which should be clothed with silky hair little more than two inches in length. The lips also are not so full and pendulous as those of the Pointer, but at their angles there should be a slight fullness, not reaching to quite the extent of hanging. The eyes must be full of animation, and of medium size, the best color being a rich brown, and they should be set with their angles straight across.

Neck (6).—The neck has not the full rounded muscularity of the Pointer, being considerably thinner, but still slightly arched, and set into the head without that prominence of the occipital bone which is so remarkable in that dog. It must not be "throaty," though the skin is loose.

Shoulders and Chest (15).—The shoulders and chest should display great liberty in all directions, with sloping deep shoulderblades, and elbows well let down. The chest should be deep rather than wide, though Mr. Laverack insists on the contrary formation, italicizing the word wide in his remarks at page 22 of his book. Possibly it may be owing to this formation that his dogs have not succeeded at any field trial, as above remarked; for the bitches of his breed, notably Countess and Daisy, which I have seen, were as narrow as any Setter breeder could desire. I am quite satisfied that on this point Mr. Laverack is altogether wrong. I fully agree with him, however, that the "ribs should be well sprung behind the shoulder," and great depth of the back ribs should be especially demanded.

Back, Quarters and Stifles (15).—An arched loin is desirable, but not to the extent of being "roached" or "wheel-backed," a defect which generally tends to a slow up-and-down gallop. Stifles well bent and set wide apart, to allow the hind legs to be brought forward with liberty in the gallop.

Legs, Elbows and Hocks (12).—The elbows and toes, which generally go together, should be set straight; and if not the "pigeon-toe" or inturned leg is less objectionable than the out-turn, in which the elbow is confined by its close attachment to the ribs. The arm should be muscular and the bone fully developed, with strong and broad knees, short pasterns, of which the size in point of bone should be as great as possible (a very important point), and their slope not exceeding a very slight deviation from the straight line. Many good judges insist upon a perfectly upright pastern, like that of the Foxhound; but it must not be forgotten that the Setter has to stop himself suddenly when at full stretch he catches scent, and to do this with an upright and rigid pastern causes a considerable strain on the ligaments, soon ending in "knuckling over"; hence a very slight bend is to be preferred. The hind legs should be muscular, with plenty of bone, clean strong hocks and hairy feet.

Feet (8).—The feet should be carefully examined, as upon their capability of standing wear and tear depends the utility of the dog. A great difference of opinion exists as to the comparative merits of the cat and hare foot for standing work. Foxhound masters invariably select that of the cat, and, as they have better opportunities than any other class of instituting the necessary comparison, their selection may be accepted as final. But, as Setters are especially required to stand wet and heather, it is imperatively necessary that there should be a good growth of hair between the toes, and on this account a hare foot, well clothed with hair, as it generally is, must be preferred to a cat foot naked, as is often the case, except on the upper surface.

Flag (5). The flag is in appearance very characteristic of the breed, although it sometimes happens that one or two puppies in a well bred litter exhibit a curl or malformation, usually considered to be indicative of a stain. It is often compared to a scimitar, but it resembles it only in respect of its narrowness, the amount of curl in the blade of this Turkish weapon being far too great to make it the model of the Setter's flag. Again, it has been compared to a comb; but as combs are usually straight, here again the simile fails, as the Setter's flag should have a gentle sweep, and the nearest resemblance to any familiar form is to the scythe with its curve reversed. The feather must be composed of straight, silky hairs, and beyond the root the less short hair on the flag the better, especially toward the point, of which the bone should be fine, and the feather tapering with it.

Symmetry and Quality (5).—In character the Setter should display a great amount of "quality," a term which is difficult of explanation, though fully appreciated by all experienced sportsmen. It means a combination of symmetry as understood by the artist, with the peculiar attributes of the breed under examination as interpreted by the sportsman. Thus, a Setter possessed of such a frame and outline as to charm an artist would be considered by the sportsman defective in "quality" if he possessed a curly or harsh coat, or if he had a heavy head with pendant Bloodhound-like jaw and throaty neck. The general outline is very elegant and more taking to the eye of the artist than that of the Pointer.

Texture of coat and feather (5) are much regarded among Setter breeders, a soft silky hair without curl being considered a sine qua non. The feather should be considerable, and should fringe the hind as well as the fore legs.

Color of Coat (5).—There is not much insisted on among English Setters, a great variety being admired. These are generally classed as follows: (1) Black and white ticked, with large splashes of black, known as "blue belton"; (2) orange and white freckled, known as "orange belton"; (3) plain orange, or lemon and white; (4) black and white, with slight tan markings; (5) black and white; (6) liver and white; (7) pure white; (8) black; (9) liver; (10) red or yellow.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Aurelius Pesca Alburger is the imposing cognomen of a young handler of color who has shown a more than natural aptitude in handling dogs at the Woodlawn Kennels. He is also quite an artist with the whitewash utensils.

Lady Bethel, the Bull bitch purchased by Ellesgy Kennels from G. W. Clayton at the April show, and supposed to be in whelp to Ivel Rustic is overdue and lean as a rail.

John Bradshaw took Walter McGee's Scotch Deerhound bitch Thersau III. (Whiskers-Thersau II.) to Burlingame on Thursday to be served by Mrs. W. H. Hooper's Marco.

Lady, the Boston Terrier bitch sent to Woodlawn Kennels by George Bell, died on Monday while whelping a litter to Endcliffe Premier. One bitch puppy was saved and is now being nurtured on the bottle and kept in a crib filled with cotton batting and close to a warm stove. The pup is coming on nicely.

Orchard Trilby (King William-Iona), a good old Great Dane brood bitch, was due to whelp this week to Blue Beard (Zouloff-Olga). Another of Charles Dresser's Great Danes, Fanny (Blinker Murphy-Mona), was also expected to have a litter by Blue Beard.

Alec Dello's Bull Terrier bitch Ribs (Cardona-Rumager) was served by Dr. Bonnell's Mose, a dog recently brought here from the East. Ribs is an Eastern bitch, too.

A contemptible and cowardly piece of work was the deliberate poisoning of a number of valuable dogs this week, by an unknown scoundrel who placed the deadly bait in and around Alta Plaza. Among the victims was W. S. Kettle's English Setter Queen. The principal in this nefarious work is suspected and if the deed can be proven, he will be prosecuted.

All events, except No. 8 counted in the general average, a total of 580 targets. The general average money amounted to $300. Gold medal and $15, first prize, four prizes of $20, five prizes of $15 and $12.50 each, five purses of $10 each and three of $2.50 constituted 25 cash awards, the list ran down to 42 prizes, including a general assortment of merchandise.

Three ladies' special prizes were offered—championship gold and silver medals and a box of candy.

We are indebted to the Portland Oregonian for the summary of scores in the different events.

Clarence A. Haight, C. C. Nauman, E. E. Drake and W. H. Seaver represented our local shooters.

The Northwestern Association Blue Rock Tournament.

The eighteenth annual trap-shooting tournament of the Sportsman's Association of the Northwest was held at Portland, Oregon, on June 26th, 27th and 28th under the auspices of the Multnomah A. A. C. THE FARM.

Agitation and Pure Breds.

Breeders of pure bred cattle have unlimited faith in the future of their branch of the live stock industry. We are eating more beef and it costs more to raise it. How to reduce the cost of production is the most important question we have to consider. Secretary Charles F. Martin, of the National Live Stock Association, said recently that "the little farmers who have been eking out a bare existence on their hundred-dollar-an-acre land for years past are now getting a profitable price for their product."

This profit is due primarily to the infusion of pure blood into the herds of the country. Scientific feeding will not make a scrub steer a profitable killing animal where 65-cent corn is fed. We must have better blood, and then we can apply our improved feeding methods with telling effect. This improvement in cattle has only fairly begun. There are slaughtered in this country on an average 10,000,000 aged and matured beeves annually. According to the most reliable statistics obtainable, there are now about 6,000,000 two year old steers and 2,000,000 above that age west of the Mississippi river. The twos are not marketable because they are not matured; the matured beef comes from east of the Mississippi, and the supply is not equal to the demand.

The agitation against high priced beef has not apparently caused any uneasiness in the ranks of pure bred cattle raisers. The purchase of Merry Hampton, the famous Shorthorn bull, by C. C. Bigler & Sons, of Hartwick, Iowa, from C. B. Dustin, of Summer Hill, Ill., for the enormous sum of $15,000 recently, is evidence that the pure bred cattle industry is in a more flourishing condition than has ever been known in the country. Mr. Bigler also purchased 38 "lesser lights" in the Shorthorn world, paying $30,000 for them, an average of nearly $800 per head. In Indianapolis recently twelve Herefords sold at auction at an average of $304 a head, two cows bringing $1000 and $3500 respectively. Out in Washington 38 Shorthorns sold at auction at an average of $162 a head.

It is true the sale season for pure bred will soon close, but never before in the history of the business has the interest been so unflagging up to the end. The sale of Merry Hampton is the greatest of the year. This is now the highest priced bull of any age. Breeders of pure-bred cattle in every state believe that the demand for bulls for improvement of herds will soon exceed the supply and are preparing to take care of the business.—Drillers' Journal.

Oleo Sold for Butter.

The oleo people have always made a strong point of oleo being a cheap butter for the poor man, and many have been the crocodile tears shed by the oleo trust over the inability of the poor man to pay the price for cow butter, says Hoard's Dairyman. Of course, everyone knows how readily the oleo makers sacrifice themselves for the poor, butterless laboring man, but we have never been able to obtain figures showing the exact extent of the sacrifice until the last report of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Commission came to hand.

This report shows that out of 1482 samples bought for butter in the Pennsylvania groceries 1195 of them were oleo. As the above was sold at butter prices, the poor man had to pay about $119 over what he could have bought the oleo for under its own name. This is philanthropy at ten cents per pound excess profit.

Hog Feeding in California.

Conditions here are very much different from those prevailing in the Eastern States or middle west. Root crops—beets, carrots and turnips—can remain standing and growing all winter without risk of freezing or in the case of beets they may be corded up almost anywhere, like wood, for winter use. Squashes and pumpkins do well and keep a long time. Then rain often starts green grass in October. It is seldom, however, that grass is really good until February, but early sown rye is ready for use in a little while after the first rains. During the dry months, June, July, August and September and often October, sorghum, Kaffir corn or Egyptian corn will furnish excellent forage. In fact, sorghum remains unhurt by frost until Christmas. The above mentioned crops can be grown almost anywhere, with the exception that sorghum may not do well right along the ocean, west of here, owing to heavy fogs. In fact, almost any plant of the corn family makes excellent green forage here during the months when there is little or no rain.

A favorable report will be presented to the House of Representatives at Washington on the bill which proposes to amend the present law so as to permit cattle to remain upon railroad cars while in transit for forty hours instead of twenty-eight. Experience has demonstrated that the law applies principally to cattle being brought from the ranges to the Chicago stock yards. The proposed extension of time to forty hours will permit the trip to be made without unloading. The committee has concluded that reloading involves more rough treatment and more suffering than would be entailed by the longer trip.

From a logical standpoint wool ought to go higher. The Australian clip is very short, the lowest in many years and the English markets are bare of wool. The foreign woolen mills are running night and day to fill orders and the enormous demand from South Africa to meet the needs of the horde of emigrants already headed that way is bound to boom the wool markets of the world.

Right Milking.

A matter of farm economy often overlooked is that of right milking. Anybody on the farm who can squeeze a stream of milk out of a cow's teat is set at the task, says Homestead. And those who don't know how, provided they are part of the farm's working force, are made to learn. Milking is a chore not requiring much strength, and on the ordinary farm considered as not requiring great skill. If the cows have any milk the ordinary milker can get it. What more is asked?

When butter is sold for twelve cents per pound there is no incentive to painstaking milking. But where milk or butter has become one of the farm's staple products care in milking is worth while. The large number of cows on some farms, to be sure, requires all the help available. But the youngsters and inexperienced men should be well taught before they become regular helpers.

The first principle of teaching should be cleanliness. A milker with clothes so grimy that particles of dirt and dust fall into the milk, and whose hands could be benefitted by soap suds, needs a lesson; ditto the person who sticks his fingers into the milk pail or milks on his hands so as to wet the cow's teats. In addition to cleanliness on the part of the milker, care in thoroughly brushing off the cow's udders should be insisted upon and particular care that neither through kicking, switching or otherwise, none of the stable's filth gets into the milk. The best way to guard against such accidents is to have the stable clean.

After cleaning comes efficiency. It includes good ways of holding the teat, rapidity and thoroughness of milking. The teat, if not too short, should be grasped with the whole hand, the index finger and thumb pressing, as the hand closes, a little more firmly than the lower fingers, thus forcing the milk downward instead of upward. Milking with the thumb and one or two fingers, slipping them down the teat, is to be condemned, since it is neither quicker or easier than the whole hand way and calls for the filthy practice of wetting the teats. Thoroughness means getting the last and richest drop. It is necessary to milk dry, all dairymen know, if the cow is to be kept up with her milk.

Rapidity of milking, unless it be violent, stimulates the milk flow.

Finally comes the treatment of the cow; it is of great importance, with the nervous cow, perhaps of first importance. Singing of a boisterous kind, whistling, chattering, loud talking, to say nothing of rough handling, certainly does not make the cow more comfortable and therefore cannot be conducive to a full, steady flow of milk. And do not treat the cow to an indifferent milker every day and to irregular hours of milking. Because of mere changing about of milkers we have frequently noticed in herds of fifteen or twenty cows a decrease of 10 per cent in a day's milk. Let each cow become acquainted with her milker and let the milker stick by her.

All of these things—cleanliness, efficiency and careful treatment of the cow—are matters of economy; for if all the cow has is to be gotten from her, and the product is to be marketed in first class style, they must receive attention. They must be taught the new milkers

At the first blush it appeared to many American stockmen that Cuba would sooner or later form an important market for their meats, alive or dead or both, also for horses, mules and swine, but they have come to understand that the laboring portion of the population and the climate are not such as to promote any great demand for improved live stock. Cuba in many ways is a century behind the times in the United States. The ponderous two-wheeled carts, the yoking of oxen by the horns, the fearful mule trappings which the Cubans call harness are dear to the native heart and not likely to be supplanted for decades, if at all. Then the Cubans do not want either large or fat beef; they want it small and lean. They or have little no cold storage, as ice is too dear. Hence they have small use for improved beef cattle. The Cuban pig is a member of his master's house, as a rule, and lives to quite an age before he is slaughtered in a state of abject poverty, his owner, if rich enough, purchasing American lard wherewith to season his food. Hence, with "Cuba Libre" there seems small prospect of ever supplying her with any great number of improved meat-making or work animals.—Breeders Gazette.

Miller & Sibley of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bel Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fully equal to any other. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches it has no equal.

SUBSCRIPTION
THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

YUKON 2:18, b. s. by Bay Bird, winner 2:25 Pace at San Jose.

San Jose's Race Meeting.

The first of the district fairs held in California this year was that of the Santa Clara and San Mateo District No. 5, held at San Jose July 3d, 4th and 5th, and cannot be called a complete success, although with proper management one of the best fairs held in California could be given annually on the magnificent property owned by this association. Situated within the city limits of one of the most thriving cities on the Pacific Coast, in the center of a valley that has no equal in the world for climate, productiveness of soil and great natural advantages, surrounded by a country that has produced and is producing as fine horses, cattle and all kinds of live stock as well as the choicest fruits in creation, there is no reason why an annual fair cannot be given here that will attract crowds of people and gain an almost world wide reputation. Imagine a three day race meeting where on the evening before the opening day no one knew what the program would be, and during the first two days of which no printed programs were ever issued and you can doubtless understand why the San Jose association does not give successful meetings.

During the three days there was just one actual race on the program each day. These three races were excellent contests, not a heat being laid up, and not a driver but was trying his level best to win with his horse if he possibly could. Three such races on one day at any Eastern track would have brought forth words of enthusiastic praise from every person present. But one race a day does not make a good race meeting; an almost empty pavilion and a small stock parade of horses and cattle brought on the grounds for that act only, does not make a successful fair.

FIRST DAY.

A very slim crowd was present to see the races on Thursday, July 3d. An auction stand and a mutual box were presided over by Zick Abrams of San Francisco, but not a bet was made during the day and Abrams and his crew closed up shop and took the evening train for home, leaving the remaining two days to be conducted without any opportunity for any one to make a wager had any so desired.

The first event on the program was an attempt on the part of Dixon Maid, a pacing mare by Falrose, to beat 2:25. Driven by Walter Mastin, the handsome mare made the mile in 2:20½.

"Farmer" Bunch then drove the mare Spry Ruth by Boodie 2:12½ a mile to beat 2:40 and to equal 2:30 if possible. The best she could do was 2:35, which gives her a record but not in standard time.

The 2:40 trot proved an excellent contest. The McKinney trotter Lijero outclassed his field a little, and won in straight heats, but there was an exciting scramble among the other five entries for second money, which finally went to Faust, a ten or twelve year old gelding said to be by Abbottsford and taken out of a livery stable to be placed in this race. As Faust was a local horse he had a large proportion of the small crowd "pulling" for him, and his owner C. Becker, was greeted with cheers when he finished second in the last heat. Lijero is a rapid gaited trotter, has worked a mile in 2:16½, and should be in McKinney's 2:15 list before fall. He has a nice way of going, seems perfectly level headed and is a very promising young horse. The summary of this race is as follows:

Lijero, br g by McKinney.....	(W. G. Durfee)	1	1	1
Faust, ch g, s t b by Abbottsford.....	(C. L. Becker)	3	2	2
Tuberose, b s by Falrose.....	(Mastin)	2	4	5
Cicero, b g untraced.....	(Barstow)	6	3	3
Babiola, b m by Chas Derby.....	(Lafferty)	4	5	4
Prince Howard, br g by Dexter Prince.....	(Bunch)	5	6	6

Time 2:22, 2:23, 2:21.

The 2:12 class did not fill, and the association hung up $100 for the pacers I Direct 2:12½ and John A. 2:12½, to go a two in three race. It was a very pretty contest, I Direct, driven by H. Dunlap, winning by a little more than a neck each time. The first mile was in 2:12½, thus lowering I Direct's record a quarter of a second. The second heat was in 2:15½.

SECOND DAY.

There must have been at least a thousand people that paid fifty cents to enter the grounds on Friday, July 4th, the second day of the meeting, and they were rewarded by seeing one of the best contested pacing events that has come off in California for some time. There were five starters: Yukon, Robert I., Del Oro, Nance O'Neill and Dixon Maid. Yukon, a handsome little stud by Bay Bird, owned by C. W. Welby, won very handily, and was admirably handled by John Gordon, although a break in the second heat caused him to fall far behind and lose all chances of winning the heat, but he acted as steady as an old campaigner in all the others and showed more speed than any of the others. Robert I., but for his numerous breaks, might have made it pretty warm for Yukon, and Del Oro showed remarkable speed at the finish in two heats. There was a red-hot fight for second money, which finally went to Robert I., who was driven by Jack Garrity.

The summary of the races is as follows:

Yukon, b s by Bay Bird.....	(Gordon)	1	3	1	1
Robert I., ch s by Hambletonian Wilkes.....	(Garrity)	3	1	2	2
Del Oro, blk s by Oro Wilkes.....	(Bunch)	4	2	3	3
Dixon Maid, b m by Falrose.....	(Mastin)	2	4	4	4
Nance O'Neill, b m by Pilot Prince.....	(Lieginger)	dis

Time—2:18½, 2:20½, 2:19½, 2:18.

During the day Trainer Houser drove H. W. Meek's mare, Hopper by McKinney 2:11½, dam Cricket 2:10, two heats in 2:24½ and 2:25. She is a trotter and makes the fourth performer for her dam—which is all her produce that are old enough to be trained.

W. G. Durfee drove his horse Silver Coin a half mile for the pleasure of the crowd. Silver Coin is by Steinway out of Jenny Mc 2:09 by McKinney. He took a three year old record of 2:16½ last year in a race at Denver. He is a wonderfully fast colt and came the last half of this exhibition mile Friday in 1:03, with a break in the stretch that compelled Durfee to pull him up. He can probably pace a half very close to a minute when right.

THIRD DAY.

The last day of the meeting did not open very auspiciously, there being but a slim crowd in attendance. Only about one-third of the grand stand was filled, and as there was no public betting the scene lacked the usual crowd that hangs about the books and pool boxes. The first event was for trotting horses eligible to the 2:25 class for a purse of $500. Originally there were five entries and all of the horses scored up for the word.

First heat—Lady Rowena drew the pole and with but little scoring the horses got away to a good start, Lady Rowena taking the lead. Going around the first turn Petigru got alongside of her and on the back stretch Cicero overtook the leaders. Coming down the homestretch Petigru forged ahead and came in a winner by a small lead, Cicero second and Lady Rowena third.

Second heat—The horses got away to a fair start with Petigru on the inside. Lady Rowena lapped him at the turn and gave him a close race down the back stretch. This position was maintained to the finish, which was very close, Petigru just beating Lady Rowena out as they went under the wire.

Third heat—This heat was a sharp contest from start to finish, Petigru winning the heat with Cicero close up and Lady Rowena a good third.

SUMMARY.

Petigru, b s.....	1	1	1
Cicero, b s.....	2	4	2
Lady Rowena, b m.....	3	2	3
Faust.....	4	3	4

Time—2:19½, 2:19½, 2:19½.

The above was the only horse race of the day and was followed by a match between C. A. Durfee's ch s Silverado, a runner and Dr. A. W. Boucher's pacing mare Miss Logan 2:06½, the conditions of the match being that the stallion was to go one and one-eighth miles to the mare's mile. The mare would have won the match had she not broken about the distance flag. As it was Silverado won easily in 2:09½.

During the afternoon, C. F. Bunch drove the ch m Spry Ruth around the course for a record. She made the mile in 2:34 beating her previous record by two seconds.

President Bollinger gave an exhibition trot to wagon of his br s Vic Schiller driving him a half mile in 1:09½.

One of the features of the afternoon was an exhibition of rough riding given by Britt Gruwell, who showed that he was a bronco buster "from way back," nothing that was brought up, and there were several good buckers, being able to shake him off.

The last event of the day was the mule race out of which it was expected the spectators would get considerable fun. Originally there were nine entries and four appeared on the track. The one driven by Willie Durfee proved obstreperous, and after kicking the cart to pieces was withdrawn. The first mile was under the rules, the mules being required to go at the trotting gait. They started off in the following order: The Boss driven by J. Garrity, Wild Oats driven by C. F. Bunch and Silver Coin driven by Ed Lafferty, and after performing a funeral procession around the track finished in the same order, time, 4:27. This being too tame they were sent around again at a go-as-you-please gait making quite a brisk and amusing finish. Every driver hiking his best and bringing them in under the whip and yell. The Boss first, Wild Oats second, and Silver Coin third. Time, 2:29.

The Meeting at Pleasanton.

As will be seen by the advertisement of the harness events for the Golden Gate Agricultural Association, District No 1, the annual race meeting of that association will be held on the Pleasanton track. This is the first time that the fair has been held outside of Oakland and the Pleasanton people are determined to make it the best event of the kind ever given by the district association for Alameda and San Francisco counties. The enterprising citizens of Pleasanton who are interested in the success of the meeting have raised $2000, which, with the appropriation for the district agricultural exhibit, will give them ample money for a large district fair and race meeting. It is intended that the agricultural display, including exhibitions of live stock, will excel anything of the kind that has ever been given in the district.

While the Oakland race track is an excellent track for runners, it is a very difficult track to put in condition for harness races, and many of the best trotters and pacers that will go to Pleasanton would not have entered had the meeting been held in Oakland. With the liberal program offered the management feel assured that they will receive the support of the horse-men and a big entry list.

The people of Pleasanton have generally resolved themselves into a committee to make the fair and races a success. They will receive in their efforts to do so, the help of the Pleasanton Athletic Club, which was formed last winter to develop the athletic talent of Pleasanton, and this club will arrange an attractive program for the local portion of the week's entertainment. Last year the Golden Gate Agricultural Association, District No 1, did not give a fair or race meeting; consequently it is enabled to draw the appropriation for both years and use it for this.

The Napa Meeting.

Secretary Bell of the Napa Agricultural Association, writes that in view of the large entry list and the number of their harness races that filled, and the fact that the same horses are entered in several events, the Napa Board of Directors have decided to give two or more harness races each day for the full six days of their meeting. This will enable horses that have been entered in more than one event to start in all by affording sufficient time between the races.

In addition to the harness races they will give two or more running races each day, the purses for which will be $150 each, entrance $10, running races to close over night. It will be the effort of the management to give the runners every consideration possible, but the track will be kept in first class condition for the harness races and will not at any time be dug up for the runners. This Association also proposes to stay by their original resolution and not allow bookmaking on harness races, but will give the bookmakers every opportunity they wish to make books on the running races. It is the intention to make the meeting a high class one in every respect—one that will give satisfaction and confidence to the public and to the horse-men.

Blinders Falling Into Disuse.

Blinders, like the overhead check rein, are useful or otherwise, according to the disposition of the animal on which they are used. A horse with a dull and sluggish disposition is invariably made worse by the open bridle. Indeed, it is a question if all horses are not more or less effected in their driving qualities by the use of the open bridle. It makes a horse suspicious, and nine out of ten will hold their heads to one side and have an eye cocked back watching everything that is done by the person in the vehicle. Every action of the hand for any purpose, to pull up the robe or adjust the reins, will cause the horse to jump through the harness, and he will do it every time any motion is made. Free, open drivers have frequently been made sluggish to a painful degree by the open bridle. They can see all that is going on, and become so cunning that they will not exert themselves unless they see a movement to make them do so. It is urged, on the other hand, that where necessity exists for blinders the horse has been brought up wrong. Opponents of blinders say they have caused more accidents than they have prevented. Horses, they say, will run from a tumult behind them, because they cannot see the cause. On the contrary, we think horses would many times run away if they could see what the blinders prevent them from seeing. Blinders were first used exclusively on saddle horses, and there are countries where they are still used on them. The idea was to protect their eyes from the sun. The blinders grew out of, or rather was, a creation of a hood that projected over the forehead of the animal. When the rider was in the saddle very little of the trappings, except the bridle, were in sight.

The Rural Spirit says that Senator Helman is preparing Boodie 2:12½ for the free-for-all classes this fall, and that he is riding easy miles in 2:20 behind Myrtha Whips 2:10½. Mack Mack 2:29½, his McKinney trotter, acts like first money, but Ned Thorne 2:11½ is not doing so well.

No one can form a trust on producing speed. The small breeder is just as likely to produce a 2:10 performer as the rich one, provided he has given the breeding business any thought and study.

Notes and News.

W. G. Durfee did well at San Jose. He won both his starts at that meeting.

Every race filled at Woodland except the 2:10 trot. It will be a great meeting.

Budd Doble is at the Grosse Point track near Detroit with his horses this week.

Napa's excellent entry list presages good racing at the fair and race meeting there in August.

Horsemen will now head for the Vallejo track, where the first meeting of the main circuit will be held.

Miss Logan 2:06½ and Bonnie Direct 2:05½ may meet at Woodland if both are right. What a race it will be.

Entries for harness races at Colusa close next Thursday, July 15th. Make your entries in time. Colusa is a good place to go to.

The Golden Gate District Agricultural Association holds its fair and race meeting at Pleasanton this year instead of at Oakland.

The Roman won the 2:17 class trot at Windsor, on the 8th, in three straight heats; time 2:12½, 2:10½, 2:14, beating Prince Selma, Sibil H., Nutbearer and Silver Heir.

Ninety-nine entries and sixty-eight nominators for eight harness races is the showing that Woodland has made. This is encouraging. It is an average of over twelve to a race.

Tuberoze, the stallion by Falrose, made a very good showing in the 2:40 trot at San Jose in the first heat. He was a close second to Lijero in 2:22, but fell back in the next two heats, finishing fourth and fifth respectively.

The Chamber of Commerce Stakes for 2:24 class trotters and the Gas City Stakes for 2:20 class pacers, $1000 each, to close August 1st, should get a big list of entries. They are big stakes and the horsemen like to go Stockton.

Director C. A. Durfee started the horses at San Jose and did very well. Like all men who have driven in races themselves he wanted the horses all going steady and square rather than to have them lined up like a platoon of soldiers.

Petigru, the horse purchased by W. G. Durfee over East last year made his first start in California at San Jose last week and won in three straight heats. While the time was not fast, Petigru could have made it faster had it been necessary. He looks like a 2:15 performer.

Owing to the time requisite to get the Farmington horses fit for the sale, Wm. G. Layng, the auctioneer, has advised Layette Funk to postpone this event until a later date. Due notice will be published in these columns and a synopsis of the horses given in our next issue.

Not a pool was sold nor a bet made at San Jose on the 4th of July, and yet there was a large crowd present that enjoyed the races and enthusiastically applauded the finish of nearly every heat. There are a great many people who can enthuse over a harness race without having a bet down.

John Hussey drove Elastic Pointer a mile in 2:07 at Grosse Point track week before last. The mile, which was the third of a workout, was a well-rated one, each of the first three-quarters being in 32 seconds, the final one being in 31½. This unquestionably is the fastest mile of the year by any horse eligible to the slow paces.

I Direct 2:12½ is a much improved horse and it need not surprise anyone to see him in the 2:10 list this year. Henry Dunlap, who is training the horse for his present owner, Mr. F. Hall, thinks a great deal of I Direct and believes he will be a good and consistent race horse this year. He certainly looks better and acts better than ever before.

The once famous colt trotter, Faustino 2:12½ by Sidney, that is the sire of half a dozen standard performers, but that is now a gelding, is used as a roadster by a resident of Lancaster, one of Buffalo's suburbs. The son of Sidney developed a bad temper and for that reason was gelded. Now he is as docile as could be wished and is a model roadster.

William Hendrickson, the well known trotting horse man, who brought Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., to this Coast, has purchased from Henry Schlosser of San Rafael, the stallion Clay S. 2:13½, dam by Whippleton, granddam by Patchen. Clay S's dam is now 22 years old and has a fine colt by her side by Seymour Wilkes and has been bred back to that good stallion.

In a telegram from Millard Sanders he reports that at the last workout at Cleveland before going to Detroit Anzella worked a mile in 2:07½, Dolly Dillon 2:08½, Lou Dillon 2:11, Bonsilene 2:11½ and B. S. Dillon 2:10. This is a good showing for the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's string and it looks as though Millard stood a fine chance of getting the big end of some of the big stakes. Sir Albert S. will probably not start before the Cleveland meeting, which commences July 22nd.

The gray gelding Addison 2:11½ by James Madison, that was sold last spring to a gentleman in Butte, Montana, is doing well over in the copper country. At a matinee of the Butte Driving Club, June 22d, Addison met the bay gelding Erudition by Expedition in a match race. Erudition is one of the fastest trotters in Montana in a brush on the road, but in this race Addison beat handily in straight heats, the time being 2:14 and 2:15. Erudition led Addison to the half in the first heat in 1:05½ but the gray beat him home.

An offer from Honolulu was made for Flying Jib 2:04, but Charles Griffith, his owner, declined it, saying: "The good game gelding will always remain in my possession; money cannot buy him." Sentiment like this is to be commended. It shows that Mr. Griffith does not forget the thrill of pleasure it gave him when he saw his lamented father drive this horse with its mate over the Bay District track a half-mile in about a minute, much to the astonishment of the thousands who witnessed it. Flying Jib has earned the life of ease he is enjoying at Pleasanton.

The gelding Faust, said to be by Abbotsford, that won second money in the 2:40 trot at San Jose, is an all round livery and farm horse. He is owned by Mr. C. L. Becker, a liveryman of that city, and gets a lot of road work during the greater part of the year. He is a good vacquero horse and an excellent one to throw a lariat from. He is about twelve years old and had a bad record for meanness when younger, having kicked and killed the well known horseman Pat McCartney some years ago. Faust will be in "Farmer" Bunch's string this summer and will be raced on the circuit.

Yukon, the little bay pacer with which John Gordon won at San Jose on the second day of the meeting is bred to "beat the band," as the boys say. His sire is Bay Bird (son of Jay Bird and Kate Wilkes by Geo. Wilkes), his dam is by Alcyone, sire of Flying Jib 2:04, and his second dam Mabel, a full sister to the great mare Beautiful Bells. Yukon got a record of 2:18 in the fourth and last heat of this, the first race he ever started in, and acted like an old time race horse. He is small, but all horse and should pace well below 2:15 before the summer is over. Yukon is six years old. He was bred at Rancho del Paso, and is now owned by Mr. C. W. Welby.

Death of Dr. Latham.

A long life full of activities was closed on July 2d, when death called Dr. Hiram Latham. He passed away in his seventieth year, at the home of Grant Lapham, the well known horseman of Pearl street, Alameda. Deceased was a native of Vermont. He was at one time well known in military and diplomatic circles and was the author of valuable reference works regarding Japan and China. Death came suddenly and was due to heart failure. He was found dead in Lapham's office, sitting in a chair and apparently asleep. For several days he had been attended by Health Officer L. W. Stidham. The funeral took place from an undertaking parlor in Oakland and was private.

Dr. Latham won high reputation during the Civil War as an army surgeon, at one time being in charge of a hospital where there were thousands of wounded. He had letters from General Sherman, General Grant and other officers of the time. He was sent to China by the United States as Vice-Consul-General, and won high honors during his six years' service there. He compiled valuable statistics for the State Department upon the resources and commercial possibilities of China. He did similar work for the Government during a residence of four years in Japan. In China his erudition was recognized by his receiving a decoration from the Emperor.

For five years Dr. Latham occupied the position of surgeon for the Union Pacific Railroad. He was the means of securing for the Union Pacific the road between Ogden and Salt Lake City, which the Central Pacific sought at the time to control. Of late years he led a retired life. He was fond of good horses and an expert on pedigree records. He went East with Salisbury in his palmiest days. He had a wide acquaintance among track men, and his personal qualities made him friends.

Changes in the Rules.

So many changes in the rules of the National Trotting Association were made at the last Turf Congress that it will take more than a casual glance over the new rule book to thoroughly grasp all the new regulations, and anyone who takes in the harness races, whether as owner, trainer or spectator, ought to devote some time to studying the new book. It would seem almost unnecessary to say that anyone who will act in the capacity of judge at any meeting absolutely must study up the new rules, but there will be many meetings at which men will go up into the stand and act as judges, who have never even read over the new rules and some who do not even know that any changes have been made.

Dolly Dillon 2:07, recently trotted the last quarter of a mile that was covered in 2:11, in 29½ seconds.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

CONDUCTED BY

WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C. V. C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses, cattle or dogs by sending a plain description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

R. E., Alvarado—I have a yearling colt who is kept in a small pasture, as the mosquitos and flies are very thick I keep him covered with a linen stable cloth, but both sides of the neck and the front legs which are uncovered are one mass of small lumps, which I think are caused by mosquito bites, they seem to itch, as he is always rubbing the affected parts against the fence and at night he rubs against the sides of his box stall. He has made himself very sore and as all the hair is rubbed off, I am applying carbolized vaseline at present. Let me know what you think the trouble is and what treatment to use so the hair will come out its natural color.

Answer—Mix together the following: Four ounces oil of tar, one pound of sulphur, two pounds lard; rub a little into the parts that are affected every third day, or more frequently if necessary.

Jackson's Napa Soda is sold in every city, town and hamlet in the State.

The Story of Nutwood.

The season that Rysdyk's Hambletonian was two years old four mares were mated with him. Three of these mares produced foals. One of them was known as Katy Darling. It was claimed that her sire was Bay Roman, a son of imported Roman, but her breeding was never established. She was a natural trotter and fast for her day, but broke her ankle and was a cripple when sent to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, in 1851. She produced a bay colt September 22, 1852. This colt showed such beautiful trotting action and was so promising that when one year and five months old he was sold for $500.

The purchase was made by Mr. Hezekiah Hoyt, but Major Edsall was joint owner with Mr. Hoyt, and the following year bought Mr. Hoyt's interest. Major Edsall stood the horse for stock purposes for several seasons. In the winter or early spring of 1859, Major Edsall sold the horse to James Miller and Joseph Love of Kentucky for about $3000. They took him to Cynthiana, that State, where he did stud service for four seasons. He was then known as Edsall's Hambletonian.

In the fall of 1862, Messrs. Miller & Love sold the horse to R. A. Alexander, proprietor of the noted Woodburn Farm. The name of the horse was then changed to Alexander's Abdallah. He made the seasons of 1863 and 1864 at Woodburn. On the morning of February 2, 1865, a band of guerillas visited Woodburn and took away several horses, among them Bay Chief by Mambrino Chief, and Alexander's Abdallah. The following morning the guerillas, who were encamped about twelve miles from Woodburn Farm, were attacked by a Federal force which routed them and captured the horses.

Bay Chief was shot in several places during the fight and died from the wounds about ten days afterwards. Alexander's Abdallah fell into the hands of a Federal soldier, by whom the horse unshod was ridden nearly fifty miles that day, over rough, hilly, stony roads. He finally became exhausted and was turned loose on the highway, where he was found the following day. He was taken to Lawrenceburg, where he was attacked with pneumonia and lived but a few days. Many believe that had he lived Alexander's Abdallah would have proved the greatest sire of trotting speed that Rysdyk's Hambletonian ever got.

One of the mares that was mated with Alexander's Abdallah in 1863, the first season that he stood at Woodburn, was Belle. She was by Mambrino Chief, and her dam was by Brown's Bellfounder, probably the best bred son of imp. Bellfounder. In 1864, Belle produced a colt that grew to be a very handsome, stylish stallion, and was known as Alexander's Belmont, but is now more generally known as Belmont 64. He was never raced, but it has been stated upon good authority that he was a natural trotter and was timed one or more miles in 2:28. Belmont was early in life placed at the head of the trotting stud at Woodburn. One of the mares mated with him in his five year old form, in 1869, was a four year old known as Miss Russell. Her sire was Pilot Jr., a fast trotting son of old Pacing Pilot. Her dam was Sally Russell, a strictly running bred mare, got by the famous race horse Boston. Sally Russell's dam was Maria Russell by Thornton's Rattler, a son of Sir Archy; second dam by Stockholder, another son of Sir Archy; third dam Miranda by Topgallant, a son of imp. Diomed; fourth dam by imp. Diomed and fifth dam by imp. Medley.

Miss Russell was quite a fast trotter for her day. She trotted a mile at Woodburn in 2:44 as a two year old. As already stated, she was mated with Belmont in her four year old form; and the following year produced a chestnut colt now known as Nutwood, and whose ability as a sire and perpetuator of 2:30 speed has never been equalled by any stallion yet brought to light. Before he was twelve months old Nutwood was bought by J. W. Knox, then a glass manufacturer of Pittsburg, Pa. The price reported was $500. Some time afterwards Mr. Knox decided to close out his business at Pittsburg, and offered his horse stock at public sale.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, who claimed to know the facts, stated several years ago that on the night before the sale Mr. Knox said to a friend that while every animal would be sold he would like for him to look out for a few of them, including a certain colt and filly. The friend did as requested. The colt was knocked down to his bid of $170, and he got the filly for $140. This friend paid his own money and took a bill of sale of the two animals.

The evening after the sale the friend met Mr. Knox and said to him that he would keep the filly but did not want the colt, and passed Mr. Knox the bill of sale of the latter. Mr. K. tried to persuade his friend to keep the colt, and assured him that it would be the greatest mistake of his life if he did not. The friend probably thought this was horse talk. At any rate he insisted upon having the money, and Mr. Knox felt compelled to keep the colt. It proved very fortunate that he did so.

As Nutwood was Miss Russell's first foal and Alexander's Belmont had not then demonstrated his ability as a sire, it is probable that Nutwood showed considerable speed as a youngster to induce Mr. Knox to pay $500 for him. He did not prove to be a colt trotter, however, although it may have been from lack of training. He did not come to the front as a race winner until September 16, 1876. On that date he won a five heat race at Cleveland, O., in a field of five starters. Nutwood won the first heat in 2:38½ and the second in 2:40½. Lady M. took the next two in 2:37, 2:35, respectively, but Nutwood won the fifth and deciding heat in 2:31.

On September 28th, or twelve days after winning at Cleveland, O., Nutwood won another five-heat race at Parker City, Pa., beating a field of six competitors. He lost the first heat in 2:38½ and the second in 2:35, but took the next three in 2:32½, 2:37, 2:39. Two days after the above victory he won another race at Parker City, Pa., in straight heats; time 2:39½, 2:33, 2:33½. The above were the only races Nutwood won in 1876. He started in seven races that year, won first money in three, second in two and was behind the money in the other two.

Nutwood began the campaign of 1877 in Pennsylvania and closed it in California. His first race that year was at Pittsburg, Pa., June 11th, in a field of six starters. He won the third heat in 2:36½, which gave him second money. The following week, June 19th, he started at Grand Rapids, Mich., in a field of seven and won, taking third, fourth and sixth heats in 2:29, 2:30½, 2:31½. Two weeks after the above race he started on July 3d at Detroit, Mich. He won the third heat in 2:27½, which gave him second money.

Later Nutwood was shipped to California, where he landed about the last of August or first of September. On September 14th he started at Marysville, Cal. He won the second and fourth heats, each in 2:30, and was second in the other three heats. The following week, September 21st, he started at Sacramento, Cal., in a field of ten. Frank Ferguson won the first and second heats in 2:26½, 2:26. Nutwood finished the first heat in fourth position and the second in fifth, after which he went on and won in 2:26½, 2:27½, 2:28.

At Stockton, Cal., September 29th, Nutwood won a race in straight heats; time 2:30, 2:28½, 2:30½. His next race was at San Jose, Cal., October 3d. He won in straight heats; time 2:25½, 2:30½, 2:23½. The following day, October 4th, he won a five-heat race at San Jose. He won the first heat in 2:25½, lost the next two in 2:25, 2:25½, respectively, but won the next two in 2:26½ each.

His next race was at San Francisco, Cal., November 10th, and his only competitor was St. James. Nutwood won in straight heats; time 2:25½, 2:25½, 2:25½. His last appearance in the season of 1877 was in a match race to wagons, against Pat Hunt, and it took place at San Francisco, Cal., December 15th. Pat Hunt won in straight heats; time 2:25, 2:25½, 2:25. Nutwood started eleven times during the season of 1877. He won first money in eight of his races, second money in three, and reduced his record to 2:23½, a remarkably good showing.

Nutwood remained in California during the winter of 1878 and made a season in the stud there in the following spring, after which he was shaped up and raced in the fall. His first start that season was at San Francisco, Cal., September 11th, in the 2:23 class and Nutwood won in straight heats; time 2:25, 2:24, 2:23. One week later, September 18th, he started again over the same track and scored another victory, taking first, second and fifth heats in 2:24, 2:24, 2:26½.

He next started in a free-for-all trot at Stockton, Cal., September 27th. His competitors were Judge Fullerton and Occident. Judge Fullerton won in straight heats; time 2:18½, 2:19½, 2:19½. Nutwood finished second in the first heat and third in the other two, giving him third money. He next started at San Jose, Cal., October 3d, in the 2:23 class, but was beaten by Doty in 2:23, 2:21½, 2:21. Two days after the above race he started in a free-for-all against Judge Fullerton and Occident. Judge Fullerton won in 2:18½, 2:20½, 2:19. Nutwood stood 3-2-3 in the summary. He started in five races that season, won first money in two, second in one and third in two.

Nutwood remained in California that winter and made another season there in the stud in 1879. He was also started several times that fall. His first appearance that season was at Oakland, California, September 5th, in a free-for-all. His only competitor in this race was Graves, and the latter won in straight heats, time 2:24½, 2:23½, 2:22½. The following week Nutwood met Graves, Occident, Tommy Gates and St. Julien in a free-for-all at Sacramento, Cal. This race was trotted September 13th. Occident won the first heat in 2:23. Nutwood took the second in 2:20½. Graves got the third in 2:23½, but Nutwood won the next two in 2:24½, 2:26.

The above was the most important victory that Nutwood ever scored. The following week, September 20th, Nutwood met St. Julien and Graves in a free-for-all at Stockton, Cal. St. Julien won, best time, 2:17. Graves got second money and Nutwood third. His next start was at Oakland, Cal., October 25th, against time, to beat 2:15½. This trial occurred on the same day and track that St. Julien, in the presence of General Grant and others, reduced the world's trotting record to 2:12½. Nutwood was given two trials and trotted the miles in 2:19, 2:19½, respectively. On November 27th, Nutwood was started at Stockton, Cal. to beat 2:19. He was given three trials and trotted his miles in 2:21½, 2:21½, 2:18½, respectively, making his record in the third mile.

Nutwood was wintered in California again that year, and made another season in the stud there in 1880. In the fall of 1880 he was started in two races against the stallion Santa Claus, but was beaten in both. He was also started to beat 2:18½, but that, too, was a losing performance, the time of the mile being 2:19. Nutwood did stud service in California four seasons, from 1878 to 1881 inclusive, but it is claimed that his patronage there was light. The horsemen of that section did not seem to appreciate his merits.

In the fall of 1881 Mr. Knox sold Nutwood to J. C. McFerran & Co., proprietors of the famous Glenview Stock Farm, Louisville, Ky. The price reported was $15,000. This was after the sensational Maud S. out of Miss Russell, the dam of Nutwood, had become queen of trotters by taking a record of 2:10½. J. C. McFerran had great faith in the produce of great broodmares, and Miss Russell then stood at the head of that class. It was doubtless this fact that induced McFerran & Co. to buy Nutwood. They had faith in his ability to sire trotters, although he was not then represented by a single son or daughter in the list. There were few establishments at that day which had so choice a lot of broodmares as that at Glenview Farm, and from the time that Nutwood began stud service there until the day of his death his opportunities were as good as those of any stallion of his time.

Nutwood remained at Glenview until the dispersal sale of the stock of that establishment in October, 1886, when he was bought under the hammer by F. D. Stout, proprietor of Highland Stock Farm, Dubuque, Ia., for $22,000. The broodmares at Highland Stock Farm were as choice as money could buy, and Nutwood held the place of honor there until his death, which occurred on December 4, 1896.

Nutwood was not only well bred, but he was an excellent individual. He was a dark chestnut in color, with an elongated star in the forehead, stood 15.2 hands at the withers, and 16 hands over the hips. His weight was 1160 pounds. He had a neat, bony head, which was broad between the eyes, tapered toward the muzzle, and was neatly joined to a neck that was clean in the throat, of good length, fine and bloodlike. His barrel was round, deep and of good length. His back short and strong, loin broad and well muscled, hips long and smoothly turned, quarters powerfully muscled, gaskins wide and strong, legs and feet exceptionally good.

It was in 1883 that the first standard performer by Nutwood appeared. That season his daughter Manon took a record of 2:22½, and Felix, also called Nutcracker, got a mark of 2:25½. At the close of last season Nutwood was credited with 131 trotters that had taken records from 2:08½ to 2:30, and forty-one pacers that had taken records from 2:06½ to 2:30. He is credited with 132 sons that have sired 423 trotters and 270 pacers that have taken records in standard time. Some of his sons are proving very successful sires of race-winning speed.

Among them are Highwood 2:21½ and Woodbrino 2:25½. The former sired Caid 2:07½ and the latter got Greenbrino 2:10½, both of which have been among the most prominent of American-bred trotters on European tracks during the past year or two.

Great as has been Nutwood's success as a sire of 2:30 performers and as a sire of producing stallions, his success as a broodmare sire is far more remarkable. In this respect he has proved himself far superior to any other stallion that has ever lived. His daughters have already produced 147 trotters and 42 pacers that have taken records in 2:30 or better. His perpetuating power is further shown by the fact that his daughters have produced 59 sires of 2:30 performers.

Nutwood will be known in turf history as the greatest and most successful perpetuator of uniform trotting and pacing speed that had ever been produced up to his day. The fact is already established that the Nutwood cross is one of the most valuable that can be found for combining with the Wilkes and Electioneer crosses. The ultra-fashionable pedigree of the near future will be that in which the Wilkes-Mambrino Patchen, the Electioneer and the Nutwood are closely combined, provided they all come through first-class individuals.—American Horse Breeder.

Entries to Harness Races at Woodland.

As will be seen by the big list of entries below, Woodland is to be congratulated on the outlook for a successful race meeting. Woodland is one of the most popular places with the horsemen on the circuit. They are always confident that they will have a good track and that the management will do all in its power to make it pleasant for them. Woodland always gives liberal purses and being in the center of a very prosperous and populous part of the State the races are well attended.

THE CIRCUIT of the larger towns this year commences at Vallejo, on August 11th. The Vallejo association has received a good entry list and the Vallejo track has been put in the pink of condition for this meeting. There have been more horses working on the Vallejo track this year than for a number of years past and the horsemen have expressed themselves as being pleased with the way the track has been kept in order under Joe Smith's management. The next place on the line will be the Napa meeting. Napa has also a big list of entries and as no fair or race meeting was held there last year, the association will have two years' appropriation for the fair exhibit. Napa filled its harness races with a liberal entry list and the management is to be congratulated on the prospect of a Napa fair and race meeting that will remind people of old times. The next week will be occupied by the meeting of the Golden Gate District Agricultural Association, No. 1, which will go to Pleasanton this year, the first time the meeting has been held outside of Oakland or San Francisco. This association did not give a meeting last year; consequently it also has two years' appropriation to be used for its coming fair. It is manifest that people around Pleasanton want this meeting and are enthusiastic over the prospect, as they raised $2000 in two days as a bonus to secure it. The Pleasanton track is historic and has a world-wide reputation as being the "Mecca" of the harness horsemen of California. The program of harness races announced is an excellent one and no doubt will attract a large number of entries. The Golden Gate Agricultural Association, District No. 1, is not the same association that gave the Golden Gate race meet at Oakland last year. After Pleasanton comes Woodland. In another part of the paper will be seen the list of entries received for this meeting, which is sufficient to make it an assured success. It is the biggest list received this year by any association on the circuit that has closed its entries, with Los Angeles yet to be heard from. Woodland always has a big meeting. It is one of the best managed associations on the Coast, and the people in that vicinity turn out in crowds to witness the races and attend the fair. The State Fair commences on September 8th, Monday of the week following Woodland. The State Fair advertises six nomination purses to close August 2nd of from $1000 to $1200 each. This is the first installment of their program and they will follow it by a list of races for liberal amounts to complete their program. The Stockton meeting commences on September 27th, following the State Fair. The Stockton entries close on August 1st and stakes range from $500 to $1000. The racing is under the management of the Stockton Driving Club, as it has been for several years. Stockton always gives one of the largest and best meetings on the circuit. The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association is going to Fresno this year and follows the meeting at Stockton. It commences on September 30th and will be given in connection with the Agricultural Fair of that district. Fresno has not had a fair or race meeting for several years and the people are ripe and enthusiastic for a meeting this year, $1500 having been subscribed as a bonus for the races, which is guaranteed by the citizens and the Fresno Driving Club. Fresno has one of the best appointed and finest tracks on the Coast. It is enjoying a year of unusual prosperity and there is no question but the Breeders have made a good move in going there. Following Fresno will be a meeting at Bakersfield. The management there has been a little backward in announcing their intentions further than that they expect to give a rousing big race meeting. Los Angeles winds up the circuit with a meeting from October 11th to 18th. Los Angeles has always been considered the best harness horse city on the Pacific Coast. With a meeting at Fresno and Bakersfield this year it will make the trip to Los Angeles easier for the horsemen, and it is expected there will be larger fields of starters than for several years past.

JUST WHY THE BILL introduced for the protection of song birds in this State did not pass at the last session of the Legislature is not known to the writer. Song birds are in the same category as those known commercially as plumaged birds. When the value of 90% of the birds and also other so called field vermin is thoroughly understood, it may then be too late to prevent extermination to such a material extent as to practically make many species of birds almost valueless to the farmer and fruit grower.

To-day many feathered creatures in particular are killed as vermin which should find no place in the prescribed list. Take, for instance, the numerous and beautiful members of the hawk family, and the owls—which are given a worse character by far than they merit, when is considered the number of gophers, field mice, snakes, etc., they daily consume.

As a showing concerning the awful and certain rapidity with which the total extinction of various species will follow their indiscriminate and persistent hunting and destruction, it may interest those seeking to prevent the destruction of brilliant plumaged birds to learn that, at the quarterly sales in Mincing Lane, London, held on the 4th of February, no less than 1755 skins of birds of paradise were put up, of which 500 were those of hens; 500 skins of the rare impeyan and 50 of the beautiful argus pheasant; 230 cases of small skins, unclassified; 2953 boxes (of 200 each) of ostrich feathers, but to these no further importance need be attached, as they are now taken from the living bird, productive of little or no pain, though rendering the unfortunate creatures somewhat indelicate objects from their nudity, or at least what would be deemed so in other bipeds. But at the sale, 245 boxes of osprey feathers were put up besides those of gulls and other sea birds. No wonder that these latter have been placed under protection in the United States by Federal statutes. In addition to what may be considered legitimate skins, we note over 10,000 of the pretty little chinchilla, 11,800 Australian opossums and 206 of the diminutive Indian fox. Truly, extermination is but a matter of very short time, unless we can enlist the help of the fair sex by inducing them to forego the vanity of borrowed plumes.

TRACK SECRETARIES should realize the importance of the rule adopted by the National and American Trotting Association regarding a prompt and full report of their meetings. These records are for the benefit of those engaged in breeding and racing harness horses and also serve the racing interest by making identification easier. The Year Book is principally compiled from these reports and the publishers have announced their purpose of making the next number as free from errors as possible. Secretaries of race tracks have it in their power to render very valuable assistance in doing this and at the same time do themselves and the interests they represent a good service.

THIRD PAYMENTS—As will be seen by the published list elsewhere, the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes, $6000, guaranteed, for foals of 1902, received 209 third payments out of 299 original entries. This is a remarkably good showing and is evidence that people who are breeding are confident in the prosperity of harness racing. Through a clause in the conditions of the stakes, nominators who failed to get foals or whose mares or foals died have the privilege of substitution or selling their nomination and transferring it to someone else at any time up to January 1, 1903. There were 27 transfers and the first and second payments were returned to parties who sold their nominations. Applications for sale and purchase of nominations were taken up in the regular order in which they were received. A great many mares have been bred this year, and the Breeders Association will offer another stake for foals of 1903, and it is suggested that they close and make payments, so that they will not fall on the same dates as the stakes for foals of 1901 and 1902.

$80,000 and the Purse for the Winner.

A press dispatch sent out from New York, says: "Forfeits aggregating $20,000 were deposited to-day in the Boralma-Lord Derby and The Abbot-Boralma trotting races scheduled for August. Thomas W. Lawson, owner of Boralma, sent a certified check of $5000 as his second deposit on the forfeit to bind the races between Boralma and Lord Derby, and another certified check for a similar amount to bind the meeting between Boralma and The Abbot. E. E. Smathers who owns Lord Derby, sent a certified check for $5000 to fulfill his part of the conditions, and John J. Scannell, owner of The Abbot, also sent his certified check for a like amount. As Mr. Lawson had previously deposited $10,000 and Mr. Smathers and Mr. Scannell $5000 each, there is now up as forfeit money on the races the sum of $40,000. Forty thousand dollars more remains to be put up on the days of the races. According to the agreements the winner takes all in both races. The Boralma-Lord Derby race is to be decided at Hartford on August 2d, and it now looks as if the Boralma-The Abbot contest would also go to Hartford, taking place on August 28th or 30th. In each race the conditions call for the best two in three heats.

Classifying Driving Club Horses.

The great trouble with newly organized amateur associations is in classifying their horses. Any attempt to classify horses according to their records will prove a failure and a disappointment. The method in vogue by older associations is to have a speed committee who arrange the entries without regard to record, as to the known speed of the contestants and rearranging them from week to week, as one horse seems to have too much speed or another goes back. A rule of this kind is imperative with all amateur associations, and while the committee's classifications are not always satisfactory, which is to be expected, yet this is the only way, and in time the members soon realize the necessity for the plan.

An epidemic of scarlet fever, starting in Cincinnati, has spread in the last few weeks through a number of towns in Ohio, and the health authorities, after taking extraordinary precautions to confine the disease within the limit of its first ravages, were puzzled to understand the means by which it was carried elsewhere.

They made an investigation and have now come to the conclusion that much of the contagion was spread by tame pigeons and doves, which carried the germs from place to place.

The evidence on which this theory is based is that scarlet fever spread under strict quarantine from a house on the roof of which there was a large pigeon cote. The only live stock about the house not quarantined was the pigeons, which flew about the neighborhood.

If they didn't carry the disease germs the authorities don't know how the fever was spread.

Export of American Horses.

The revival of the horse does not necessarily mean a decline in the popularity of the bicycle, automobile, and trolley. These latter will go on independently of our four-footed beast of burden, and the latter, it may be said, will have his day again in spite of harnessing all the agencies of nature for performing the work of man. Wars and rumors of wars stimulate the demand for horses and mules, and in times of peace new forms of sport and pleasure introduce ways of utilizing them. The world to-day appears to be suffering a horse famine, and the heavy drafts made upon the resources of this country contribute largely to the steadily advancing prices for good horseflesh. England has been an excellent purchaser of our horses and mules for her South African campaign, where the animals were killed off by insects and the climate so rapidly that it seemed as if a sufficient number could never be shipped there to keep the army in the field well equipped.

In Europe to-day not a single country raises enough horses to meet its own actual demand in times of peace, and the facilities for breeding and raising horses are growing poorer every year. There are few good grazing lands and stock-breeding farms in Europe where horses can be raised on a large scale, and consequently this country becomes more and more the land for keeping the European armies supplied with their proper complement of horses and mules. In recent years the American trotters and fine carriage horses have become important factors in the export trade, and whereas a few decades ago such a thing as an American horse was hardly to be found abroad, to-day we have a steady stream of them going to all the European centers. Not even Russia has hesitated to avail herself of our best blooded stock, although for years the Orloff strain of trotting stock held complete supremacy in the minds of the Czar's patriotic citizens.

But loyalty to a ruling house cannot forever last, and the best thing the Russian horse lovers could do was to import American stallions for crossing with their Orloff breed, and then get a few American breeders and trainers to go over and show them how the Americans did it. So we have to-day not only American horses and trotters in abundance in Russia, but American trainers and breeders practically in control of the royal stables and stock farms. Each year a good sized consignment of the best American trotters go abroad to add new blood and speed to the Czar's stock.

Germany, next to England, is probably one of our best European customers for horses, and there is a steady, healthy demand from that country that promises to continue and develop indefinitely as the years go by. The American trotting horses at the Vienna race tracks are not only features of the exhibitions, but they capture a large percentage of the prizes. There is no better way to advertise American horses and methods of training than to take a few of them abroad and enter the races in competition with the European horses. France became so jealous of our success in this line on her native soil, that she practically prohibited foreign horses from entering the races. In fact, to-day very few French races are open to horses from other countries, and the French sportsmen have this show practically all to themselves; but unfortunately for them the small glory attached to a restricted competition of this character makes it almost an empty honor. However, a good many French sportsmen are purchasing American trotters, and in a roundabout way getting the American horses to the front in the home races. In time it will be necessary for the sake of the sport to open the races to more general competition. A good many American horses are sent to Belgium, and then they are taken across to France, and within a very short time appear on the French turf as home bred horses.

Italy, Denmark and Holland are good buyers of our trotting horses, and the annual shipments to these countries are considerable, while far-off New Zealand and Australia make small drafts upon our resources. To see that these American trotters exported are as represented, the National Trotting Association has export offices in a number of our seaports to issue certificates of pedigree and identity to the high-grade horses shipped. This is to prevent fraud, and thus injure the American horse trade in foreign countries, and it was first suggested by the European trotting associations. Several thousand certificates have been issued to high class racing stock; but these do not include the trotting bred roadsters or fine carriage horses.

In this export trade of American horses not a little attention should be directed to the American breeding methods and training. It is pretty generally recognized that our trainers and methods are superior to those found abroad, and we are to-day busily engaged in exporting trainers as well as racing horses. Most of the best European stables have American trainers connected with them, and American methods of breeding and raising the best stock are adopted. No better testimony to our national efforts in improving the horse is needed, and it partly accounts for a good deal of our success in supplying the world with the finest and fastest horses.

Promising Colts at Winters.

On the ranch of J. B. Griffin, near Winters, there are at the present time a number of colts being broken and trained by M. H. Giddings, one of the oldest trainers and best conditioners of horses in the State. The most promising of the youngsters in this stable is The Giggler, taken from pasture last October and broken to harness.

On the half-mile track at the Dixon Driving Park, on May 1st, he won the two year old race easily from a good field in three straight heats; first two in 1:23, third in 1:20, with a bad break, pacing the last quarter in 36 seconds, last eighth in 17 seconds. It was a walk-over for the youngster, as he was capable of pacing a mile in 2:25. He is being worked on the half-mile track on the farm and can go a mile any day better than 2:25. When in motion his action is so perfect as to remind one of a piece of machinery, and he wears no hobbles or boots. He is a dark brown, rather large for a two year old, has an exceptionally fine disposition, and as fine a set of limbs as ever a horse possessed. In fact, he has been pronounced by horsemen one of the greatest two year olds in the State.

In the same stable is Ha-Ha, full brother to The Giggler, just broken to harness and possessing all the qualities of his older brother. This colt is entered in the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stakes of 1903.

Still another brother is Tee-Hee, two months old, entered in the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stake of 1904. The dam of these colts is Claribel, dam of G. W. W., three year old record 2:23½; second dam Mahaskabell, third dam Lady Hake, fourth dam Fanny Fern, and their sire is Bayswater Wilkes, sire of Kelly Briggs 2:10½. Claribel and colts are owned by Mrs. Ben Griffin, of Winters.

Red Rose, bay gelding, three years old, by Falrose, dam by Alexander Button, is taking kindly to his work. He is a pure gaited pacer and if nothing happens him will be a great four year old. He is owned by Lee Marshall, one of the genial liverymen of Winters.

A two year old bay colt by Bayswater Wilkes is being broken and will be trained by Mr. Giddings. This colt is a daisy and will be heard from in the future. He is owned by Joe Harlin, President of The Yosolano Fruit Co. of Winters.

Another fast youngster is Horace Crocker, bay gelding by Falrose, dam by General Reno. He is a pacer and a good one, too. Great things are predicted of him next year. He is owned by C. H. Ball, of Oakland, Cal.

A large bay horse by Alberdine, dam by Nevada, is a crackerjack and with only a month's work is show-remarkable speed. The colt is owned by Louis Overhaue. The sire of this colt and sire of his dam are owned by Peter Larsen, of Winters.

The driver of the colts is M. H. Giddings, whose ability as a trainer and driver is well known, and is still, after an active life of seventy-seven years, able to subdue the most obstinate colt and his example of patience and kindness toward them may well be emulated by scores of others.

THE LOOKER ON.

WINTERS, Cal., July 2, 1902.

Increase the Prizes.

There is no question whatever that all of the State Fair Associations, State Boards of Agriculture and what not conducting State Fairs are now in much better financial condition than they were a few years ago. History relates that some of these organizations were in debt and badly behind one way and another a few years back, whereas, thanks to the prosperity of the past two or three seasons, they are now resting easy with money on hand in larger or smaller amounts. Strangely enough, however, it would seem that none of these associations feels like augmenting to any great extent the prizes it offers for the horse. So far, the premium lists received show that the same old schedules will rule for another year. It was freely commented on last season—for instance, that at one of the most famous of these State Fairs a man could take a peck of corn under his arm in a flour sack to the grounds and with it win four times over all the money it was possible for the best draft horse on the grounds to compete for. In the one case the peck of corn was worth at most half a dollar; on the other the horse was worth from $2500 upward, and while there was no risk at all to run with the grain there was much to venture in taking the valuable horse away from home, rocking hither and thither in the freight car and standing day and night in a stable more or less drafty from the very exigencies of the occasion. There is yet plenty of time to remedy this defect in such programs as have already been published. It will not be hard for the directors to get word to owners of horses that they have increased the premiums offered. Those associations which have not yet published their schedules should by all means augment their appropriations for the horse classes. There was a time in the middle and late nineties when there did not seem to be much occasion for offering premiums for horses at all, so slim were the exhibits and so slight the interest taken by the public; but now all that has been changed, and the horses attract more attention than any other feature of State Fairs. Moreover, there are now quite as many crack horses of the various breeds shown as there ever were, and by the time the fall fairs are held again there will be hundreds more in the United States whose owners will be anxious to exhibit them. Increase the premium for horses at all fairs.—Breeders Gazette.

Trotting Races in Italy.

Frank S. Gorton of Chicago, who is sojourning in Europe, writes the Review as follows: "I attended the harness meeting, May 29th, at Bologna, Italy, and was much entertained. Bologna has a population of 165,000 people, and I am sure there were 30,000 on the ground, and they all liked the sport, yet they said, 'These are not our best races.' The handicap reminded me of the Murray Howe Memphis system; four starters, and Bonatella had the worst of it. Lamma drove Caine Shields a good race and won. The race of the day was the Futurity for three year olds. Duca Herschel was a prohibitive favorite, and had trotted a mile in 2:18, but was unsteady and came near losing to a big colt by a Russian sire, dam an American mare, and driven in a most masterly manner by Adolph Giorgi. As Duca made many breaks, the audience were all with Giorgi, but the decision stood. The Italians had bought some of the good trotters that the Austrians got in New York. Rossi gave less for Bonatella than she sold for in New York, but has won her out. He is reckoned the best driver in Italy, and Adolph Giorgi next, but Lamma drives well, and there are many others. People were most kind to me. I was the guest of Giorgi Bros., also of Mr. Lamma, whom I met in New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Bolly, and when I tell you I met many people, but only four spoke English, you can imagine one needed the use of his hands.

"In all countries here, where the government has taken an interest in horse breeding, you are impressed by the good-looking sound horses; not a curb or indication of it. No matter what the horse was, if not sound, he would not do at all for stock purposes. I mean of course what would naturally be transmitted.

"Carriage horses here all look like our trotters. There is a fine trotting track here. I think the market for our trotters will not be as good as formerly, as these people bought many good trotters cheap during the hard times in the United States, and they can't get themselves up to paying the prices good ones bring at home.

"Abnet has won $10,300 for Giorgi Bros."

King Edward and His Horses.

Ascot race course, though it really belongs to the people, George III., by royal charter, having granted the heath on which it is laid out to the public to be used for the purpose of racing and training horses, has always been regarded as the property of the crown. The heath originally belonged to the Duke of Cumberland, the breeder of Eclipse, who first established the races on it. At his death it reverted to his great-nephew, George III., who disposed of it in the manner stated above, and appointed his successors trustees to see that his intentions were carried out. His sons, George IV., though both kept stables of race horses, preferred Newmarket and Goodwood to Ascot, so the now famous heath was neglected until Victoria came to the throne. By her orders her first Master of the Horse, the Earl of Errol, laid out the race track and caused a suitable grand stand to be erected. This the Queen and the Prince Consort opened in state in June, 1840, shortly after their marriage, and it has ever since been the custom for members of the royal family to attend the races in state on Tuesday, the opening day, and Thursday, the Cup day.

The Ascot course, which is very wide and 66 yards less than two miles in circumference, is not by any means an ideal one for racing purposes, as the first mile is all down hill, while the second is on the ascent, the grade increasing as the winning post is reached. The last two hundred yards being up a steep hill. The new mile course is perfectly straight and against the collar from the start, so it takes quite a stayer to win over it. Much more so is this the case with the Cup, the start for which takes place at the half-mile post, after which the competitors must encircle the course, the reverse way to that usual in this country, making the total distance $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles, with the steep hill to climb twice.

The Cup has always been of gold, never costing less than $5000. This year it cost nearly twice that amount, and besides the trophy the winner earned $15,000 in coin of the realm. All the net receipts of the meeting, which only lasts four days, are added to the races. Of these there are seven each day and the owners lucky enough to win have, for the last quarter of a century, received some $150,000 beyond their entrance fees, which are small, considering the value of the prizes, ranging from $100 for the Cup, down to $15 for some of the least valuable events.

It has always been King Edward's ambition to personally manage Ascot, but while his mother was alive she refused to permit him any voice in the matter. When he ascended the throne one of his first acts was to have plans prepared for new stands at Ascot. These were partially completed for the meeting this year, at which, unfortunately, their projector was unable to be present. Already more than half a million dollars have been spent on the improvements, and it will take as much more to fully carry out the King's intentions. The necessary funds were raised by subscription among His Majesty's friends, for the terms of the charter make no provisions for borrowing money. By an informal arrangement the sum will be repaid at the end of twenty years out of a sinking fund taken from the receipts of the stand. In order to provide for this fund without cutting down the value of the prizes the King ordered the charges for admission to the reviewed enclosure, Tattersall's ring, and the paddock to be raised to $10 a day or $25 for the week. Tickets to the public stand remained as usual, $2.50 on three days and $5 on Cup day. Despite the extra charge the fashionable attendance this year was beyond record. Had the King been able to attend it might have been larger, though he was represented on each of the four days by the Prince and Princess of Wales, and on the opening day and Cup day Queen Alexandra herself was present.

Next year the Gold Cup will be worth $10,000, and the winner will receive $50,000 in cash in addition, for it is the King's desire to make it the most valuable race in the world. The entries close for this great event the first Tuesday in January next. The conditions are very simple: "A sweepstakes of $100 each, half forfeit, for three year olds and upwards, to carry, if three years old, 105, if four, 126, if older, 130 pounds. Mares allowed three pounds, no other allowances. No penalties." Doubtless many American horses will be entered, though the only horse from this side to win the Cup hitherto, was Foxhall when four years old. Last year Kilmarnock ran for it, and this year Mr. Whitney was represented by him and his English bred Derby winner, Volodyovski. Neither got a place, however, the race falling to the Duke of Portland's William the Third, who finished second to Volodyovski for the Derby last year. Mr. Keene was represented by his Oaks winner, Cap and Bells, and his American Metropolitan winner, Conroy II. Both ran disappointingly. The Frenchmen, who have taken the Gold Cup seven times, also started a strong contingent, but for the first time for many years the three coveted places were filled by English horses. We have had one Ascot cup winner in this country, the French bred Mortemer by Compeige, who did us good service at the stud. We have another in St. Gatien, who should do equally as well. As winners of a Gold Cup must be both stout and game to finish up the hill after so long a race, they are the sort of horses to breed from, so the more we get of them the better.

Contrary to the usual impression, King Edward of England has not long been closely associated with the turf, though he has always taken great interest in racing, and at one time was a heavy but very unsuccessful plunger. His initial venture as an owner was a very modest one, for the first horses to carry his colors were two very indifferent steeplechasers, Hettie and Magic, who only succeeded in winning a minor race or two. His next venture were the purchases from Sir Roland Mackenzie of Imp, a fair three year old, but for some reason the deal fell through, for when the colt won the Kempton Jubilee of 1890 he was in the scarlet jacket of his former owner.

Three years before the Imp incident the King, who had previously bred several prize winning hackneys at his Sandringham stud in Norfolk, purchased from the Earl of Ellesmere the broodmare Perdita II. To this lucky purchase he owes all his success on the turf and all his fame as a breeder.

Perdita, who was by Hampton out of Hermione by Young Melbourne, out of La Belle Helene by St. Albans, a son of Stockwell, had raced up to her sixth year, winning several minor stakes, and proving herself a good stayer. Her first mate, 1887, was Barcalaine, to whom she threw Derelict, a fair race horse, who for the first time carried the royal colors successfully on the flat. Mated again with the same horse she threw another colt that showed racing ability, so her owner determined to send her on a visit to the famous St. Simon, whose fee even at that time was $1500, and has since been doubled. The result of their union was Florizel II., who, though he did not himself win any of the great classics, begot the winners of both the Derby and St. Leger in his second season. Two years later Perdita threw Persimmon to the same sire. This colt took for the King his first Derby, and was also successful in the St. Leger. But the most illustrious scion of the family was his full brother, Diamond Jubilee, who, in addition to the Derby and St. Leger, won the Two Thousand Guineas. Thus Perdita broke all previous records by producing two Derby winners, though this feat has since been equaled by Morganette, the dam of Galtee More, the Derby winner of 1897, and Ard Patrick, the hero of the event decided three weeks ago. As Morganette has a very promising two year old this season, while Perdita is dead, she may even surpass the wonderful record of the King's mare. One of the latter's produce, Sandringham, a full brother to the two Derby winners, never faced the flag, owing to an accident. After the Derby victory of Persimmon he was purchased by that prince of horse dealers, John Madden, and is now the head of his Kentucky stud. His first crop of youngsters are said to be very promising and will doubtless bring fancy prices when sent up to auction, as Madden is determined they shall be, having refused all overtures for a private sale for any of them.

In addition to the Derby, Persimmon won the Ascot Cup and the $5000 Eclipse stakes for His Majesty, and Diamond Jubilee was also successful in the last-named event. Ambush, an Irish-bred steeplechaser, of whom the King really thinks more than of any of the great horses he has himself bred, won him his first Grand National in 1900, and would have probably done so again had not the death of the Queen prevented his starting last year, while this season he broke down on the eve of the race. Being, unlike most steeplechase horses, qualified to transmit his excellence, this fine son of old Ben Battle will join the two great brothers, Florizel II. and Persimmon at the Sandringham stud. The third member of this illustrious family, Diamond Jubilee, has also been retired from racing and will head a stud the Prince of Wales is forming. He is a bad-tempered brute, however, and a natural deformity may prevent his enabling the future King to prove as great a success as a breeder as his father.

Few people in this country are aware that the late Queen was an enthusiastic and successful breeder of race horses. Among others she bred Sainfoin, winner of the Derby in 1890; but her special pet was Springfield, also bred at the royal paddocks at Hampton Court. This colt was sold at the annual sale of the Queen's yearlings to Mr. Houldsworth. He proved a great racehorse, though a mile was as far as he cared to go, and at the end of his racing career was repurchased by the Queen and placed at the head of her stud. Besides Sainfoin he sired Watercress, Mr. Haggin's famous sire, who in Water Color produced a colt the exact counterpart, except in color, of the Queen's pet, generally conceded to be the handsomest thoroughbred ever foaled. Golden Garter, another of the Haggin sires, was also bred by the Queen. He is by Ben D'Or out of Sanda, the dam of Sainfoin and Black Sand.

The King's colors, purple jacket heavily braided with gold, scarlet sleeves and black velvet cap with gold tassel, were not seen on the race track last season, owing to the death of the Queen. The stable was, however, raced on the King's behalf by his then close friend, the Duke of Devonshire, not very successfully, however, for it only earned a trifle over $15,000, while the previous season, when managed by His Majesty, the winning account was ten times that amount.

This season the King again assumed personal charge of his stable, but disposed of all the older horses, only retaining twenty-one two-year-olds, all of his own breeding. Though some of these have been very highly tried none of them have yet been successful. Indeed, had not Ambush won a couple of jumping races before the flat-racing season opened the King's colors would not have been first past the post since his accession to the throne. As soon as he recovers his health, however, they may be more successful. The riders selected to carry them are the American jockey, Danny Maher, and the English jockey, Herbert Jones.

As far as the arrangements for his stable go King Edward is distinctly democratic. Unlike most of the prominent English owners, he does not employ a private trainer, or have a training establishment of his own. When first he entered seriously into the racing business his horses were handled by John Porter at Kingsclere in Hampshire. This trainer's principal employer at the time was the late Duke of Westminster. A disagreement between the Duke and Baron Hirsch, then the side partner of His Majesty, caused the removal of the royal horses to Egerton House at Newmarket, where they have since remained under the care of Richard Marsh, who also trains for Lord Wolverton, Mr. Arthur James and Mr. Larnach, his former patron, the Duke of Devonshire, having removed his horses elsewhere, owing to a falling out with the King.

When Prince of Wales the King attended all races with the exception of those at Royal Ascot, incognito, and any undue recognition of his presence caused displeasure. He has pursued the same policy since his accession. His favorite lounging place is in the paddocks. These on English race courses are very spacious and usually well shaded with trees. Around them the King strolls, examining the competitors for a coming race, and frequently asking questions and addressing remarks to the owners, trainers or jockeys, though it is not considered etiquette for any but his intimate friends to notice his presence, or address him unless he speaks first. He is seldom seen in the betting ring, though he does occasionally visit Tattersall's enclosure. It is customary in England to bet during the actual progress of races, so while a race is being run the leading bookmakers congregate on the lawn in front of the royal box to accept or refuse the wagers its occupants may offer. This method of speculation is much favored by the King, and he seldom witnesses a race on which he does not lose or win a bet made after the starter's flag has fallen.—Chicago Horseman.

What the Horses Will Do This Year.

It is always risky to predict what horses will do, but a writer on the New York Sun has the courage to figure out what the following stars will do this year. He says a popular vote would show the average outlook for the harness performers would be as follows:

Cresceus to do well if he again trots a heat in 2:02½.

The Abbot to trot in 2:03 late in the season at Terre Haute or Memphis.

Lord Derby and Chain Shot to reach 2:05.

Boralma and The Monk to reach 2:06 or a trifle below it.

Prince Alert to beat 2:00, and Dan Patch to equal his sire's record, 2:01½, if necessary to win somewhere. Shadow Chimes and Audubon Boy to reach 2:04 or shade it a trifle.

Royal R. Sheldon 2:04½ to win a surprising race in fast time.

Zephyr to trot in 2:08, Dolly Dillon 2:07 to reach 2:05 or shade it a trifle.

The green pacers to get below Shadow Chimes' record of last season.

Little Boy to beat 2:00 if he stays sound the entire mile.

John A. McKerron to lower The Abbot's wagon record of 2:05½.

Lucille to lower 2:06½, the present wagon record, amateur to drive.

Two Fishers.

One morning when spring was in her teens
A morn to a poet's wishing,
All tinted in delicate pinks and greens—
Miss Bessie and I went fishing.

I in my rough and easy clothes,
With my face at the sun-tan's mercy;
She with her hat tipped down to her nose
And her nose tipped—vice versa.

I with my rod, my reel and my hooks,
And a hamper for luncheon recesses;
She with the bait of her comely looks
And the seine of her golden tresses.

So we sat down on the sunny dike,
Where the white pond lilies teeter,
And I went fishing like quaint old Ike,
And she like Simon Peter.

All the noon I lay in the light of her eyes
And dreamily watched and waited,
But the fish were cunning and would not rise,
And the baiter alone was baited.

When the time of departure came at last,
My bag hung flat as a flounder,
Bessie had neatly hooked her fish fast—
A hundred and fifty-pounder.

A Month in a Nepal Jungle.

Nepal, that mysterious land, that long strip of territory unknown and practically unsurveyed, extending along the northeast of India is, as is well known, closed to all Europeans unless they are provided with a pass from the Parliament at Khatmandu. These passes are only granted to a few of the highest officials, civil and military, of the Indian Government, for the purpose of the shooting. So cautious is the Nepalese Government about allowing foreigners into their country at all, that their permits confine the party to certain districts of twenty square miles or so, just inside the frontier. They also state how many tigers may be killed, and the time that may be spent in the district. One can quite understand this reserve and suspicion on the part of the Nepalese; as, if once general permission to enter their territory was given, they would soon be invaded by a host of shooting and exploring parties from India. Some of these parties would in all probability fall out with the independent little Gurkhas, and this might lead to international disputes and friction between the two countries. Besides, the Nepalese evidently realize the fact that once the English get a footing in any country, they have an awkward way of staying there.

At present the government of India is apparently perfectly content to leave Nepal independent and alone, and the two peoples are on the most friendly terms with one another. I once had the good fortune to be invited by a member of the Civil Service to accompany him across the border into the Balapur Sadhana District of Nepal, writes a correspondent of the Asian. He had a pass for a month and eight tigers, with permission to shoot any other game he came across in the district. On the 14th of March we met at Nepalganj on the frontier of Oudh. There we were joined by a sporting Rajah and thirty-one elephants, and prepared to start on the morrow across the border. Shikaris had been sent on ahead some time before to spy out the country and to bring "khubber" of any tigers that might be in the district. They came to say that during the last fortnight tracks of five tigers had been seen, but that none of the young water buffaloes which were tied up in the jungle had yet been killed. This sounded good enough, so we marched next day full of hope across the border to Balapur.

A well kept "pucca" road led as far as British territory extended, after which leaving it rapidly degenerated into a rough unmetalled track across the frontier. This, however, was of little consequence, as we were on elephant back, but a dog-cart that accompanied us had a really rough time of it. Nepalganj itself is a dirty little town with tiled roofed houses quite different from the ordinary Indian village. Here we saw for the first time the strings of little Gurkha coolies, mostly women, carrying heavy loads of skins and other jungle products from the interior. They carry their loads on their backs with a strap across their foreheads, and every man had a kukri (knife) stuck in his cummerbund. They evinced no surprise or interest in seeing us, although probably they had never seen a white face before. What struck us most about them were their square Mongol faces and their strong muscular legs, so different from the spindle-shanked native of the plains of India. Our camp was placed in a large mango grove near the village of Balapur. Within a hundred yards of our tents the Rapti river sped its way along, a clear smooth stream of snow water from the mountains of Nepal, here and there dashing over some rock or fallen tree and forming eddies and ideal salmon holes which looked as if they must contain mahseer or other fish. How the elephants enjoyed their evening bath after the dusty march. They lay down on their sides with their heads under water, occasionally putting up their trunks to take a breath of air, the mahouts in the meantime splashing the water over them, and scrubbing them with bricks.

The Rajah being a keen sportsman, and having had a lot of experience in tiger hunting throughout the Nepal Terai and in this district especially, we left the management of the sport entirely to him. He employed his own shikaris and elephants and was very keen to show us sport. As he said himself, although he had been out with many shikar expeditions, he had seldom had a chance of a shot himself, his whole time being employed in endeavoring to show sport to other people. Now, as we were only two guns he would be necessary to make a third, while his son-in-law the nawab's services might have to be called in to make a fourth.

His modus operandi for working the jungles was as follows: First, he formed his shikaris into various small parties and quartered them in different parts of the forest. With each he sent some buffalo calves which were grazed during the day, and tied up at night, as bait for tigers. Every morning a messenger came from each party to say whether any fresh tracks had been found or buffaloes killed. Should a tiger be marked down in a particular bit of jungle, we were to at once set out with all the elephants, take up our positions in "machans" placed in trees, and wait for the tiger to be driven past by the line of elephants.

This sounded simple enough, but after the first beat I quickly realized what skill and generalship it requires to know the best positions to place the guns, the direction in which to beat, and the line the driven tiger is likely to take. Again, there is the difficulty of maneuvering some thirty elephants and noisy mahouts in thick jungle. Without doubt it requires a vast amount of experience and knowledge of tigers and their ways.

For the first four days no "khubber" arrived in camp, the five tigers we had heard of had evidently taken their departure. The reason given by the shikaris for the non-appearance of tigers was that, owing to the exceptionally cold spring, the grass on the hills had not yet been burned, and in consequence the cattle, and with them the tiger, had not come down to the low jungles. We used to watch anxiously for fires on the hills at night, and after a few days were delighted to see vast lines of blazing grass which ought to have been sufficient to evict every animal within miles. But as yet no kill.

On the fifth day we made an expedition to a mound of ancient bricks covered by grass and thicket which is supposed to be Buddha's tomb. While there the mahouts heard a leopard, and a pahari came to say that one of his cows had been killed by a tiger. The next day one of our buffaloes was killed in the neighborhood of the tomb, but by a huge leopard. That evening we sat up from three P. M. till dark in "machans" one over the kill and one over a goat near the tomb, but although we again heard the leopard, nothing came.

On the 24th a shikari came in to say that there were fresh pugs of a big tiger in a piece of jungle quite near the camp, so we got the elephants together and had our first beat. There were the tracks right enough, and a most likely bit of jungle it looked, just the sort of a place a tiger would choose to spend the best of the day in. Full of hopes of having sport at last, we climbed into our "machans" with strict injunctions from the Rajah not to fire at anything but tigers. It was a short beat, and before I had realized it had begun I heard the shouting of the men and the noise of the elephants crashing down trees quite close. Soon a few great heads and trunks appeared, and we knew that the tiger was not at home. Bar a fine chital stag and a few peafowl, we had seen nothing. Very disappointed we got into howdas, and formed line for about two miles through the jungle. It looked most beautiful cover for game, dense forest, splendid timber with long trailing creepers and thick undergrowth through which the elephants trod their way. A few chetal and hog deer dashed away in front, and peafowl and black partridges rose at intervals, but nothing offered us a shot. We returned to camp not a little sad that the tiger should have escaped us, but little thinking what was in store for us next day.

On the morning of the 25th of March, which will always be marked with a red line under it, by me at least, the shikaris came in to say that they had tracked four full grown tigers into a certain bit of forest, and that as yet they had not left it. It happened to be a part that the Rajah knew well, and out of which he had often before had sport. He at once gave orders as to where the "machans" were to be placed and made all preparations for a big beat. Soon the elephants were standing ready with their pads on, and every spare man about camp from the king's prime minister to his barber on their backs eager to see the sport. We moved off in a long picturesque line and marched four miles to the piece of jungle the tigers were supposed to be in. At three P. M., we climbed into our "machans," stuck an extra branch or two in front and the elephants went off to join the beat. A deep narrow nullah ran along in front of the three "machans," which were placed about a hundred yards apart. The Commissioner was in the center, the Rajah on the left and I took the right. For about half an hour all was still save for the crowing of a jungle cock and the calling of various jungle birds. I was just beginning to think that sitting absolutely still in one position for more than half an hour at a time was just a little irksome, when I heard something approaching cautiously over the dried leaves, stopping every now and then as if to listen. With every nerve in tension, I had half raised my rifle when a fine peacock stalked into view, looked straight at me and retired. Next a mongoose shuffled along, evidently intent on getting away from the fast approaching sound of the beat.

Thinking what a grand sound it was, the crashing down of trees, the yells of the mahouts and the occasional scream of an elephant, I suddenly heard a shot on my left, followed by two more in quick succession. A few seconds later a tiger appeared over a little rise in the ground about fifty yards in front of me and trotted straight towards me. Afraid that he would pass me on the right, in which case, owing to my cramped position, it would have been awkward for me to fire, I covered him and when he stopped on the edge of the nullah fired. He gave a roar and dashed back over the rise, getting the contents of my left barrel as he disappeared. I felt sure the first shot hit him. I scarcely had time to load when two tigers came cantering along like frightened rabbits, with all their attention fixed on the noise behind them. The foremost one stopped on the edge of the nullah, giving me a splendid chance at about twenty yards. I bowled him over, and got the second one just as he came to the same place. Both fell into the nullah, the first one dashing straight for my "machan." I fired and broke its back when it was only a few yards from my dangling legs. The second managed to cross to the opposite bank and fall dead.

In a very short time the line of elephants arrived, having finished off my first tiger just over the rise of ground. When they saw the other two tigers lying dead close to my "machan," mahouts, shikaris, everyone, set up a frantic yell of delight. It was a proud moment for me. There was no time to be lost; one tigress had gone forward wounded by the Commissioner. We climbed into howdas, got the elephants into line and proceeded to endeavor to find her. We had not gone far when up she got on the left of the line. Everyone blazed at her, but she dashed away to the right and gave me a snap shot as she galloped across a small ravine. It was evidently my "day out," as I managed to send a bullet through her hind quarters, which apparently paralyzed her, as she stumbled on a few yards and lay down. We rode up and saw her lying under an elephant creeper, glaring angrily at us and biting her forepaws in rage and fury. A shot through the head settled her. A magnificent old tigress. We soon had all four padded, and had time to compare notes and enquire from the beat their story of the hunt. It appears the line came across all four gorging themselves on a sambhur stag, whose horns were brought along for our inspection. On being disturbed they dashed off in the direction of the left "machan." The Rajah fired rather hurriedly at the first that appeared, whereupon the other three retired, eventually coming round by me on the right. The Commissioner had a difficult galloping shot at the old tigress and hit her near the root of the tail, preventing her from traveling far. The line of elephants worked beautifully and needless to say, having had more than my slice of luck, I thought everything was perfection. That half hour, to my mind, was worth ten years of life. As for the shikaris, mahouts and camp followers, they became absolute lunatics for the rest of the day. It made up for all the days of waiting and disappointment. They were two tigers and two tigresses, all fine animals with magnificent long coats, straight down from the hills, not like the mangy Central Indian tigers in the hot weather.

Two days later news came of the fresh tracks of a big male tiger which had passed quite close to one of our buffaloes without touching it. As it was the Commissioner's last day, we had a couple of beats, but without seeing anything. I was then left alone with the Rajah to finish out the month's pass and to kill the remaining four tigers allowed. For a week no "khubber" came, and I had to content myself with stalking chital in the early morning and evening, and sitting up over a goat for leopards. This latter amusement I found most unsuccessful, and after the first novelty had worn off, wearisome in the extreme. The fact is, that the Nepalese goats are used to the jungle, and instead of bleating when alone and tied to a tree, as they should do, resign themselves at once to the situation, lie down and sleep peacefully. Sitting absolutely still for hours at a time on a hot afternoon, too, is far from pleasant. One is assailed on all sides by the whole of the insect world. First come the eye flies, which dodge up and down in front of one's eye, and when that one is closed, they change over to the other, making it necessary to wink continually. The house fly, of course, is there; in fact, I should like to know if there is any part of this world which he has not yet discovered. Towards evening the mosquitoes commence their tactics, and the whole time one is assailed from behind by the awful red ants, which climb the tree one is in and sting horribly. Altogether it is a poor game, and although I sat up many evenings, both for tigers and leopards, I never got a shot.

On April the 9th, news came of a tigress in the same bit of jungle in which we had got the four. We pursued the same tactics, but with only two "machans." The beat came across the tigress in some long grass, but she refused to go on, and kept dodging about in front of the line. Finally she hid herself in a dense mass of fallen trees and undergrowth, and refused to budge. I rode up on a pad elephant, and placed myself on one side of the thicket, at the same time making the elephants form a close line, and walk through it towards me. Now I thought I shall get a shot for certain, but not a bit of it. The wily brute dashed out between the elephant's legs and escaped to the rear.

We followed her up for a mile or so, but she had been thoroughly frightened, and had left the neighborhood. Once there was a shout of "Bagh" when we were wading through some long grass. I fired at where the grass moved, but it proved to be a fine stag hog deer which I had shot dead. The Rajah loosed off both barrels at a pig which he thought might be the tiger, but we didn't see the real thing again. After this I stayed on for another week, but never saw another tiger. Everyone was disappointed, as the district in ordinary years is never without a tiger or two.

It was hot enough too, in all conscience, and most of the jungle grass was burnt. The last few days we devoted to beating for everything, a "kisme hank" as they call it. The first day we went some twenty miles from camp through most likely looking ground close to the foot of the hills, but only succeeded in losing ourselves. After floundering about for hours in deep ravines, and seeing nothing on emerging we were accosted by some irate Nepalese policemen, who accused us of overstepping the boundary of the district allowed by the pass. However, we treated them with the contempt they deserved, and left them haranguing the jungle at the tops of their voices.

It was good sport beating out the hog deer in the grass islands of the river. They are very hard to see, and dart away very quickly through the long grass. One can only take a snap shot at them, and needless to mark that they are often missed. One can seldom take a steady aim from off the back of an elephant, for, as an Irishman would remark, even when standing still he is always moving about. On April the 14th, we again beat our favorite tiger jungle, and this time evicted two bears, one of which we got, the other going off wounded. We followed her up, and when careering along at my elephant's best pace I suddenly saw the bear sitting under a low tree. Hastily telling the mahout to pull up I covered the bear's head, but just as I pulled the trigger, she rushed at the elephant and got the bullet in the shoulder. The elephant stood firm, and I hit the bear again as she dashed off into the grass. There was blood all over the place, and in spite of having three bullets in her, that bear escaped in a most mysterious way. It was late in the evening and the elephants were tired, so we returned to camp intending to return next morning. The shikaris were convinced the bear was dead, and that we should find her next day. On the following morning, our last in Nepal, I took out a dozen elephants to look for the wounded bear. We were met on the way by a shikari who said that he had just seen a huge leopard.

He showed us the tracks, and we formed line to beat him up. We went backwards and forwards twice through the small piece of cover and were about to give it up when the leopard darted out of a narrow little ravine in front of my elephant. I hit him behind, but he went on a hundred yards, and lay down in a thicket. The elephants trampled him out, and I finished him off with a couple of shots more. He proved to be a splendid old male seven feet three inches long, and was undoubtedly the one I had sat up for so often near Buddha's tomb. This was most satisfactory, as I had particular spite against the Nepalese leopards, and this one in particular. That night we did a long march across the border into Indian territory, leaving with regret the beautiful jungles of Nepal. I was certainly disappointed with the sport; as one was led to expect such great things. The fact is, there are too many sportsmen and guns among the Gurkhas themselves, and in consequence the deer are shot down in large numbers. My bag consisted of four tigers, one bear, one leopard, seven chital, two hog deer, one nilghai, one barking deer. The worst of tiger shooting is that one must devote oneself entirely to it. One cannot go firing about the jungle at other game. Still, as in other forms of sport, one good day makes up for months of waiting. One only remembers the good days and not the blank ones.

The Uncertainty of Firearms.

The gun is an instrument of precision, but its uncertainty is proverbial. The engineer "hoist with his own petard" has been known to history for centuries, and no sportsman needs an explanation of the meaning of "a flash in the pan." Firearms always have been, and always will be, more or less erratic in their action, but the uncertainty is beyond computation. People who have a passion for figures, for instance, and delight in making such calculations as will fix the value of one's chance of receiving thirteen trumps in one's next hand at whist, simply cannot grapple with the odds against a gun not going off when the trigger is pulled.

In the making and assembling of the very many pieces of which a gun is composed, it would be surprising if there were not some irregularity, but, in most cases, it requires a sequence or coincidence of unusual events to produce an "accident."

It is, and long has been, the rule to make guns of greater strength than requisite to withstand the strains they will have to bear in ordinary use. This margin of safety is secured in most countries by the compulsory proof of the weapon with heavy charges and loads. It has happened that a gun has withstood these tests perfectly, yet burst at the very first time fired with the ordinary load, possibly because the strain of the "proof" charge exhausted the tenacity of the metal, or strained it beyond the limit of its elasticity. Usually when a barrel is burst it is because it is subjected to a greater strain at a certain point than it is expected, or constructed, to withstand. Internally a barrel is practically cylinder; externally it is taper—really a curve so that the thickness of the metal of the barrel corresponds to the diminishing pressure of the explosion. If by a too weak primer, or a too strong one, the ignition of the powder is not effected in the powder chamber, but a portion only of it is ignited there and a part of the charge driven up the barrel before it ignites then there will be an increased strain at some point forward of the chamber, and it is only a question of degree whether the barrel is or is not burst by this unwanted pressure. As the strength of a chain is only that of its weakest link, so it may happen that the workman in edging up the rib has cut slightly into the barrel with his file, and thus weakened the barrel, but so long as he left a sufficient thickness to ensure a reasonable margin of safety he cannot be held responsible.

So many things—from varying loads and different explosives and detonators to the total or partial obstruction of the muzzles—change or increase the pressure, so that the sportsman cannot be expected to know a tenth. He can secure practical immunity from the danger of a burst barrel, or a badly broken action, by using a gun and ammunition which give uniform shooting. Test the gun by shooting, at sporting range at a target half-a-dozen times consecutively with each barrel; count carefully the number of pellets on the plate, or target; if between the greatest number and the smallest the difference is not more than ten per cent of the pellets in the load, then, so far as human foresight goes, every precaution has been taken to avoid an "accidental" discharge. If the gun does not shoot uniformly, the load or ammunition should be varied until the proper charge is found. If the gun will not shoot within a maximum variation of thirty per cent, then there is that in the gun or the loaded shells which tends to an unusual, and possibly disastrous, discharge.

Mechanical uncertainty generally results in a premature discharge, a misfire, or the failure to eject a fired shell. A gun with which misfires are frequent is clearly defective, and can be remedied. The gun which rarely will not go off, but sometimes goes off too soon, is more common and much more difficult to put right. The usual cause of a premature discharge is the failure of the sear to enter the notch or bent of the tumbler. With an ordinary hammer-gun, when the cock is brought to full cock, it will be noticed that it may be drawn still further back; this "overdraft" is to allow of sufficient time and space for the sear to be worked right home before the thumb releases the hammer. If the lock is clean and the parts quite free of the wood, the sear very rarely fails to catch and to hold the tumbler. In a hammerless gun there is less room, the parts are cramped, and the "overdraft" is reduced to a minimum. A slight strain of the cocking-dogs, a maladjustment of the limbs, even the wear of them by the friction of proper use, will reduce this "overdraft," and the sear will catch on the very edge of the bent; then a tap upon the stock, the jar of firing the other barrel, or the least pressure upon the trigger, will suffice to liberate the tumbler and fire the gun.

The common remedy is to provide a "second" sear, or an intercepting safety-bolt, which will catch the tumbler like the half-bent in an old hammer lock. This is not altogether satisfactory. There is not any too much room in the gun-lock for the parts which are absolutely indispensable; the second sears and bolts encroach upon this. Then there is the common fallacy of relying upon the second sear to guard the tumbler, and the proper sear and bent are not made deep enough or strong enough for the work required. The right remedy is so to arrange sear and tumbler that it is impossible for the tumbler to escape unless either the trigger is pulled or some part of the mechanism breaks. Some gunmakers seem unwilling to do this; consequently certain makes of hammerless guns have an unenviable reputation in this matter of premature discharge; and, as the second sear sometimes does the work of the primary one, the blow of the striker is shortened, and misfires occur.

Occasional failures to eject the fired shells are not of much importance, and cannot be prevented, any more than the occasional jamming of shells in the chamber. This last is to be expected on the battlefield with ammunition transported to the firing point amidst exceptional conditions. It also occurs on the stage during the exhibitions of professional shots when every risk has been guarded against, and is clearly irremediable at present. But when failure is frequent, either the mechanism is at fault and can be altered, or, as is more probable, the shooter has not learnt how to manipulate his gun to the best advantage. The better the gun, the more perfect its mechanism, the greater the need of the shooter to drill himself in the proper handling of it. Uncertainty is not necessarily an imperfection, but the result of the greatest perfection. If a faultless chronometer were served as some people treat a common "Waterbury" watch, it would not be the most expensive article that kept the best time.

Santa Cruz County Game Warden.

A lively row is on in San Jose over the position of county Game Warden. The local fish and game protective association is evidently after Mr. Foster's scalp. This protective association was one of the first of the many county associations formed. From the start the position of Game Warden has been a bone of contention. At one time there were, at least, eighty-five deputy fish and game commissioners in the county. Their commissions were revoked by the present State Board of Fish Commissioners. How many of them have been re-issued is problematical; many of the San Jose sportsmen have always had a strong predilection for a "badge." This absolves one from jury duty, etc.

If the statements given by Warden Foster are true, it does not leave the county association in a position compatible with the avowed purposes of its organization. The matter was given quite a little prominence in the Mercury, a portion of the Game Warden's story being featured in bold face type. It is as follows:

Game Warden Foster is on his mettle and claims that President Barker is malicious and spiteful in his efforts to oust him. He says he is not going to sit quietly by while Barker and other members of the Game Association seek to encompass his removal. It was expected that at a meeting of the Supervisors a special committee, to be named by Barker, would present a petition for the Game Warden's removal. This committee will, it is promised, file charges of neglect against him.

This is the second time Foster has been on the grill. Last September President Barker made an effort to oust him, but the Supervisors refused to take any action. Foster has held the position since March 1st, a year ago. The job carries with it a regular salary, and in addition there is an allowance for expenses. Foster says his allowance for expenses has never compensated him for his outlay, considering that he must provide himself with a horse and buggy for getting over the country.

This, however, is preliminary to the things he has to say of the movement to have him removed. He attributes it to a deep-seated jealousy on the part of Dr. Barker, because he (Barker) could not get "his own man" appointed to the position originally.

"As Game Warden of the county I am not legally or otherwise under the supervision of the local game association, or its president or officers, nevertheless I endeavored after my appointment to work in conjunction and harmony with the association, and for some months I took my instructions from and made reports to its officers. I found it impossible, however, to work with them and at the same time preserve my independence and self respect.

"Shortly after my appointment I had a clash with Barker. It was the sequel to a banquet given by the association. Barker had sold many of the tickets over the telephone, and to oblige him I made an endeavor to collect the price of a number of the tickets. He was not satisfied with the results. He jumped me on the street, talking like a 'crazy man.'

"Of course, I had nothing to do with the matter beyond endeavoring to help him out in the collection of the tickets. After this row he immediately 'called' in to get my scalp. He took a petition around and by means of false representations got the signatures of many who never attended the meetings of the Game Association and of the small coterie whom he controls. In turn he presented this petition to the Supervisors. On September 23rd the whole matter was investigated by the Supervisors and I was completely and unanimously exonerated. Since that time Barker has kept up his enmity and attacks upon me.

"Right here I may say that Barker professes that there are 500 members of the association. As a matter of fact less than a year ago there were 280 members on the roll, of which number, although the dues are but $1 a year, more than one-half were in arrears and of the entire membership the average attendance is not more than a quorum and frequently less. A quorum is at present I believe, five.

"A few months after my appointment Barker asked me to collect dues for the association. I collected several dollars, which I turned in to Secretary Denny Prindville. Now I may say that I have nothing whatever to do with the Game Association and have no business collecting their dues, although I have sincerely endeavored to work in connection and harmony with the organization.

"I understand at the meeting the other evening that there were not over eight or nine present, which is fully an average attendance. As to my attending the meetings of the association I could not do so when I was in the field; when here I went once or twice when there was no quorum. Barker was away and when he is away there is no meeting.

"When he commenced his misrepresentation, I naturally could not be expected to further attend the meetings. For that reason I have not attended, as the members of the association and Dr. Barker himself well know.

"As to the rot that Raley (a local commission dealer) has any pull with me it is ridiculous. The firm is a member of the association. The first time the firm got into trouble with the association a compromise was made and immediately afterwards the firm joined the organization. The firm subsequently again violated the law and again was let down easy, presumably by the desire of the association. As to the assertion that I informed the Supervisors that Barker or some other members of the association had been guilty of shooting ducks on the marshes after sundown, I say now that this is the first time I ever heard of it and I will guarantee that no member of the Board of Supervisors ever heard of it. These are such petty lies that I can not comprehend such a course of conduct.

"In conclusion I may say that this is simply another little ebullition from the same source that instigated false charges against me last September out of pure malice and without any foundation in fact. It is well known throughout the country, where the game is, and is conceded by all fair-minded persons, that the laws have never been better enforced or less trout or game killed out of season than during my term of office.

"I have carried on a campaign of education rather than follow the methods of a sneak, and the result is that hundreds of people throughout the county, who formerly caught trout and killed game out of season, now see the necessity of their protection and faithfully observe the laws. The small salary I receive is no incentive, but so long as I have the spiteful and malicious opposition of such small-minded men as Barker I shall continue to perform the functions of the office, doing my duty conscientiously, until I see fit to resign or the Board of Supervisors see fit to give the office to another. The salary does not compensate for the petty persecutions to which I have been subjected by Barker and his small clique of game exterminators, but, although a fairly good-natured individual, I resent wilful and persistent injustice, either to myself or others, as Barker should have learned by this time, and my conduct will not be influenced by any hot air he may blow or by any action he may take."

AT THE TRAPS.

Twelve shooters entered in the monthly twelve bird shoot of the Golden Gate Gun Club last Sunday. Clarence A. Haight led the quartette of four straight scores, the others were Dr. A. T. Derby, "Ned" Fay, who dropped his birds "dead as a smelt," and H. C. Blemer. A twelve bird pool, $5 entrance, followed, in this race Nauman and Derby both killed straight. Six bird pools followed. The birds liberated from the traps were good flying ones, strong and swift, the weather conditions were ideal for trap shooting. The scores made were as follows:

The Capital City Blue Rock Club held their usual blue rock shoot on the Kimball & Upson grounds, Sacramento, last Saturday.

Quite a number of the members were fishing for bass, which accounts for the slim attendance. Newbert finally succeeded in getting into the champion class by breaking 24 in the club event. A week from next Sunday will be the wind-up of the medal shoots, when the attention of the members will be given to the love passes. The scores made were as follows:

Pacific Coast Field Trial Derby Entries.

The Derby entry for the twentieth annual Pacific Coast Field Trials is a record one, twenty-four Setters and fifteen Pointers comprises a list of high class candidates that are the progeny of some of the best producers of both breeds. The trials this year will take place on selected ground in the vicinity of Bakersfield. Messrs. J. E. Terry, W. W. Van Arsdale and H. M. Keller will look over the grounds about a month or so before the trials and make a selection of the most eligible and favorable locality for the meeting.

The Pacific Coast Club is, next to the Eastern Field Trial Club, the oldest organization of its kind in the United States. Among the many sportsmen who took an early and enthusiastic interest in the club were Hon. Chas. N. Post, Joseph Terry and the late Colonel J. C. Edwards. W. S. Tevis, Henry M. Keller, W. W. Van Arsdale, John Schumacher, Wm. Schreiber and numerous other gentlemen have also evinced a strong interest in the success of the club. Among the new members may be mentioned Mr. T. J. A. Tiedemann, whose energy and executive abilities have been appreciated to the extent of an appointment as one of the Executive Committee. Mr. Tiedemann was instrumental in the formation of the Northwest Field Trials Club and has devoted time and money to the furtherance of the sport and for the benefit of both Coast clubs.

The complete list of dogs of both breeds entered in the Derby follows:

Little True Blue
Go blow your horn—
For the dogs in the Cuckoo Kennels
And the Master all forlorn.

Sorry indeed, we were unaware, when the "express people" telephoned to our office asking information in regard to certain dogs about to be shipped East. If the express people had not doubted the story the shipper or shippers told them, they would not have called us up for corroboration or for further information. We knew the dogs asked about were not "trick dogs" and that they had been shown here and were to be taken back East again. We did not know when we answered the express people, truthfully as we believed, that we were putting Mr. Thomas to the extra trouble of paying the transportation company their legitimate fees for services rendered. We would not for a moment believe that Mr. Thomas would indulge in such a pettifogging scheme as to try to "do" the express company, particularly as, so we believe, he had been supplied with ample funds (for use in the care and transportation of some of his charges) by one or more Eastern fanciers whose show dogs he had in his string. Mr. Thomas' kick comes with a petulant note in it that possibly was prompted by a break in the usual routine of immunity and does not sound sportsmanlike at all. We believe, however, that the Yorkshireman was misled and bamboozled by either one or both of a pair of the biggest fakers and suave liars that the Coast fancy has ever had the misfortune to be brought into contact with.

Racing at Vallejo.

The Golden Gate Park Driving Association, of San Francisco, gave a race meeting at Vallejo on July 4th. It being a holiday and an attractive program being offered, a large crowd of spectators was in attendance. The grand stand was packed and the infield crowded with carriages, buggies and people on horseback. The first race on the program was for the 2:40 class trotters. Originally there were five entries, but Bondy C. and Pedro were drawn, leaving Princess Irene, Walter Wilkes and Kitty D. to contest for the race. In the first heat Princess Irene led to the half by five lengths; after reaching the half Kitty D., who was second, showed a fine burst of speed, rapidly closed the distance, resulting in a fine race between the two through the stretch and Princess Irene winning by a head. Walter Wilkes third.

Kitty D. was made a warm favorite for the next two heats and justified the confidence displayed by winning both of them.

The second event was for free-for-all pacers; five horses were entered, but Lady Falrose was drawn, leaving Gaff Topsail, Mack, Al Sandy and Sable Le Grande to start.

Gaff Topsail, driven by Joe Cuicello, carried the hopes of the Vallejoites, but both Al Sandy and Sable Le Grande were whispered as "warm goods."

In the first heat Al Sandy led at the half, Gaff Topsail a good second, Mack third. Sandy broke twice before reaching the three-quarters, and Topsail led for a short time, but coming into the stretch Mack assumed the lead, and although Sandy made up ground rapidly, Mack won the heat, Al Sandy second, Gaff Topsail third, Sable Le Grande fourth.

In the second heat Sable Le Grande, who apparently did not distinguish herself in the first heat, was made favorite at odds of 2 to 3. Al Sandy, who looked on form to have the best chance, was second choice at 3 to 2, Topsail being 3 to 1, Mack 2 to 1.

Topsail led at the half, Sandy second, Sable Le Grande third and Mack fourth. Topsail again faltered in the final quarter and Sandy led in the stretch, with Sable Le Grande second, Sandy winning a good race, Sable Le Grande second and Mack third.

In the third heat Sandy was made favorite at three to five, Sable even money, Topsail and Mack being neglected by the sports.

Topsail led at the start, but Sandy at the half was in the lead, Sable second and Topsail third. Sandy, well driven by O'Kane, and going in great form, won the heat. Sable second, Mack third.

The third race, for Vallejo horses, was the most interesting of the day, as Vic Harrier's Bay Rum was entered against some good ones. It was the 2:17 trot, and the entries were Velma, Verona, Elchora Wilkes, Bay Rum and Clara L. For the first heat three to two was laid against Bay Rum, Elchora Wilkes being favorite. At the half Bay Rum going at great speed, was in the lead, Verona second, Elchora Wilkes third. Verona then dropped out of it, and in the stretch Bay Rum led, Elchora Wilkes second, Velma third. Elchora Wilkes, whose driver seemed to have a little "up his sleeve," did not manage to catch the flying Bay Rum, who won the heat, Elchora Wilkes second, Velma third.

For the second heat, the layer of odds seemed to think that Elchora Wilkes could improve on her first heat, as he made her favorite at one to two, with Bay Rum at even money. Verona was withdrawn from the second heat, Velma and Verona, the other starter, not being considered possibilities by the sports.

Bay Rum again led at the start, but Elchora Wilkes caught him at the quarter, and at the half Elchora Wilkes was first, Bay Rum second and Velma third. Elchora Wilkes showed great improvement in this heat, eventually winning the heat, Bay Rum second and Velma third.

For the third heat Elchora Wilkes was again favorite at 1 to 2, even money on Bay Rum; others any price.

Elchora Wilkes led at the half, Bay Rum second and Velma third, and although Joe Cuicello used every effort in guiding Bay Rum, Elchora was too good, beating him a length, Velma third.

The final race for Vallejo and Benicia roadsters was won by May Girl of this city, driven by Thomas Smith, Jr.

There were six entries. Teddy, driven by Joe Cuicello, was thought to have the best chance, but May Girl was too good for him. She won two heats and first money. May Girl won the first and second heats. Teddy was favorite, driven by Joe Cuicello, and was heavily played.

The races were well managed in every department, and the arrangements, judging, starting and timing gave every satisfaction.

The judges were Thomas Smith and Joe Edge, of Vallejo. John Green, late of San Francisco, was a most capable starter, and Dr. J. A. Welsh, E. Stewart and W. E. Bowen, of San Francisco, were timers.

Entries to Additional Races at Vallejo.

Agricultural District, No. 36, Vallejo, offered four additional races to close on July 1st. The original program for Vallejo filled very well and there is every prospect that Vallejo will have one of the best race meetings on the circuit this year. The track is in first class condition and the management have announced their intention of giving the horsemen a track during the meeting that no one can find fault with. Of the additional races the 2:15 class pace, the 2:40 class trot and the green class pace failed to receive a sufficient number of entries to fill. The 2:15 class trot received six entries and the Board declared it filled with the following nominations: A. G. Gurnett, B. O. Van Bokkelen, S. A. Hooper, J. G. Cuicello, C. F. Bunch and C. A. Durfee.

Secretary W. T. Kelley reports that he has received ten entries for a roadster race for horses owned in Vallejo and Benicia and that the association also expects to fill another roadster race with horses owned in Suisun, Vacaville, Dixon and Elmira. These events stimulate local interest and are always, when they are properly conducted, drawing attractions and add to the interest of the meeting.

In addition to the harness program, arrangements are being made for one or more running races each day.

Feeding Spring Calves.

Spring calves are incapable of receiving much benefit from grass during the first season, because for some time after birth the ruminating stomach is undeveloped and between summer heat and pestering flies the thin-skinned creature has a sorry time of it. Winter comes on with its dry food just when progress has commenced and this is apt to check growth, so that the animal is a full year old before it really starts on its career untrammelled. For this reason thousands of farmers are strong advocates of having calves dropped in the fall. There is then more time to give them the little attentions needed and since they live largely on milk they are easily managed in barn or shed and occupy but little room. When spring comes the youngsters are large enough to make good use of pasture and the result is progress from the start. When fall comes they return to the corral large enough to make good use of the feed there provided. Cows fresh in the fall yield a good flow of milk during winter if well fed and just when the milk flow begins to decrease materially comes the favorable change to grass, under the stimulus of which the yield is increased and held for some time. The annual yield of milk is from ten to fifteen per cent greater from cows fresh in fall than those which calve with the springing of the grass.

SUBSCRIPTION
THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

McKINNEY 2:11 1-4, Sold for $25,000.

A New Photograph of the Great Sire taken at San Jose last week expressly for his new owner, H. B. Gentry of Gentry Stock Farm, Bloomington, Ind.

JOTTINGS.

TAKE OFF YOUR HATS, BOYS, to Millard Sanders, who is just now engaged in holding up California's reputation as a producer of trotters and pacers of the winning class, with a string of horses owned by the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, the only stock farm in this State that has sent a stable of horses to the Grand Circuit this year. Mr. Sanders has started twice at Detroit's Blue Ribbon meeting, up to this writing (Friday morning), and has one first and one second to his credit and has put Anzella into the 2:10 list. We hope he may be as successful at every meeting clear down the line, and close his tour by getting first money at Lexington in the Kentucky Futurity with Judge Green's handsome little son of Directum, Bavard. Mr. Sanders is a hard worker and never neglects his horses and is always out to win. Here's to you, Millard; may the records of your horses get lower, the amount of their winnings larger, and may you return with them in as fine shape as when you left California to meet the best in all classes.

Since the announcement was made that Chas. A. Durfee had sold McKinney 2:11½ and the great stallion would go East in August, Mr. Durfee has been kept busy opening letters and telegrams and answering the telephone in regard to breeding mares before McKinney is shipped East. To all these he has been compelled to answer that McKinney's California book for 1902 is full and that no more mares can be taken at any price. He has sold the son of Alcyone to Mr. H. B. Gentry for $25,000 and the latter's trainer and representative, Mr. Charles L. Sheppard, is here to receive the horse and take him to his new home on the first of next month. Since arriving at San Jose and looking the stallion over Mr. Sheppard says that McKinney more than comes up to the standard he had set for the horse and that Mr. Gentry will doubtless put his service fee at $300 for the season of 1903, with a certainty of filling his book. That Mr. Gentry has secured a bargain in McKinney, everyone who keeps posted in horse affairs knows, and the stallion will earn his price and more in service fees next season. While Mr. Durfee is confident he could have had more money for his horse had he held on a while longer, he is not one of the squealing kind and hopes that Mr. Gentry will be able to make a handsome profit from his investment. The showing made by The Roman in trotting to a record of 2:10½ at his first start this year and the further fact that at least eight McKinneys are almost certain to enter the 2:15 list before fall with a possibility of the number reaching twelve, has made McKinney more talked about than ever in California and the East as well. The well known photographic artist, Andrew P. Hill of San Jose, secured a picture of McKinney last week which is an almost exact counterpart of the great horse. A half-tone engraving from this photograph appears on our front page this week, and is probably the last picture of the champion sire that will be taken while he is in California.

In this connection the following from the last issue of the Western Horseman, published at Indianapolis, will be of interest: "Some enthusiastic admirers of McKinney 2:11½ in Marion, Kan., are making an effort to have his new owner make a stop-off at Marion with the horse on his journey from California to Indiana long enough to serve a few mares that will be held in readiness for his coming. The mares will be the property of different owners, gathered in from several neighboring points, and will be as choice as the country affords, among them some tested speed producers of high quality. As a number of very great performers have come out of the section of Kansas seeking the use of McKinney, such as Joe Patchen 2:01½, John R. Gentry 2:00½, Bert Oliver 2:07½, Sally Toler 2:06½, Ashbrook 2:13½, Silversign 2:14½, Young Joe 2:11, etc., it will be no bad stroke of policy for the management of McKinney to get some representatives of the famous young sire in those regions."

The other day I heard a group of horsemen discussing the dun colored mare Brilliantine 2:17, who demonstrated her ability on more than one occasion of pacing a half-mile in a minute, and wondering what had become of her. Not one of the crowd could locate her, although it was known that she had been sold East by James G. Chesley, of this city. Mr. Chesley handed me a letter last Thursday from Brilliantine's present owner, Mr. Joseph Kempe, of Newburg, New York, which stated that on July 2d of this year, Brilliantine was bred to that champion pacer, Joe Patchen 2:01½. Mr. Chesley says he is willing to bet that the resultant foal will be able to pace a mile better than three minutes the first time it has a harness on. Brilliantine was a wonderfully fast mare, and after Mr. Kempe became her owner he drove her to a road buggy. In all his driving on the roads he never found anything that could head her, and he tackled some with records several seconds below 2:10. Had it been possible to control this mare, she would have paced into the 2:10 list easily, but she would rush away to the half at a two-minute gait in spite of all the rigging that could be put on her. She is a mare of elegant conformation and the cross to that wonderfully level headed race horse Joe Patchen should bring a foal that is worth taking to the free-for-all races.

The Napa track is in fine condition at the present time, and work out days are Wednesdays and Saturdays. S. Hooper, H. Ward, Joe Goss, Hans Frellson, Al McDonald, Bert Webster and others have their strings there, and this week W. H. Lumsden of Santa Rosa will send his horses to Napa. Bonnie Direct 2:05½ is being worked at this track and an effort will be made to lower his record this year. Monroe Salisbury says he considers Bonnie Direct the greatest prospect in America as a sire of champions. Last Wednesday there was quite a crowd at the Napa track to witness a match race between Geo. Berry's runner Tioleta and Lola, a mare belonging to W. H. McDonald. It was a quarter mile dash for $100 a side. Tioleta won handily in 22½ seconds.

A story comes from Pago Pago in the Samoan Islands about the trip of the trotting stallion Owyhee 2:11 to Australia, which tells a tale of short rations that was the result of a peculiar circumstance. When the steamer on which Owyhee was shipped reached Honolulu, through some misunderstanding the hay and grain which was to furnish sustenance for the son of Chas. Derby on the trip was discharged on the wharf and when the steamer put out for Pago Pago, it was discovered that Owyhee's rations were non est. There was a great rustling for something to satisfy the great trotter's appetite and he was fed such condensed food as cabbage, turnip tops, rolled oats, etc., and for roughage the Captain ripped open a few new straw mattresses. Owyhee took to this bill of fare with avidity and when Mr. Dugald Taylor wrote from Pago Pago, was doing well and gave every promise of reaching Australia in show ring condition. A little thing like loss of his regular rations never bothers an American trotter, provided there is something eatable furnished in its stead.

Now that the racing season is about to open in California it may not be out of place to state for the benefit of those unacquainted with the rules governing trotting and pacing events, that a break made by a horse as he reaches the wire does not count against him any more than a break made in any other part of the mile. Sec. 5 of rule 30 is as follows: "A horse breaking at or near the score shall be subject to no greater penalty than if he broke on any other part of the track." At nearly every meeting the remark is heard: "That horse should not have been awarded the heat as he broke under the wire," and for some reason or other it is hard to make a portion of the public understand that such a break does not necessarily disqualify a horse from winning, provided his driver obeyed the section of the rule which requires him to pull the horse to his gait at once when a break is made, or provided the judges, in case the break is a gaining one, set the horse back twice the distance gained, as required by section 2 of the same rule.

Rhythmic, the blind horse that won the $10,000 Merchants & Manufacturers stake at Detroit last Tuesday, is a brown stallion by Oakland Baron, and therefore carries in his veins some of the old California blood as the dam of Oakland Baron was Lady Mackay, a mare bred by the late L. J. Rose. She was by Silverthreads 18653 (son of The Moor and Grey Dale (the dam of Longworth 2:19) by American Boy Jr. Lady Mackay's dam was Fleetwing (the dam of Stamboul 2:07½ and Ruby 2:19½) by Hambletonian 10. The dam of Rhythmic is by Strathmore. Of all the Eastern turf writers who made prognostications of the M. & M., that entertaining writer, Hawley of the Kentucky Stock Farm, came nearest calling the turn. He did not see how any of the horses entered could beat Zephyr by Zombro if she started, but said if she was beaten he expected her defeat to come from either Rhythmic or Lord Marsh. Zephyr was lame and could not start, and Rhythmic won and Lord Marsh was third.

Secretary Thomas, of the 40th District Agricultural Association, writes "that work on the Woodland race track will start at once and that many of the harness horses now at Sacramento will be over there in a few days and others are welcome." The Woodland track is one of the best in the State when kept in condition and the Directors will spare no labor or expense to make it better this year than ever. The big list of entries received insures a great meeting for the Woodland association this year.

The State Fair of 1902.

The "Live Stock Premium List" for the State Fair of 1902 is a valuable work for intending exhibitors in either the live stock or poultry departments, containing as it does full instructions as to the method of competition to secure any part of the $20,000 appropriated for premiums.

Secretary George W. Jackson, of the Agricultural Society, is daily receiving assurances that the live stock exhibition of the fair of 1902 will be by far the largest ever known, and it will be well for expectant exhibitors to make early application for stall room at the Park, or at least to notify him immediately as to the number or class of the animal which are intended for exhibition.

The live stock will be judged by Professor W. L. Carlyle, of the University of Wisconsin, who is an expert in the animal industry, and has charge of the Agricultural Experiment Stations. The stock parades will be held on the mornings of Thursday, September 11th; Saturday, September 13th; Thursday, September 18th, and Saturday, September 20th.

On Wednesday, September 10th, the Shorthorns, Herefords and Devons will be judged and premiums awarded. On Thursday, September 11th, the Jerseys, Angus, Holsteins, Ayrshires, Guernseys and other dairy cattle classes will be judged. September 12th, the beef and dairy sweepstakes and herds, the sheep and goats will be judged, and Saturday, September 13th, will be devoted to the swine.

On the same date the thoroughbreds and standard trotting horses will be judged. On Monday, September 15th, the roadsters, draft horses of all classes, mules, jacks and jennies will be considered. On Tuesday, September 16th, the coach horses, carriage teams, roadster teams and saddle animals will be passed on, and Wednesday, September 17th, will be devoted to families.

All of the poultry classes will be judged by Henry Berran of San Jose, who will pass on their classification and merits on Tuesday, September 16th. The premium list includes liberal prizes for almost every known class of live stock and poultry, and liberal provision has been made for special prizes for any class that may have been overlooked in the listing.

Racing at Petaluma.

An impromptu program of racing drew a big crowd to the Petaluma track on the 4th of July, and the interest shown proves that the people of Petaluma are keenly interested in racing and there is little doubt but a very successful and well attended meeting could be pulled off there by some enterprising management.

The opening number was the exhibition miles paced by Annie Rooney and Margarite. Annie Rooney, with a mark of 2:17, could not reach her best time, but Margarite clipped 9 seconds from her former mark of 2:29, making one mile in 2:20 and a second mile in 2:21. Annie Rooney 2:17 negotiated the distance in 2:20½ and in 2:24. Wannie Moore was the Pilot.

Jack Grimes' mare Orphan Maid won a two in three race in 2:47 and 2:37, defeating Wilkes Boy and Dom Patricio.

Let Him Be, with Charley Northup up, Bessie Mac, with Dr. McLaughlin behind her, and Dan Fraser, with Dan McGovern piloting, trotted two heats. Let Him Be took the first heat in 2:44 and Dan Fraser took second heat in 2:45. Bessie Mac went wrong the second heat and was drawn out of the race. The deciding heat was not trotted.

The double team race between L. G. Ratto's team and John Lawler's sidewheelers was a blending of comic and grand opera. Ratto's team dashed from under the wire on the trot, then broke into a run and ran clear round the track to the homestretch. Then they trotted awhile and then came home on the run. Mr. Lawler's pair stuck to the pacing gait all the way and finished the mile in 3:14. With any training at all they could be driven together in 2:40 as both have a nice way of going and show speed.

Two or three running races, dashes of a half mile, were on the program and were neck and neck contests.

Andy Welch, proprietor of Charter Oak Park, Hartford, announces that he has made up quite an attractive program for August 2d, the day on which the $40,000 race between Boralma and Lord Derby will be decided. There will be a 2:09 pace and 2:12 and 2:20 trots for purses of $1500 each. These races will be on the plan of those introduced by Mr. Welch when he gave the meeting at Empire City track. There will be but three heats in each race, and every heat will practically be a dash, the money being divided into three equal parts, the first horse in each heat getting $325, the second $125 and the third $50.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Notes and News.

Zephyr 2:13½.

Anzella 2:09½.

The Roman 2:10½.

All made in winning races.

The Detroit Blue Ribbon meeting is a great success.

Grand Circuit racing will be held at Cleveland this week and Columbus next.

Clipper 2:06 worked a handy mile in 2:09 for Ed Benyon at Cleveland track last week.

A well-bred mare, good roadster, is offered for sale by Elias Williams. See advertisement.

Pleasanton is making great preparations for the Golden Gate Fair to be held there August 26th to 30th.

The Roman 2:10½ is another one for the advocates of the developed mare theory. His dam is Wanda 2:14½.

One hundred and four entries for the races at the Woodland meeting. It will be a great week of harness racing.

The Vallejo association offers two purses of $400 each for horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Driving Club.

Strathmore has his first 2:10 performer in Terrell S., that reduced his former record of 2:10½ to 2:08½ week before last.

One hundred and fifty dollar purses, with free entrance, will be given the runners at the Golden Gate Fair at Pleasanton.

A chestnut mare called Aunt Laura by Nutwood Wilkes won a half mile race at Beloit, Wisconsin, July 4th, in three straight heats, the time being 1:14, 1:11 and 1:13.

Dolly Bidwell went a remarkable race at Readville, the time of the year considered. She won the 2:10 class trotting in 2:08½, 2:09½. Her former record was 2:09½.

The 16th District Agricultural Society will hold its fair this year at Paso Robles, October 1st to 4th inclusive. Dr. J. H. Glass is President and S. D. Merk Secretary.

Terrill S., the famous New England half-mile track pacer, won his race at Readville and reduced his record to 2:08½. He is ten years old and was sired by Strathmore.

Midnight by Nutford is not in the Hawaiian Islands, but is here in California in training and doing well. He is being entered in his classes throughout the California circuit.

A car load of horses will leave San Jose for the East on August 1st. There is room in the car for a few more. Any one wishing to ship should address C. A. Durfee, San Jose.

Chas. L. Sheppard, trainer and manager of the Gentry Stock Farm horses, has arrived in San Jose from Indiana, to take charge of McKinney August 1st and ship him to his new home.

Bids for betting privileges of the Vallejo meeting will be received up to August 2d, and for the bar, restaurant and other privileges up to July 26th. See advertisement in this issue.

For pumping water or furnishing power for any sort of machinery there is nothing better than the Fairbanks Morse Company's Gaso-Distillate engines advertised in our business columns.

A car of horses will leave San Jose for the East, August 1st. Anyone wishing to ship can find room for several head in this car. Apply to C. A. Durfee, 8 Magnolia avenue, San Jose.

In the report of the entries received by the Vallejo association the bay stallion Osmont was included in the list of entries in the 2:20 pace, whereas he should have appeared in the 2:25 pace.

Frank Loomis may bring the Colorado mare Lottie Smart 2:08½ to California to race in the free for all pacing classes. If she meets Miss Logan and Bonnie Direct there will be some hot contests.

It is reported that Eleata 2:08½ is showing remarkable speed for Hiram Tozier at Dover, N. H., and predictions are freely made by the horsemen who have been watching her that she will trot in 2:05 this summer.

Fourth payment has been made on sixteen three year olds in the Stanford Stake this year as against eleven last year. It should be a closely contested race and a feature for the opening of the second week of the State Fair.

Secretary Hudson, of the Fresno Agricultural Association, is in San Francisco for a few days. Mr. Hudson is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the district fair and the Breeders meeting which will be held there during the week beginning September 29th.

Wm. G. Layng will sell at the Occidental Horse Exchange some day during the next two weeks a number of condemned fire department horses. These horses are all large, weighing from 1300 to 1800 pounds and suitable for farm work and good for many years of usefulness.

Ella Madison 2:12½, the fast daughter of James Madison bred by Mr. M. A. Murphy, of this State, has been sold by Captain B. H. Tuthill, of New York, to Charles H. Schurek, of Vienna, who has purchased quite a number of horses in New York recently for shipment to Austria.

The business men of Sonora have organized the Tuolumne County Trotting Association and will give three days' racing, October 2d, 3d and 4th. $3000 in purses will be offered and every effort made to hold a successful meeting. Further announcement will be made next week.

Vedette, owned by Geo. W. Kleiser of Seattle, has a very handsome foal by McKinney. It arrived the day after the 4th of July, is a filly, is darker in color than its dam, and hasn't a white hair on it. It shows a tendency to pace and Mr. Kleiser is very proud of it, as he has a right to be.

Sam Dunlap, of Fresno, has sold his mare Lucy G. by Junio to a fellow member of the Fresno Driving Club. Lucy G. was raced last year on the California circuit, but failed to get a record, although she showed speed enough to trot in 2:20, but was not just right and was in against faster horses.

A picture of Secretary W. H. Gocher's famous old trotter, Guy 2:09½, occupies the front page of the American Sportsman of July 1st. The horse was held by our popular Californian, Millard Sanders, when the picture was taken and an excellent likeness of that gentleman was made by the camera.

The date of the sale of Lafayette Funck's horses at Farmington has been set for Tuesday, July 29th, by Wm. G. Layng, live stock auctioneer. A number of men are now at work on these horses and will have them all fairly well broken by the date of the sale. There are some choicely bred ones among them.

The Roman's record is now 2:10½, made in the second heat of a winning race, his first start since he was sold to Mr. Christy of Kansas City by his breeder, Mr. Frank H. Burke of this city. The Roman has made good and will be in the 2:10 list before many weeks. It is a good start for the McKinney family this year.

Porto Rico 2:14, five year old son of Electrite, dam Anthem by Wilkes Boy, grandam Nelly by Young Jim, trotted a wonderful quarter at Denver July 4th. It is said that A. P. Stark, his owner, started the horse on a wager of $1000, to beat 30 seconds. Porto Rico turned the quarter in 28½ seconds, the fastest quarter ever trotted in public.

N. M. Brockaway, Carrier, Pa., recently had his eyesight almost totally destroyed by a horse switching his tail. As a result of his inability to use his eyes he has sold the most of his horses to R. L. Buzard, Brockwayville, Pa., a wealthy lumberman, who is going to move to Los Angeles, Cal., in the fall and establish a stock farm.

J. M. Nelson started the McKinney mare Lady Grannard 2:23 in the 2:21 class at Hamline July 9th. The heats were in 2:15½ and 2:17½ and were won by the bay gelding G. W. by Sarcenett. There were six starters and Lady Grannard was last. Dan W. 2:17½ was last the following day in the 2:15 trot and outside the money. The race was won by Klondike, best time 2:15½.

Tom Marsh worked Boralma a mile in 2:11 at Readville, last Saturday. The gelding looks to be in the finest possible condition, and everybody was pleased with him. Lord Derby will have to be right good if he defeats the Boreal gelding in their match race. It is said that Lord Derby is also in great shape. His owner recently expressed his willingness to back the son of Mambrino King for any amount of money.

At Readville, Mass., the management this season applied blue clay from an ocean tunnel to the track and experts pronounce it faster than since the day when Star Pointer beat two minutes there. The meeting at Readville last week shows the experts are right. In but one race did the horses fail to beat 2:15, and in three races 2:10 was beaten.

The Roman was the only California bred horse to get any money at Detroit, on Tuesday, and he took his race in straight heats as he did at Windsor, but did not have to go as fast by a half-second. The California horses that started and were behind the money that day were Dr. Hammond, Uncle John, Funston, You Bet, Pussy Willow and Charlie Mac.

Chinese Consul-General Ho Yow's mare China Maid, driven by J. M. Nelson, was "8-dis" in the summary of the 2:22 class pace at Hamlin, July 11th. There were nine starters. The race was won by Angus Oh So in 2:14 and 2:12½. Uncle John, Captains Bennett and Goodall's Chas. Derby horse, driven by Will Welch, divided second and third money in this race with Bessie Rose.

Marysville's program is out. There are five races for pacers, with purses of $400 and $500. Three purses of $500 each are offered for trotters, one of $300 for district trotters and one of $100 for farmers' horses, either trotters or pacers. There will be two or more running races each day to close overnight. Entries to the harness races close Saturday, August 2d. A. C. Irwin is Secretary.

On Stanley 2:17½, son of Direct 2:05½ and Lily Stanley 2:17½, has been sent from the Santa Rosa Stock Farm to Rancho Verde in San Bernardino county, where he will be bred to a large number of standard bred mares next year. On Stanley was not used extensively in the stud at Santa Rosa Stock Farm, but he left a few colts there that are as promising as any on this well known breeding farm.

Palmer Clark very pointedly says: "A printed entry list, if properly compiled, is the most valuable advertising matter an association can offer to the public, and should show the color and sex of each horse, his breeding, his owner's name and address, as well as the trainer, thus giving the information that everybody interested desires to know in connection with the horses that are to contest in each class."

Hallie Hardin, the mare that won second money in the M. & M. is a four year old chestnut mare by Russell Hardin 2:25½ out of Hallie Harris by Combination. She is the first of the get of Russell Hardin to get a standard mark, she having trotted to a record of 2:13½ at Denver where she won several races this year. Russell Hardin is by Ashland Wilkes, the sire of John R. Gentry 2:00½, and his dam is by Red Wilkes.

The Roman's early training and first year's racing were under Ed Lafferty's tutelage. Budd Doble, who had charge of the gelding several months prior to the time he was shipped East, told the writer that Lafferty turned the son of McKinney and Wanda over to him a well mannered and good gaited horse. It will be remembered that Lafferty drove The Roman an exhibition mile in 2:12½ as a three year old at San Jose.

At Lexington, Ky., last Wednesday, Clem Beachy drove a two year old bay filly by King Red 2:20½, dam Daisy Simmons by Simmons, the most sensational mile ever trotted by a two year old over the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association track, the time of the year considered. An evenly rated mile was trotted in 2:24½, last quarter in 35 seconds. This filly was purchased at the spring sales at Lexington for $160.

Stam B. 2:11½ has completed his season in the stud at Pleasanton and been shipped to the home of his owners, Tuttle Bros., at Rocklin, Placer county. He has been bred to a large proportion of high class mares this year and will soon occupy a very prominent place in the Great Table. There are several of his get that are showing remarkable speed and like the get of Stam B's sire, the great Stamboul, they are invariably trotters.

A. B. Rodman, of Woodland, recently came very near losing his fine yearling colt by McKinney 2:11½ out of a mare by Attorney, sire of the dam of Alix 2:03½. The colt contracted distemper and nearly choked to death, but Dr. Alexander inserted a tube in his throat and brought him around all right. Mr. Rodman considers he has one of the best bred sons of McKinney in the State and has him entered in the Breeders Futurity.

The noted trainer and driver of trotting horses, Samp Wilson, died at Lexington, Ky., July 9th, from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. He was ranked as one of the best of the old school of trotting horse drivers, and has developed and driven to their records a great many fast trotters and pacers. He came from a family of trotting horse breeders and trainers, his father being James Wilson of Rushville, Ind., owner of the celebrated horse Blue Bull 75.

The free-for-all pace at Woodland was closed with six entries—I Direct 2:12½, El Diablo 2:12½, Miss Logan 2:06½, Kelly Briggs 2:10½, Topsy 2:12½ and Fredericksburg 2:12. While Miss Logan rather outclasses her field in point of speed, yet she is such an uncertain quantity as regards scoring and getting away, either of the others have a good chance to beat her in a three in five race, and there should be good betting on this event. More than one heat in it should be below 2:10.

The match race between Dan Patch and Harold H. at Windsor was easy for the son of Joe Patchen. Harold H. took him up to the half the first heat in 1:01, but the only time the Canadian horse led was during the first quarter, and Dan Patch won easily in 2:06½. In the second heat Harold H. was kept behind until the homestretch was reached and although Proctor drove him the last quarter in 31 seconds, McHenry did not have to drive Dan Patch to keep the lead and win in 2:10.

The Ventura meeting opens August 6th. In the 2:20 trot are entered the Eastern horses Cozad, owned by Chas. E. Clark of Fresno, and Petigru, owned by W. G. Durfee of Los Angeles. Petigru was a straight winner at San Jose week before last, in his first start in California, all three heats being in 2:19 and a fraction, but Cozad has not yet started on this side the Rockies. At Ventura they will meet a good field of California horses and the result of the race will be awaited with interest.

There have been some very handsome sulkies made for racing purposes lately, but no handsomer vehicle was ever constructed than the white sulky with gold trimmings made by the McMurray Company on the 1902 special model now to be seen at the Kenney Manufacturing Company's place of business at 531 Valencia street in this city. The driver who rides in this sulky this year will have the very best that is going. There has been recently received at this shop five speed carts and five sulkies of the celebrated McMurray make that are gems in their way. The McMurray Company is now making a speed wagon for racing purposes which is an ideal rig for pole or shafts. Drop in at 531 Valencia and look at these new vehicles.

DAM OF TWO DERBY WINNERS.

"Hidalgo" Tackles the Thoroughbred Editor of The Horseman at Chicago.

LOS ANGELES, July 14, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Your issue of July 13, 1902, contains a very readable article on "King Edward and His Horses" taken from and accredited to the Chicago Horseman. But it would be more readable if correct, which it is not. For instance, the writer says, in speaking of the King's great broodmare, Perdita by Hidalgo.

Two years later Perdita threw Persimmons to the St. Leger. Hidalgo was the dam of the King's first Derby, and was also successful in the St. Leger. But the most illustrious scion of the family was his full brother, Diamond Jubilee, who, in addition to the Derby and St. Leger, won the Two Thousand Guineas. Thus Perdita broke all previous records by producing two Derby winners, though this feat has since been equalled by Morganette, the dam of Galtee More, the Derby winner of 1897, and Ard Patrick, the hero of the event decided three weeks ago.

The writer of the article above quoted may know the modern racing history of England a good deal better than I do, but he has evidently neglected to go back any distance or he would find a very different condition of things from what he has stated.

HORATIA, foaled 1778, by Eclipse, out of Countess by Blank, foaled two Derby winners, Archduke, who won in 1799 and was imported to America; and Paris, by the same sire, who won it in 1806.

ARETHUSA, foaled 1792, by Dungannon, out of a daughter of Prophet, foaled two Derby winners, Williamson's Ditto (brother to Walton), who won it in 1803; and Pan by St. George, who won in 1808.

FLYER by Sweetbriar out of Ceres' dam by Squirrel dropped two Derby winners, Rhadamanthus, who won it 1790, and Daedalus, by the same sire, Justice, who won it in 1794.

THE HIGHFLYER MARE, foaled 1785, dropped two also, Spread Eagle (imported to America), who won it in 1795, and Didelot by Trumpator, who won it in 1796.

PENELOPE, foaled 1798, produced two Derby winners, Whalebone, who won it in 1810, and Whisker, who won it in 1815. She was by Trumpator out of Prunella by Highflyer, the latter being the dam also of Waxy Pope, who won it in 1809.

ASCOT LASS, 1821, by Ardrossan out of a daughter of Cramlington produced two Derby winners, St. Giles (imported to America), who won it in 1832 and Bloomsbury by Mulatto, who won it in 1839.

EMMA by Whisker out of Gipsie Fairy by Hermes, foaled two Derby winners, Mundig by Catton, who won it in 1835, and Cotherstone, who won it in 1843. Mundig was full brother to Trustee, imported into America; and Cotherstone was own brother to Mowerina, dam of West Australian, the first horse to win "the triple crown."

The only other two mares to drop two Derby winners are Perdita and Morganette, as stated in the above extract.

TWO ST. LEGER WINNERS.

FLORA, foaled 1768, by Squirrel out of Argelica by Snap, was the first mare to drop two St. Leger winners—Spadille by Highflyer who won it in 1787, and Young Flora by the same sire, who won it in 1788.

BANTER, foaled 1826, by Master Henry out of Boadicea by Alexander dropped Touchstone, who won it in 1834, and Lancelot who won in 1840, both being sons of Camel. The latter was as great a failure at the stud as the former was a success, although he was much the better runner.

BARBELLE, foaled 1836, by Sandbeck out of Darioletta by Amadis, produced Van Tromp who also won the St. Leger of 1847, and Flying Dutchman who won both the Derby and St. Leger of 1849.

PARADIGM, foaled 1852, by Paragon (son of Touchstone) out of Ellen Horne by Redsbante, dropped Lord Lynn and Achievement, both of whom won the St. Leger in consecutive years. I consider Ellen Horne the next best mare to Pocahontas since 1820, for she is less than forty years dead and is already the ancestress (in female tail line) of three winners each of the Derby and St. Leger, two of the Two Thousand and one of the One Thousand Guineas.

QUIVER, foaled 1872 by Toxophilite, produced the only two full sisters to win the St. Leger or the Oaks. They were both by St. Simon. Memoir won both in 1890 and La Flache repeated the caper in 1902.

THISTLE, foaled 1875 by Scottish Chief out of The Flower Safety by Wild Dayrell, produced Common, winner of the Derby and St. Leger in 1891; and Throstle by Petrarch, who carried off the St. Leger in 1894, beating Ladas, the winner of the Derby.

So you see that, while Perdita and Morganette are really great mares, yet it is plain that they are far from being the only diamonds in the jewelry store.

HIDALGO.

Big List for Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles association received a splendid list of entries for all but two of the purses advertised, the free-for-all trot and the three-year-old trot being the only ones that failed to fill.

In the 2:20 pace there are no less than twenty-five entries, while the 2:23 trot has twenty-three. Two Great Mothers.

The last visit the writer made to Abdallah Park, the historic trotting horse establishment of the late W. H. Wilson, Cynthia, Ky., is vividly brought to mind by the recent purchase of McKinney. That was just eleven years ago, and though McKinney was then but a youngster, Mr. Wilson never tired of talking of his wonderful merit and future great promise. W. B. Fasig and Pat Shank were also visitors at Abdallah Park at that time, and well do we remember the animation with which the former and Mr. Wilson discussed the future promise of McKinney as a sire. Of all the great broodmares then at Abdallah Park not one, in the opinion of W. H. Wilson, was in the same class with Rosa Sprague, while Mr. Fasig, who knew Gov. Sprague 2:20 1/2 through his entire short but brilliant career, was profuse in his praise of the black son of Rhode Island and Belle Brandon. Of course, we all saw Rosa Sprague, and had her pointed out to us by Mr. Wilson, who said, with his characteristic enthusiasm: "There is Rosa Sprague, the greatest broodmare in the land and dam of McKinney, the greatest colt I ever bred, and one which, if he lives, is bound to astonish the trotting horse world as a sire." Rosa Sprague was a rather large mare, not coarse, a trifle flat over the hips, we thought, but giving off in her every move and action evidences of that great quality and character possessed by all really great mothers. No trotting horse breeder ever set a higher estimate on the value of great dams than did Mr. Wilson, and his great success as a breeder fully demonstrates the solidity of his wisdom on this point. At that time Black Jane by Mambrino Patchen and Rosa Sprague by Gov. Sprague were his ideals as mothers of great speed sires, and passing events have fully demonstrated the wisdom of his selection. Simmons 2:28, was then the premier sire at Abdallah Park, and Mr. Wilson never forgot to tell the visitor that the raven-coated son of George Wilkes had been selected by him as a stock horse when a colt on the strength of the superior quality of his dam, Black Jane. Great is the pity that W. H. Wilson could not have lived to witness the marvelous greatness of his two especial favorites—McKinney and Simmons.—Western Horseman.

A well known horseman said to a representative of the Trotter and Pacer at Empire City Park the other day: "The black pacer Coney 2:02 has rather been out of the public mind for a year or two, but unless I miss my guess, people will be talking about him again before the leaves fall. I have watched him pretty closely in his work this season, and I tell you he can step like a thing with wings on. I don't believe he was ever so good before, and it would not surprise me to see him pace 'over the line' this season. No pacer that I know of is so handy on a half-mile track, and if given a chance, I believe he can put the record for the two-lap course below 2:03."

No campaigning stable should be without a bottle of Gombault's Canine Balsam. It is a most satisfactory remedy in case of an emergency. Chicago Horseman, July 9, 1901.

Breeding In and In.

Advices from Lexington, Ky., under the date of June 25th, state that "Clem Beachy to-day drove a two-year-old filly the most sensational mile ever trotted by a two-year-old over the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association track, the time of the year considered. An evenly rated mile was trotted in 2:22½, the last quarter in 35 seconds."

This filly was sold at one of the public sales at Lexington last spring for $160. Her sire is King Red 2:20½ by Red Wilkes, and her dam was by Simmons 2:28. An analysis of the blood lines of this fast filly will show that she is quite closely inbred both to George Wilkes 2:22 and Mambrino Patchen. Her sire, King Red, and her dam, Daisy Simmons, were both got by sons of George Wilkes. The dam of her sire, King Red 2:20½, was by Mambrino King, one of the most highly-bred sons of Mambrino Patchen, and by far the most successful son of that horse as a sire of extreme speed. Simmons, that got this fast filly's dam, was out of a daughter of Mambrino Patchen.

There has been considerable prejudice among some practical breeders against the practice of mating mares with stallions that were more or less remotely related to them, and particularly if as closely related as are the sire and dam of this wonderful filly. No doubt there have been cases of injudicious inbreeding where harm has resulted, but a careful study of the history of the most noted trotters, from the earliest times to the present, ever produced in this country will show that many of them were either inbred or were from ancestors that were quite closely inbred to successful speed-producing strains. Every one familiar with the early history of the English turf and the blood lines of the most famous race winners and race-winning sires among the early thoroughbreds knows that in many cases they were quite closely inbred, and in some instances, like Flying Childers, they were from ancestors of incestuous breeding.

Leaving out the thoroughbreds and coming down to the most distinguished of the old time American trotters, we find that the one most prominent among them all, of his day, was Topgallant. The renowned old time reinsman, Hiram Woodruff, says of this horse, "that he was in some respects the most extraordinary trotter that ever came under my observation. He was a dark bay, 15 3 hands high, plain and raw boned, but with rather a fine head and neck and an eye expressive of much courage. He was spavined in both hocks (but was not lame), and his tail was very slim at the roots. His spirit was very high, and yet he was so reliable that he would hardly ever break, and his bottom was of the toughest and finest quality." Topgallant was not trained until he was fourteen years old, and was twenty-two years old when he won the best race of his life, a four-mile heat race to saddle. He also trotted some remarkable miles to saddle when twenty-four years old, as everyone familiar with Hiram Woodruff's "Trotting Horses of America" will remember.

It was generally believed that when the above-named work was written, that Topgallant was a son of imp. Messenger. This, however, was a mistake. His sire was Coriander, a son of imp. Messenger, and his dam was by Bishop's Hambletonian, the thoroughbred son of imp. Messenger that got the second dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, making Topgallant quite closely inbred to imp. Messenger.

Another of the old time trotters that gained great distinction and stood high among the best of his day was Whalebone, described as a remarkably handsome, blood-like horse, sixteen hands and three inches high. Whalebone was got by Bishop's Hambletonian, the son of imp. Messenger, mentioned above, and his dam was by Coffin's Messenger, another son of imp. Messenger, making Whalebone as closely inbred to Messenger as was Topgallant.

Dutchman was another of the famous old-time trotters and the fastest of his day. His three-mile record to saddle, 7:32½, made in 1839, has never been beaten. His four mile record to saddle, made in 1836, is 10:15, and has never yet been equalled. Dutchman was also inbred to imp. Messenger. His sire, Tippoo Saib Jr., was by Murphy's Engineer, and he by Grey Mambrino, a son of imp. Messenger.

Lady Suffolk (2:29½ to harness and 2:26½ to saddle) was the first trotter to take a harness record better than 2:30. She was raced from 1838 to 1852, at all distances, from one mile to four miles, and won in all eighty-two races. Lady Suffolk was also inbred to Messenger. Her sire, Engineer 2d, was by Engineer, son of Messenger, and her dam was by Don Quixote, another son of imp. Messenger.

The greatest long distance trotting record ever made in this country was one hundred miles in 8 hours, 55 minutes and 53 seconds. The horse that accomplished this feat was Conqueror, and he was closely inbred to imp. Bellfounder. Conqueror was got by Latourette's Bellfounder, a son of imp. Bellfounder, and his dam was Lady McClain, a daughter of imp. Bellfounder.

Goldsmith Maid, that held the world's champion trotting record, 2:14, for several years, and won 332 heats in 2:30 or better, a far greater number than has ever been, or is ever likely to be, won by any other trotter, is also an example of inbreeding. Her sire, Alexander's Abdallah, was by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, a son of old Abdallah, and the dam of Goldsmith Maid was also by old Abdallah. Nancy Hanks 2:04 was got by Happy Medium, a son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and her dam was got by Dictator, another son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Audubon Boy (4) 2:06, the fastest four year old out last season, and also one of the greatest money winners, is an inbred Wilkes. His sire, J. J. Audubon, was by Alecyone 2:27, a son of George Wilkes 2:22, and his dam, Flaxy, was by Bourbon Wilkes, another son of George Wilkes.

Royal R. Sheldon 2:04½, is by Constantine 2:12½, a son of Wilkes Boy 2:24½ by George Wilkes, and his dam, too, is Flaxy, by Bourbon Wilkes. Constantine, by the way, is very strongly inbred to Mambrino Patchen, tracing five times to that renowned son of Mambrino Chief.

The above are only a few of the instances brought to mind by an examination of the blood lines of Clem Beachy's fast Kentucky filly.

The incomparable trotting sire, Rysdyk's Hambletonian, was very strongly inbred to imp. Messenger. His sire, Abdallah, was by Mambrino, a running-bred son of Messenger. His dam, the Charles Kent Mare, was by imp. Bellfounder. His second dam, One Eye, was by Bishop's Hambletonian, another running-bred son of imp. Messenger, and his third dam, Silvertail, was a daughter of imp. Messenger. The Bellfounder strain seems to have nicked well with that of Messenger. The dam of the noted one hundred mile trotter, Conqueror, and also the dam of Conqueror's sire, were both inbred to the Messenger strain. Imp. Messenger and imp. Bellfounder, both originated from the same source, viz., Blaze, a son of the renowned Flying Childers. Messenger traces directly to Blaze through his sire, and Bellfounder to him through both sire and dam.

Of course where any animal has been afflicted with any form of unsoundness, like spavins or ringbones, or from some defect of temper, that has been inherited from some ancestor, it would be injudicious to inbreed the offspring from such an animal. So, too, there is a liability of carrying the practice of inbreeding too far when there are no hereditary defects to guard against. When carried too far either lack of size, bad temper or sterility is liable to result. Twice in and once out is the rule that has been practised by many successful English breeders of fast race horses, and is probably as close as can be safely practiced among trotting-horse breeders.—American Horse Breeder.

A Horse Ranch in the Philippines.

The Manila Times prints the following:

While the government has not as yet taken any steps toward the establishment of a horse ranch in these islands so as to raise its own stock, still no doubt exists but what the government will in the near future, either through compulsion or as a matter of economy, establish such a ranch, where all the horses and mules required for the military service in these islands can be raised at a great saving. At the present time nearly every head of stock landed here costs the government nearly $1000 (gold). Then it is generally conceded that imported stock cannot withstand the climate as well as native animals, and that it dies much faster. With native-bred horses, receiving the care that is given all government stock, deaths would be comparatively few, and such cases where cavalry regiments are, practically speaking, crippled through the lack of mounts, would not exist.

The government can raise its own stock by having its own ranch at a cost ranging from $50 to $100 gold, a head. A horse raised here would be smaller than the average American horse, and be adapted for cavalry service in this country.

It is acknowledged by many cavalry experts that the American horses, are, in the majority of cases, too large for scouting purposes in these islands, it often being found impossible to get them over the narrow, rough and steep mountain trails, while smaller horses could easily meet the difficulty. If cavalry is to be maintained in these islands, it seems as though the war department will be forced to consider the scheme of having a horse ranch in the islands in order to keep the mounted regiments supplied with mounts.

The Windsor Meeting.

A successful harness meeting is held every year at the Windsor, Ontario, track, which is just across the river from Detroit, where the Grand Circuit opens. The meeting is held the week prior to the Detroit meeting and is always largely attended.

Rain interfered with the first day at Windsor this year and only one race was finished—the 2:30 pace, which was won by Elderone, a bay gelding by Rex Elder, who took the race in straight heats in 2:12½, 2:09½ and 2:13½. Gold Brick was second in each heat and Junius third. General Brino, Ethel Mc, Vice Regal, Dorothy Wilton and Dr. Scott finished in the order named.

In the 2:17 trot the California bred horse The Roman by McKinney was the favorite and won in straight heats in 2:12½, 2:10½ and 2:14. The rain began falling after the second heat and the third heat was trotted the following day.

The race is thus reported in the American Sportsman of July 10th:

"Dick Benson's entry in the 2:17 trot, The Roman, was picked to win the event. Only two heats were trotted in this race, owing to the rain which set in, The Roman winning both.

"Silver Heir led to the upper turn, in the first heat, and was there collared by Prince Selma. Coming into the stretch McHenry drew away, and The Roman passed Silver Heir and pulled up alongside Selma. Less than a hundred yards from the wire Prince Selma broke, and The Roman walked in. In the second heat there was the best finish of the day. The Roman got away badly, but took the lead on the first turn. Prince Selma passed and led when they turned into the stretch. The Roman and Nutbearer got into the race coming down the stretch, and Benson's horse beat Selma out by less than a length, with Nutbearer about the same distance behind the second horse, this heat being trotted in 2:10½."

The report simply adds that "The Roman won the necessary heat the following day in 2:14."

Another Californian, the brown gelding Frank by Secretary, bred by D. Frazier, Petaluma, won the 2:15 pace in straight heats, the time being 2:10½, 2:12½ and 2:12½. Frank was raced over East last year and took a record of 2:14½. He beat a field of nine in this race, including Major C., Miss Delmarch, Schley Pointer, Black Joe, John H., Jack Mont, Don Sphinx and Japo Jr.

The special match race between Dan Patch 2:04½ and Harold H. 2:04 went to the son of Joe Patchen in two straight heats. The time was 2:06½ and 2:10.

The McKinney pacer You Bet 2:11½ equalled his record and won the first heat of the 2:12 class pace on the third day of the meeting, but had to be content with fourth money. There were seven heats in the race, which finally went to Roamer, a brown gelding by Moquette. The much touted $7000 pacer Prince Direct 2:14½, formerly known as Freddy C., was a starter in this race, but after five heats, in which he finished 4-3-2-4-4, was ruled out. None of the heats were faster than 2:11½ and the slowest was the last in 2:14.

In the 2:30 trot, the gelding Baron Do Shay by Oakland Baron won handily after dropping a heat to Dick Benson's mare Miss Johnson. The four heats were in 2:16½, 2:13½, 2:15 and 2:16½.

The meeting closed July 10th with a splendid program. Sylviaone, a gray mare by Alecyone, won the 2:25 pace in straight heats, best time 2:12½. The 2:20 trot went to Joe Steiner by Nutwood Chief, one of Vance Nuckols' string. There were six heats in the race, the first being won by Aunt Rose and the second and fifth by Blanche. The best time in the race was 2:17½ in the second heat.

Waubun, gray gelding by Pilot Medium, won the 2:12 trot. He was forced to trot the fifth heat in 2:12½, after the judges had derrickd the driver of Hesperus.

Confianza, the bay three year old filly by James Madison, owned by Mr. Ed Gaylord of Denver is one of the eligibles for the Occident stake to be trotted at the California State Fair this year and will probably be brought over to start for that rich prize. On July 2d at Denver she won a purse of $500 offered for 2:40 class trotters in straight heats. A report of the race states that Confianza was a prohibitive favorite and her trainer David Raybould "did not go any faster with this splendid racing prospect than was necessary to beat the three other starters. The three heats, in 2:22½, 2:21½, 2:23½, though undoubtedly much the best for a three year old trotter this season, were negotiated in such a comparatively easy manner that no line could be got on her true form and ability." It behooves the several Californians who think they have first money won in the Occident to "look a leedle oud."

Ex-Secretary of the Navy Wm. C. Whitney is driving on the road a new pair of very handsome and speedy bay mares by Bow Bells 2:19½.

WOODLAND will be headquarters for horsemen from now on, as the Directors of the fair association have put the excellent track in order and nearly every harness horse in training at Sacramento will be moved to Woodland during the next few days. The Yolo county town is one of the busy places in California at the present time and is experiencing quite a boom in the way of building, etc. Great interest has arisen in horse breeding there during the past two years, and at least a dozen well bred stallions have made good seasons there. Putting the track in good shape is an excellent move on the part of the Directors of the fair association, and the assembly of a large number of horses there will make a renewed interest in speed contests that cannot but help swell the gate receipts at fair time.

PLEASANTON IS THE PLACE where the Golden Gate Fair Association, Agricultural District No. 1, comprising the counties of Alameda and San Francisco, will hold its fair and race meeting this year, and the people of the horse centre are fully alive to the situation and preparing to make it the best fair held in California this year. The fair opens Tuesday, August 26th, and closes on the 30th, giving five days of racing for liberal purses, with harness horses and runners well provided for. There are five trotting purses advertised, four of which, the 2:12, 2:15, 2:19 and 2:24 classes have a value of $600 each, and one, the 2:30 class, $800. The pacing division has five purses of $500 each hung up to contest for, the classes ranging from 2:12 to 2:30. Horses are to be named with entry which closes on Monday next, July 21st. The runners will be given two purses of $150 each day, entrance free, so that there should be a big band of gallopers to make up races with overnight. The Directors are endeavoring, and ask the co-operation of the citizens of the district, to arrange a large and meritorious display of the products of the two counties as well as a big display of live stock. Alameda county alone can make as fine a display of full blooded cattle, sheep, horses, etc., as any county in the State, and as the prizes are liberal we shall expect to see a very fine display in the way of live stock. The Pleasanton track is historical and the people of the surrounding country loyal to the harness horse. The excellent program of races is sure to attract a very large attendance and make the fair a big success. Owners and trainers should not forget this meeting and on Monday next should be sure and make entries in every class to which they have horses eligible. It will be a meeting that none can afford to miss. See the advertisement in this issue.

MARYSVILLE'S FAIR will be held during the five days from August 26th to 30th this year. By referring to our advertising columns it will be seen that the directors of this agricultural district, No. 13, have arranged an excellent program of liberal purses for both trotters and pacers as well as for runners. There are five pacing events, three for $400 each and two for $500 each. The trotters have three purses of $500, one of $300 and a district race for $100. Liberal purses will be given the runners, entries to which will close over night. The entries to the harness races close August 2d. Marysville is a thriving town, has one of the best tracks in California, and will endeavor to give a meeting this year that will reflect credit on all concerned. It is very handy to ship horses from Marysville to Woodland, where one of the big meetings of the circuit will be held the following week, the distance being short and the fare low. Some of the best racing ever seen on the circuit in the past has been held at Marysville, where there is always good betting, as the people of that town enjoy backing the trotters and pacers. The program provided this year is one of the best hung up by any of the northern towns for some time, and the directors assure the horsemen of liberal treatment and every possible accommodation if they will attend the meeting. Read the advertisement which appears in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN this week, and make your entries in time. They close August 2d.

STOCKTON'S FAIR AND RACE MEETING will be a regular hummer this year. There are two $1000 stakes for the horsemen, the Chamber of Commerce for 2:24 class trotters and the Gas City for 2:20 class pacers. Besides these two leading features, there are eight purses of $500 each, equally divided between the trotters and pacers. There will also be two or more running races every day during the meeting, entries to which will close overnight. Stockton is the leading interior city of the State and the metropolis of the great San Joaquin valley. Its fair follows the great State Fair at Sacramento, and precedes the Breeders meeting and the District Fair at Fresno. There is no longer any question but the circuit of 1902 will be a big success in every way. The people will attend in large numbers and there promises to be larger fields of horses for the races than have been seen for a long time in California. If you want to race at Stockton get your entries made out and mailed to Secretary J. W. Wilby by Friday, August 1st, which is the date of closing for the harness events. Stockton track is one of the best in the State and every courtesy will be shown horse owners by the officers of that thriving association, the Stockton Driving Club, of which the Mayor of Stockton, Mr. Geo. E. Catts, is the energetic President.

A CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT has been made in the affairs of the Los Angeles race meeting, whereby the directors of the Sixth District Agricultural Society transfer to a new association the forthcoming fair in October, together with all the engagements of the running, trotting and pacing horses for that meeting. The new concern is to be known as the Los Angeles Racing Association and the incorporation papers are now being prepared by one of the leading law firms of Los Angeles. Mr. J. W. Brooks, who for several years has been the efficient official handicapper of the California Jockey Club, will be the manager of the new concern, and that well known newspaper writer and genial gentleman, Capt. Thos. B. Merry (Hidalgo) probably Secretary. The Directors will be selected from the very first citizens of Los Angeles, gentlemen who are in every way identified with the growth and development of the great metropolis of Southern California. It is proposed to make the fair and race meeting which begins October 11th, this year, and continues two weeks, a grand success in every way. Special inducements will be offered horsemen and the best horses in training will be secured for the meeting. The big entry list for the harness races, which appears on another page of this issue, is a record breaker and a large number of additional purses are to be advertised soon. Probably no man on the Pacific Coast has a more thorough knowledge of racing in all its branches than Mr. Brooks, and Capt. Merry is an encyclopaedia in regard to all matters pertaining to the thoroughbred. Last year he visited New York, England and Paris and saw the great events decided by the thoroughbreds on the leading race courses of the world, and is therefore prepared to make the Los Angeles meeting up to date in every way. Los Angeles is a harness horse town beyond a doubt and the trotters and pacers will be specially catered to and provided for. The meeting there this year will be the greatest in the history of racing in Southern California.

BAKERSFIELD, the centre of the oil industry and one of the liveliest cities in the interior of California, will be the place where the Kern County Agricultural Association, District No. 15, will hold its fair and race meeting this year, the dates being October 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th, which follows the Breeders big meeting at Fresno and immediately precedes the thirteen day meeting at Los Angeles. Eight good purses are advertised this week for the Bakersfield meeting, six of which are open to all, the other two being for Kern county horses. Of the open purses, there is $750 for 2:24 class trotters, $600 for 2:15 class trotters, and $600 for 2:19 class trotters. The pacers are given $750 for the 2:25 class, $600 for the 2:12 class, and $600 for the 2:19 class. The entries to these events will close August 5th, the day before the Ventura meeting opens, and therefore records made thereafter on the circuit will not bar horses from starting at Bakersfield. The Kern county association is making preparations to hold a big fair at the same time and the exhibition of the county's products will be the largest ever held in that section. Horsemen who will race at Fresno and Los Angeles, and these comprise all those that are racing in California this year, will want to stop off at Bakersfield during fair week and should not fail to enter in these races. Harry A. Jastro is secretary and should be addressed at Bakersfield for entry blanks, or any information in regard to stalls, conditions, etc. Remember entries close August 5th.

THE BUTTE RACE TRACK has lowered one of its records. On Tuesday last, the sprinter Judge Thomas by Traveler clipped one-quarter of a second from the world's record for the distance of three and one-half furlongs, the time being 40½ seconds. In view of the fact that the winning horse carried an impost of 134 pounds, the race is one of the most remarkable in track history. The record was formerly held by Leora, her time being 40½ seconds. Following are the world's records that have been established on the Butte race track. It will be seen that each of the four is for a short distance: One-fourth of a mile, Bob Wade, 21½ seconds. Three furlongs, Red S., 34 flat. Four furlongs, April Fool, 47 seconds. Three and one-half furlongs, Judge Thomas, 40½ seconds.

Successful Inaugural Matinee.

The Fresno Driving Club, recently organized and having 63 members, held its first matinee last Sunday. There were nearly a thousand people present when the first race was called, including a large number of ladies, and the racing was greatly enjoyed by all.

The judges were T. C. White, Geo. Taft, S. N. Griffith, Fulton G. Berry and T. J. Hay, who acted at different times during the day. L. P. Timmins was Marshal and Hi Rapelji made an excellent starter. All the events were best two heats in three. The summaries:

Secretary Hudson, of the Driving Club, who is also secretary of the Fresno Fair Association, is at present in San Francisco, and informs us that there was great interest and much enthusiasm manifested at this the first matinee of the club, and arrangements are completed to hold matinees once a month during the summer and fall. There is no admission charged to these matinees and the racing is for trophies only, no money prizes being given and no betting done on the results. The best people in Fresno attended the matinee and were all highly pleased with the afternoon's entertainment. There is much talk in Fresno in regard to the Breeders Meeting to be held during the week beginning September 29th, and all are agreed that it will be a great success. The district fair which will be held the same week will bring together the finest display of Fresno county products ever got together. The week promises to be a gala one for the raisin city and many hundreds will be drawn there to see the fair and enjoy the races.

THE BLUE RIBBON MEETING.

Grand Circuit Opens at Detroit With High Class Racing.

Although a thunder and rain storm flooded the track of the Detroit Driving Club after but four heats had been decided on the opening day, Monday of this week, there was a record broken and the excellent racing whetted the appetites for more on the following day. About five thousand people were present and the betting was lively.

The first race on the card was the 2:15 class trot for $1500, in which there were but five starters. There were two heats trotted before the rain fell and of these Pug by Deenwood won the first in 2:12½ and Silver Sign, a Colorado owned horse by Silverhorn, won the second in 2:10½. The following day Silver Sign won the fourth and fifth heats in 2:13 and 2:12½, after General Johnson had taken the third heat in 2:12½. Gavatta, Sybil H. and Ruth M. were the other starters.

The Chamber of Commerce, $5000, for pacers of the 2:14 class, and the first big pacing event of the year brought out eleven horses to score for the word. The race went in straight heats to Direct Hal, son of Direct 2:05½ and Bessie Hal by Tom Hal. The horse was bred by Ed Geers who sold him last year to the Hamlins for $10,000. Direct Hal has been touted as a coming great one and he made the prophecies good by taking a record of 2:06½ the first rattle out of the box, the fastest first heat ever paced by a green horse. He broke just before getting the word in the second heat, but squared away and paced around the bunch finishing the mile in 2:08½, a length in advance of the second horse, and the next day won the remaining heat in 2:07½. The California horse Dr. Hammond was a starter in this race, but according to the brief summary telegraphed was outside the money, finishing fifth, with such horses as Elastic Pointer that has worked a mile in 2:07 behind him. All three heats of this race were in faster time than had before been made in the Chamber of Commerce stake.

The 2:19 trot went to The Roman, son of McKinney 2:11½, and Wanda 2:14½ by Eros. He won in straight heats in 2:11 and 2:12½ with eleven horses behind him.

Fast time was made in the 2:07 pace in which Shadow Chimes beat five fast ones in 2:05 and 2:05½.

The 2:20 pace brought Greenline, the winner, into the 2:10 list with a rush, as he beat his field of fourteen horses the first heat in 2:07½ and took the next two in 2:11 and 2:10½. The California horses Uncle John and Funston were outside the money in this event. Greenline is by Online and his dam by Greenbacks.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Stake, $10,000 for trotters of the 2:24 class, the event to which all eyes have been turned for months, ended in a big surprise and was captured by a blind horse, but a good one. The California four year old Zephyr by Zombro was the favorite for this race on the strength of her race two weeks before, when she took a record of 2:13½ rather easily, but when warming up for the race she showed lame and had to be drawn. New books were made and the blind horse Rhythmic, a son of Oakland Baron, was made favorite and delivered the goods in three straight heats, admirably driven by Scott Hudson. The time was 2:11½, 2:11½ and 2:11½. There were seven others started in this race, Hallie Harden getting second money, Lord March third and Wentworth fourth. Over ten thousand people saw this race.

The 2:11 pace for $1200 went to Dick See by Tennessee Wilkes in straight heats—2:08 and 2:09, there being eighteen starters. The California bred ones You Bet 2:11½ and Pussy Willow 2:10½ were starters, You Bet being fifth in the telegraphic summary and Pussy Willow next to last.

Millard Sanders won the 2:11 trot on Wednesday with the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's good mare Anzella, reducing her record to 2:09½ in the third heat. This race was for a purse of $1500 and Anzella was favorite. The first heat was trotted on Tuesday, and won by Palm Leaf in 2:10½. The sun set before the second heat could be called and the race went over until Wednesday under the new rules. There were ten starters, among them Charlie Mac, the sixteen-thousand-dollar Metallas, and Poindexter that has had 2:05 predicted for him by his admirers. Poindexter won the second heat in 2:09, and then Millard took the daughter of Antrim to the front the next two heats in 2:09½ and 2:10½, winning the race and first money amounting to $750.

In the wagon race for amateur drivers Mr. E. S. Smathers of New York won the mile dash with his fast mare Alice Barnes in 2:12. Mr. C. K. G. Billings of New York was second with Franker and Mr. C. A. Otis Jr. of Cleveland third with Alberta D. There were no other starters.

Alice Russell by Gambetta Wilkes won the fifth, sixth and seventh heats of the 2:17 trot in 2:14½, 2:16½ and 2:15. Nut Bearer won the first and fourth heats in 2:13½. Mary P. Leyburn won the second and third heats in 2:11½, 2:12½. Promise, Millard Sanders, Baron Dillon Jr., Bernelda, Vendora, Guy Fortune and Tip T. also started.

The 2:14 pace took five heats to decide. Roamer won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:09½, 2:09½, 2:11½. Rosebud won the second heat in 2:11½. Winfield Stratton won the first heat in 2:08½. Prince Direct (formerly Freddie C.) took fourth money. Frank, Don Sphinx, Black Joe, Pauline G., Flash S., John H. and Jackmont also started.

Three of the races scheduled for Wednesday had to be postponed until Thursday.

On Thursday eight races were on the program at Detroit and all were completed before sundown, which shows good work on the part of the management.

The 2:04 pace was first on the card and of course Dan Patch was favorite. He won in straight heats in 2:05 and 2:05½, with Searchlight second, Connor third and Indiana fourth.

Six trotters next lined up in the 2:13 class, which went to Major Delmar by Delmar in straight heats. The time was 2:11 and 2:12½. Aggie Medium, Hawthorne, Ioa Highwood, Dr. Spellman and Cretonnes were the other starters.

In the 2:08 class pacing event to wagon for amateurs, Hontas Crooke, driven by Mr. C. K. G. Billings, won the dash in 2:10½, beating Mr. F. G. Jones' Frazier, the only other starter.

The other amateur event, the 2:13 trot to wagon, was a two in three affair. Louise Jefferson, also owned by Mr. Billings, carried him to a second victory in this race, taking two heats straight in 2:12 and 2:12½. Mr. Harry Devereux, with the Electioneer mare Peko, was second and Mr. C. A. Otis was third with Alberta D.

Darwin, a grey gelding by Commoner, won the 2:27 trot for Myron McHenry in three straight heats, the time being 2:15½, 2:13½ and 2:13. Jurash, Boralma's Brother, Betsy Tell, Poteen, Miss Johnson, Blanche, Asbland Cassell and Dormeath also started.

Three thousand dollars was the purse in the 2:09 pace and it was the only split heat race of the day. Fred S. Wedgewood, owned by Frederick Gerken of New York, took the first heat in 2:08½, and the second in 2:06, and then Dan R., sorrel gelding by Tasco, Jr., a short pedigreed horse, got the third heat in 2:05½. Fred S. Wedgewood took the fourth heat and race in 2:10½, the others all stopping on account of the fast pace set in the first three heats. Captain Sphinx, Terrace Queen, Salem and New Richmond were the other starters.

The 2:07 trot for $2000, had but four original entries and of these but two, The Monk 2:08½ and Dolly Dillon 2:07 came out for the word. Charlie Herr and Lord Derby being scratched. The Chimes gelding was on edge and won the first heat in 2:07 and the second in 2:10½. Dolly Dillon got second money amounting to $500, which makes two starts, one first and one second money for the Santa Rosa Stock Farm horses in charge of Millard Sanders.

There were five starters in the $1000 Chamber of Commerce Consolation stake, and the pacer Gold Brick by Hal Parker won off the reel in 2:10½ and 2:08½. Junius by Online was second and Dr. Hammond, the California horse by Chas. Derby, got third money. King Charles and Beauseant also started.

Turf Queens as Dams.

The recent death, when one day old, of the second foal of the famous trotting mare Sunol 2:08½ is a reminder that misfortune and failure as mothers have been the lot of nearly all turf queens when retired from the track to be used for breeding purposes. From the time of the first 2:30 trotter down to the present day no record holder has won distinction sufficient to be classed as a "great broodmare"—the term employed by horsemen to designate mares that have produced two or more 2:30 trotters, or one such trotter and the sire or the dam of another of standard speed. Turf statisticians, who trace and classify the facts about the breeding of the fast ones, have recorded more than four thousand of these successful speed producers, yet the long line may be searched in vain for the name of a single mare that has ever lowered the trotting record.

So persistent has been the failure of the famous trotting mares to produce anything like the equals of themselves that their lack of success is frequently made the basis of an argument against breeding from mares having fast records, certain theorists maintaining that animals of undeveloped speed will more certainly produce speed than will those whose capacity as trotters is known and demonstrated. While the few turf champions seem to afford ground for this belief, the great mass of statistics point the other way and bear out the old maxim, "Breed to the winners."

One thing that has counted strongly against the record holders as broodmares is the advanced age at which most of them have gone into the harem. Of the eight mares that have held the world's record, four reached their twentieth year before being bred, and only one began her career as a broodmare before she was ten years old, while their average age was above fifteen years.

Lady Suffolk, the old gray mare that started the 2:30 list by trotting a mile in harness in 2:29½ over the Beacon course, at Hoboken, in 1845, lived to be twenty-one years old, and died without leaving a foal. This was not strange, however. Foaled in 1833, and campaigned continuously from 1838 to 1853, she trotted one hundred and thirty-eight races of nearly five hundred heats at one, two, three and four miles, and was an old and worn out mare when retired. She was bred to Hill's Black Hawk, the sire of Ethan Allen 2:25½, in 1853, and prematurely foaled to him a few weeks before she died, in 1854.

Highland Maid, a converted pacer, by Saltram, that set the trotting record at 2:27 in 1853, passed into the hands of George C. Hitchcock, New Preston, Conn., and produced six foals after her racing days were over. They were by such sires as George M. Patchen 2:23½, Ethan Allen 2:25½ and Hitchcock's Ashland, a son of Mambrino Chief, but none of them ever equalled the record of their dam, or even got into the 2:30 list. Young Highland Maid, the daughter of Ethan Allen, produced Highland Win 2:26, and Highland Patch, the daughter of George M. Patchen, comes into the pedigrees of one or two trotters in the easy end of the 2:30 list. None of the family has yet risen above mediocrity, however, and the line has long since dropped out of sight.

Flora Temple 2:19½, the first trotter to beat 2:20, and the wonder of her day, produced three foals after she was twenty-five years old, and after she had started in more than one hundred races, eighty-six of which she won. She lived to be nearly thirty-three years old. Kitty Temple, her first foal, was born in 1868, and was by Rysdyk, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. She figures in the records as the dam of Templette, a bay gelding that squeezed into the 2:30 list in 1894, with a mark of 2:29½, made at Allentown, Pa. Prince Imperial, Flora's second foal, was by William Welch, another son of Hambletonian. After a long lifetime in the stud he got Nana, a chestnut mare that trotted in 2:19½ last year. Although Prince Imperial never gained a public record, he trotted a mile in 2:23½ in private for Robert Bonner, who owned both he and Kitty Temple. Flora Temple was bred to the famous imported English race horse Leamington in 1870, and produced a bay filly by him that was called The Queen's Daughter. She never trotted or produced a trotter, so far as is known.

Goldsmith Maid 2:14, the greatest of all campaigners, and the mare that first lowered Dexter's record, had her first foal when she was twenty-two years old, and produced two more before she died, in 1885, at the age of twenty-eight. All were by General Washington, a mediocre son of her old rival, Lady Thorn 2:18½, and General Knox 2:31½. The oldest of her foals was killed in colthood. The second was Stranger, a horse of great natural speed, that went wrong in training. He was one of the most successful trotting sires of his day, having six representatives in the 2:15 list, and more than thirty in the 2:30. Rosebud, the youngest of Goldsmith Maid's foals, has been kept for breeding purposes all her life, but has not produced anything of note.

Maud S. 2:08½, the first trotter to beat 2:10, never produced a foal. This was deeply regretted, not only by her owner, Robert Bonner, but by all breeders and horse fanciers, her rich and fashionable pedigree, combined with her extreme speed, nervous energy and beauty of form, making her probably the most desirable mare ever foaled for breeding purposes. She was by Harold, the son of Hambletonian, whose daughters produced such crack trotters as Beuzetta 2:06½, Early Bird 2:10, Extacy 2:11½, Impetuous 2:13, Philonides 2:11½, The Conqueror 2:12½, Henrietta 2:12½, So Long 2:13½, Bettine 2:14½ and Penant 2:15. Her dam, Miss Russell, was one of the most prolific of all the speed producing daughters of Alexander's Pilot, Jr., five of her foals having records below 2:30, and six of her sons having to their credit 179 trotters in the 2:30 list. A colt by Electioneer from Maud S. would have been worth a small fortune.

Sunol was never bred while owned by Robert Bonner. He firmly believed her to be the fastest trotter ever foaled, and to the day of his death he expected to see her wrest the world's record from Alix 2:03½, who then held it. C. W. Williams, the owner of Allerton 2:09½, once offered a fabulous sum for her breeding qualities for one year, but Mr. Bonner promptly declined it. Sunol was fourteen years old when Mr. Bonner died, and John H. Shults bought her. He surprised the horse world by breeding her to an untried colt. She proved fertile, but the foal that came last year died when a week old, and now she has lost another.

Nancy Hanks 2:04, the mare that succeeded Sunol in the list of record breakers, is proving to be by far the most prolific and successful broodmare among all the champions. She was put to breeding in 1895, when nine years old, and she has since then produced a foal nearly every year. Her first born, Narion, by Arion 2:07½, is now the dam of some promising young trotters by Bingen 2:06½, and Peter the Great 2:07½. Her foal of 1898, Admiral Dewey by Bingen, was one of the best three year olds out last season, having won all his races and gained a record of 2:14½. He is now training for the campaign of 1902, and it is expected that, if he does not go lame again, he will beat 2:10 this year. Not a few horsemen believe he will eventually equal or surpass the record of his dam, for he could trot a 2:00 clip last year. Among the fillies from Nancy Hanks is one by the imported English race horse Meddler. J. Malcolm Forbes, her owner, does not expect this cross bred youngster to trot fast, but he is hopeful that when bred to Bingen she may produce a trotter of sensational speed. Mr. Forbes is reserving all the fillies from Nancy Hanks for breeding purposes, and proposes to develop the speed of the female branch of the family in the second generation only. It is too early to say that a notable family of trotters will spring from Nancy Hanks, but the daughter of Happy Medium and Nancy Lee looks more like a great broodmare than any other that ever held the world's record.

Alix 2:03½, the fastest and stoutest trotting mare of them all, was bred and built to be a great mother of trotters, but the ill luck which seems to have followed so many other turf queens pursued her also, and she died in the prime of life a few months ago, leaving only one foal, by Sable Wilkes 2:18.—N. Y. Herald.

The Breeding of High Pointer.

LOS ANGELES, July 10, 1902.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I noticed in your paper of July 5th, a notice regarding the breeding of Mr. Ed Geers' colt, High Pointer. You gave his sire as Cloud Pointer, which allow me to correct. His sire was Sky Pointer. Mr. Geers sent Bessie Hal to California to be bred to Direct. Two weeks before Direct Hal was dropped Bessie Hal was sent to our place to be bred to Sky Pointer when the proper time came, which was done. High Pointer is the colt. It was on Mr. Geers' advice that we bought Sky Pointer. He selected the horse for us and if Sky had lived he would have shown to the world that Mr. Geers made no mistake in his selection. Bessie Hal, with her colt Direct Hal, stayed with us till the next January, when I sent her East. We made Mr. Geers a present of the breeding. I have kept track of the colt, for I have always thought he would go fast some day and shall always feel a pride and interest in him. Sky had gone in his workout in 2:10. We have a very fine three year old by him out of Juliet D. by McKinney, a filly out of a mare sired by Monroe Chief, besides others which we think will be good. We will begin to work them (five in number) this fall if nothing happens, but we do not think of racing them till they are five years old.

Yours truly,

MRS. L. J. H. HASTINGS.

The Opportunity of Electioneer.

[Turf, Field and Farm.]

It was on Tuesday, November 27, 1876, that Gov. Leland Stanford paid a visit to Stony Ford and purchased from Mr. Charles Backman thirteen head, for which he paid $41,200. One of these was Electioneer, who then was eight years old. Another was Elaine, two years old, by Messenger Duroc out of Green Mountain Maid. Both obtained great fame at Palo Alto, one as the sire and the other as the dam of trotters. Reference to the 1878 catalogue of Stony Ford shows how few mares were bred to Electioneer by Mr. Backman. All of the two-year-old colts are by Messenger Duroc, and there is just one yearling colt by Electioneer, and it is out of Lady Currie. There is one two year old filly and three yearling fillies by Electioneer. The two-year-old is out of Lady Currie, and one yearling is out of Mineola by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, another out of Young Gipsy by Rell's Mambrino Pilot, and another out of Rosalinda by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, she out of Nellie Sayre by Seely's American Star. Lady Currie by imp. Tom Crib, out of Curry Abdallah by Abdallah, is the only Stony Ford mare that produced twice to Electioneer. Did Mr. Backman select her because she carried so much thoroughbred blood? When Electioneer left Stony Ford he left but five representatives on the farm where he was reared, one colt and four fillies. A few outside mares were bred to the stallion, but no effort was made to develop the speed of their foals.

The active career of Electioneer, therefore, did not begin until after he had looked upon the live oaks of Palo Alto. In California he founded a great family of trotters. He died December 3, 1880, and Governor Stanford thus went upon record in his catalogue of 1891: "To his get Electioneer imparted the most desirable qualities—soundness, high form, uniformity, pure gait, excellent disposition and extreme speed—at an early age. He has been bred to mares representing many families, and from all his colts show his stamp. From running bred dams he has sired ten in the 2:30 list, and his progeny so bred have as pure gaits and as sweet dispositions as those whose dams are strongly bred in trotting lines. In fact, we have never seen trotters of better qualities than the get of Electioneer, out of thoroughbred mares." Every critic had his attention directed to Electioneer when the get of this stallion held the best trotting records at one, two, three and four years old. This was a tremendous card, and Electioneer was drawn from public use. Offers to breed to him at extravagant figures were refused. The last time we saw Electioneer he came from his box at Palo Alto with elastic tread, and Governor Stanford laid his hand on his shoulder and said: "It is, you will observe, what some people call a mutton shoulder. I like a shoulder of this kind. The toughest stage horses that I ever knew were built this way." Electioneer had wonderful quarters and his propelling power was great. It was only a few months after we had looked upon him in the bright sunshine of California that he passed away.

His first real opportunity came to him twenty-five years ago, and what is his rank to day? He is the sire of 158 trotters and 2 pacers, and the trotters include Arion 2:10½ as a two year old to high sulky, Palo Alto 2:08½ as a stallion to high wheel, and Sunol, whose 2:08½ is the best high wheel record on a kite track. Ninety-seven of his sons have sired 745 trotters and 197 pacers, and 79 of his daughters have produced 91 trotters and 12 pacers. Among the producing sons are Advertiser, sire of the champion yearling, 2:23; Arion, sire of Nico 2:08½; Chimes, sire of The Abbot 2:03½; Fantasy 2:06, and The Monk 2:08½; May King, sire of Bingen 2:06½; Whips, sire of Azote 2:04½; Bow Bells, sire of Boreal 2:15½; the sire of Boralma 2:07; and Sphinx, the sire of 56 trotters and 29 pacers. It is extreme speed producing blood, and blood that breeds on, and probably it is just as well that Electioneer was denied an opportunity at Stony Ford. In passing to Governor Stanford he was given a chance that is seldom given to a horse.

Hetty G. 2:05½, after being converted to the trot, working heats in 2:12½ and looking like a winner this year at the diagonal gait, has been shifted back to the pace. In speaking of the change John Kelly remarked that "Hetty never was in better form than at the present time," and added: "As we have two good green trotters in our stable, we feel confident the mare can win in her class for sidewheelers, and we concluded to race her at her old way of going. I have Hetty shod with a six ounce shoe all around, and, as you see, she goes good-gaited. She is a very much improved mare, I think, in every way, as she does not fret, eats heartily, and I think with the renewed strength that she has in her present condition she will do well for us in her class for pacers."

Dolly Bidwell by Inglewood, one of the good ones of last year's campaign, is better than ever this season. She won in straight heats in 2:08½ and 2:09½, at Readville, July 5th, reducing her record a full second.

That it seemed th' pines were pokin' little airholes in th' sky;
With a paper full o' eatin' an' a bottle on th' list?
Didn't you? Well, honest, what a lot o' fun you've missed.

Did you ever go an' loaf when th' afternoons were long,
An' th' canyons full o' dreamin' an' th' treetops full o' song—
Jes' layin' back so peaceful, with a cob pipe in your fist?
Didn't you? Well, honest, what a lot o' fun you've missed.

John Bardsley, better known as "Sparrow Jack," who lived in Germantown some years ago, it is claimed was responsible for the introduction of the sparrow—the avian rat, to the United States. During the time that William F. Smith represented the Twenty-second Ward in the Philadelphia councils, he presented an ordinance appropriating $300 with which to purchase English sparrows to destroy the measuring worms that had become a nuisance in the city squares. John Bardsley, an Englishman, but for many years a resident of Germantown, was delegated to go to England to secure the sparrows. Being familiar with the English birds, he had no trouble in catching them in nets. He secured between 300 and 400. On his way over from England, one-half the sparrows died, but enough existed to insure a rapid increase of the little pests, which have since become more troublesome than the worms.

Sacramento Sportsmen's Dove Stew.

Emulating the example of the sportsmen of Grass Valley and Marysville, two Sacramento clubs, the Capital City Gun Club and the Del Paso Outing Club, will inaugurate, on August 3d, what is proposed to be an annual festivity—a dove stew and fish chowder banquet. The latter portion of the feast is an innovation somewhat; the heretofore famous "dove stews" of Yuba and Nevada counties have been without the piscatorial adjunct. The Sacramentans will, if possible, put the regal black bass to the ignoble purpose of a chowder. A fish chowder when made with the appropriate ingredients is a toothsome dish fit for a king, but we protest, black bass were never destined for a chowder. A far better fish for that purpose is right at hand for the Sacramentans viz: the striped bass. However, we do not wish to be considered as intermeddling in others' affairs and will subside in this respect.

The Sacramento shooters and anglers are a sport loving fraternity and always manage to have a good time. In referring to the coming happy function the Sacramento Record-Union remarks:

"William Hamilton, who, during the week supervises the actions of the Supervisors and on Sunday goes fishing, has been appointed Chairman of the Piscatorial Committee, and he has a class of amateurs, including Judge Hughes, Dr. Atkinson and others, whom he is initiating into the mysteries of black bass fishing to insure sufficient material for the chowder, while 'Gaily' Graham is training a class of pupils, including Vetter and others, into the best method of connecting with doves when they are traveling a la Santos-Dumont.

This dove stew is to be an annual affair, and it is expected that fully 150 people will partake of the two club's hospitality under the greenwood trees.

Louis Faure has been engaged as chef for the occasion and will have an ample corps of assistants at his command. This annual feed of the clubs is not to be a stag affair, as every member is expected to take his wife or sweetheart."

How Lions Are Hunted and Killed in Uganda.

A lion hunt in Uganda, British East Africa, is described by one of the participants in a letter to his brother. From the nonchalant manner in which the narrator details the meeting with and killing of a couple of lions one would imagine that the king of beasts was as easy to get away with as a Fresno jack rabbit. Just think of a lion standing, roaring all the time and taking the punishment inflicted by ten rifle ballers he gave up the ghost. From the way they laid to cover one might have had some excellent sport with a brace of Pointers or Setters. After a bevy of lions had been located and then worked properly a splendid bag of lions could be made in a morning's shoot. Lions have a bad habit of flushing, however, when the dog is on a point. This is a serious drawback to the sport of hunting him with field dogs. The story here referred to is as follows:

"I had a rather novel experience the other day. A friend of mine shot a zebra as a bait for a lion with the intention of looking up the dead zebra in the early hours of the morning, between five or six, as lions are often shot in this manner. They have no objection to who does the killing provided the meat is good. Two others and myself were invited to join in the sport. When we arrived at the spot we found a hyena doing a feed but no lion. We then decided to go to the spot where lions were known to rest. This is a stream with dense grass and reeds running down the sides—a very good spot for hiding in. Well, to make a long story short, we came to the spot, I foolishly walking right into the grass. The other three, with two coolies, walked on the outside. We had not gone far in this fashion when two reed-buck jumped up; another ten yards another jumped up, and about fifteen yards further and about a yard in front of me up jumped a lion with a terrific roar and ran in the direction of Dr. S., Mr. S. and Mr. M. The lion, on seeing them, turned and came back on me, only moving a little to the right of me and crossing the stream. When he was getting through the rushes on the off side he gave me a fine shot. I missed the first shot, but hit with the second. I hit him below the left shoulder. No sooner had I fired a second shot, when from my right and about a yard in front of me a second lion jumped up and broke across the stream. In trying to reload my cartridges jammed. In the meantime the lion I had hit turned with the evident intention of charging, but S. dropped him with a bullet through the right shoulder; the other two also fired but missed. During this time I cleared my gun and we followed up the second lion. He was standing about 300 yards from the spot where the other lion was shot. Dr. S. took a steady aim and hit him in the hind leg, the lion having only his hind quarters exposed through the rushes. After this we had quite a lively time of it. The lion would start to charge us, then change his mind and then make as if to charge again. He kept on like this until he received ten shots, two of which were from my .500 Express. The whole time he kept roaring—and they can roar. Dr. S. got one lion and I the other, as we had drawn first blood. These were our first lions, and we both felt elated. S. and M. had shot them before."

Field Trials Notes.

The Pacific Coast Field Trial Derby, with thirty-eight entries, is promising for a good stake, there should be at least $500 in the purse. This amount will be divided into three moneys, 50, 30 and 20%. The interest taken in the California trials will no doubt have a stimulative effect for entries in the Northwest trials at Whidby island, several of the local sportsmen having already signified their intention of sending Pointers and Setters to the northern trials on bob whites. The entry for the Bakersfield trials of dogs from the north is a good one under the circumstances.

Among Eastern field trial enthusiasts the strong interest taken in this fall's meetings is general. Most of the Eastern Derby entries closed on the 1st inst. Several clubs have postponed the date of receiving the nominations until the 15th of this month, while a number of other associations are open to receive entries until August 1st.

A review of the action already taken by a number of Eastern clubs in arranging for the coming trials is here given: The Iowa Field Trial Association's fifth annual trials will take place at Emmetsburg, Ia., on August 19th. The Derby and All Age, comprise the program, $300 being guaranteed in each stake, divided into four moneys, $120, $90, $60 and $30. These trials will be on prairie chickens. The Derby conditions are the usual ones. Any winner of first in an open All-Age is barred in the club's All-Age Stake. The entry conditions in both stakes are similar, $5 to nominate and $10 to start. The judges have not yet been announced. Conditions are reported to be favorable for the opening trials.

The South Dakota Field Trial Association trials follow on August 19th at Salem, S. D. Mr. Thomas Johnson of Winnipeg, Man., a gentleman and sportsman well known to and appreciated by Coast field trial men will judge the trials. Three stakes—the Derby, All-Age and Subscription are on the card. The guaranteed purse for the first event is $300, and for the All-Age $400, four prizes divided into 40, 30, 20 and 10%. For non-members the fees are $10 to nominate and $10 to start. Members, $5 to nominate and $5 additional to start, for the first entry. All other entries, same conditions as for non-members. All-Age and Derby conditions are the same, the Derby being for Pointers or Setters whelped on or after January 1, 1901. The All-Age stake is for both breeds, dogs that have never won a prize in any open field trials. Setters and Pointers in the United States and Canada are eligible for the Subscription stake, $10 to nominate and $15 additional to start, the nominating and starting fees, less five per cent will form the purse, divided into three moneys, 50, 30 and 20%. All trials will be run on chickens, the first heat not to be run less than forty minutes. The club secretary is Dr. G. T. Page, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Minnesota-North Dakota Field Trials, to commence September 2d, will be the association's inaugural trials; the place for the meet is not yet decided upon. The Derby and All-Age Stake comprise the program. The purses will be made up from membership fees (about fifty members), nominating and starting fees, less expenses of the association and conduction of trials. The division will be in proportion to the entries in each event, divided into 40, 30, 20 and 10%. Pointers and Setters whelped after September 2, 1900, can enter the Derby. For club members and non-residents of Minnesota and North Dakota, $5 to nominate and $10 additional to start; for residents, non-members at the time of entry, $10 to nominate and $10 to start. On the evening of September 1st, a bench show prize of $10 for first and $5 for second will be awarded the best looking Pointers and Setters. The trials will be on chickens. The age of Derby contestants must be sworn to and properly attested by a notary or commissioned officer. Dr. W. A. Moore, 619 Pioneer Press Bldg., St. Paul, Minn., is the Secretary-Treasurer. The judges have not yet been announced.

The Western Canada Kennel Club trials are open to members only, who join in an annual trial of three stakes—Derby, All-Age and Subscription, entries for which close the evening before the running. The trials for two or three years have taken place at La Salle, on chickens. The place and name of judge for this year's trials have not yet been stated.

On September 4th the sixteenth annual field trials of the Manitoba Field Trial Club commence at Carman, Man. The Derby, All-Age and Champion Stakes comprise the schedule. The Derby for Setters and Pointers whelped on or after January 1, 1901. Setters or Pointers that have not won first place in the United States, Continental, Eastern or Manitoba Clubs trials can enter the All-Age. The purse in each stake is $325—four prizes, $150, $100, $50 and $25; $5 to nominate and $10 additional to start. Champion Stake, for dogs of both breeds that have won a place in field trial competition. A gold medal and purse—the total running fees are the prizes, $5 to enter and $10 to start, post entries allowed to winners of fall trials of this year. The announced judge, so far, is Mr. N. Wallace, Farmington, Conn. Prof. Eric Hamber, Winnipeg, Man., Secretary-Treasurer.

The Brandon Kennel Club start their fifth annual trials, September 11th, place not yet announced. Three stakes, a Derby, with the usual age conditions; an open-to-all All-Age. Purse in each of these events $175—three moneys, $85, $60 and $30, nominating and starting fees the same in both events—$5 and $10. The Manitoba Stake, for Setters bred and owned in Manitoba or the Northwest Territory, is the third stake, and open to all so owned and bred. First prize, gold shield and cup presented by Captain Ramsey; second prize, silver shield, third prize, bronze shield. Nominating fee $1, starting fee $2. Mr. W. W. Titus, of West Point, Miss., will judge, the trials are to be on

The Monongahela Club trials commence October 27th on the very best grounds to be secured in the vicinity of Washington Court House, Ohio. The Derby and All-Age, under the usual conditions, will be the two public stakes, a $500 purse for each event, divided as follows: $200, $150, $100 and $50. The Derby entries close September 1st, first forfeit $5, second $5, payable October 1st, and $10 additional to start. The All-Age purse is fixed as above, other conditions are not yet announced. A Members' Stake will possibly be run in the near future.

The Missouri Field Trial Association will begin the club's sixth annual trials on October 27th at Paris, Mo. This meeting is a little earlier than at first contemplated owing to certain changed conditions of the trial grounds. Two stakes, the Derby and All-Age, with a $400 guaranteed purse for each, will be run. Derby conditions, the usual ones as to age. Nominating fee $10, starting fee $15, the largest club fees of the circuit, will apply to both events. Three moneys in each stake, $200, $125 and $75. Pointers and Setters which have never won a first prize in any recognized field trial are eligible for the All-Age. (As to recognized trials, some trials are recognized by certain clubs and ignored by others.) Derby entries must be registered and the registered number appear on the entry blank. Mr. Norvin T. Harris, Judge Zell Gaston and Mr. G. A. Sturgis are the announced judges. Mr. Layton S. Eddins, Sedalia, Mo., is the club secretary.

The fourth annual trials of the Illinois Field Trial Association will commence at Robinson, Ill., on November 3rd. The grounds are mentioned as being first class for bringing out the best qualities of the dogs running. The judges will be Messrs. Gaston, Taylor and Barker. Mr. W. R. Green, Marshall, Ill., is the secretary-treasurer from whom further information can be obtained. The purses and other conditions are yet to be announced.

The Independent Field Trial Club will hold their fourth annual trials at Bicknell, Ind., November 10th. Information relative to stakes, purses, judges, etc., may be obtained by addressing the secretary-treasurer, Mr. H. S. Humphrey, Indianapolis, Ind. It is intimated that the club purses will be the same as those offered by the Missouri Club.

The Michigan Field Trial Association's fifth annual trials take place the same week as the Illinois trials. The trials will be commenced at Lake View, Michigan. The entries will to a large extent be local and close on August 1st. The secretary-treasurer is Mr. C. D. Stuart, Benton Harbor, Mich.

The inaugural field trials of the Western Irish Setter Club will follow the Illinois Club trials at Robinson, Ill., beginning immediately after the latter mentioned club's trials are over. Two stakes, a Derby and an All-Age are mentioned, the first open to all Irish Setters not two years old November 7th. The purse will be made up of the entry fees, 40, 30 and 20%. The All-Age purse conditions are similar. Entries close October 1st, $5 forfeit and $10 additional to start in each stake. Dr. T. L. Fenn, 754 West Forty-seventh street, Chicago, is the club's secretary-treasurer.

The International Field Trial Club's fourteenth annual trials commence at St. Joachim, Ont., on November 11th. Mr. W. R. Wells, Chatham, Ont., is the club's secretary.

The third annual trials of the Kentucky Field Trials Club is announced to commence at Glasgow, Ky., on November 17th. A plan will be tried to make the purse in each event amount to $500, by giving $300 to the Derby and All-Age Stakes and adding 50% of all money in, excess of that amount, paid in. The purse division in each stake will be 60, 30 and 10%. The club's acting secretary is Mr. Sam Brown Hays, of Louisville, Ky.

At Ruthven, Ont., on November 18th, the North American Field Trial Club will begin the club's fourth annual meeting. Two stakes—a Derby and All-Age will be run, purses not yet announced. The Canadian Kennel Club has donated a handsome large silver cup as a first prize in the All-Age, the Derby winner will receive a silver medal from the C. K. C. Mr. Alfred Wigle, Windsor, Ont., is the present secretary, vice Mr. Richard Bangham, who recently resigned by reason of ill-health. The club has splendidly appointed grounds at Ruthven with plenty of game and nice accommodations for members and guests.

The Ohio Field Trial Club propose to hold their fifth meeting at Washington C. H., Ohio. These trials, barring their extent, are claimed to be the best on the trial circuit. The last meeting of the club was held June 15th.

The American Championship Field Trial Association will—after the series of trials of the clubs—run a championship meet on the Washington Court House trial grounds. For this purpose, it has been assumed the club will have the use of the Monongahela and Ohio Clubs' grounds, which it is claimed should prove the best possible for the purpose.

The Alabama Field Trial Club have announced their trials to take place at Huntsville, Ala., December 15th. In addition to the club's usual program, not yet issued, an open stake will be run.

The Pacific Coast Field Trials Club will start the club's twentieth annual trials. Last year three events were run, the Derby, All-Age and Members' Stakes. In the Derby there were thirty-five original nominations and but seven starters. Twenty-one nominations had paid second forfeit, but death and disease played havoc with the young dogs and materially reduced the number of starters. The forfeit was $10 and $10 additional to start. The purse amounted to $350, divided 50, 30 and 20%; the same system of prize distribution will prevail at the coming trials. Puppies of both breeds whelped on and after January 1, 1901, only being eligible for the Derby, entries for which closed with a record list on the 1st inst. The All-Age run last year had nineteen original entries, of which fifteen started. The purse amounted to $340, divided 50, 30 and 20%. Entrance $10 and $10 additional to start, entries closing December 15, 1901. Conditions for the All-Age next January will be approximately the same. Last year both the Members' Stakes and Champion Stakes had to be declared off, for the same reasons, principally, that worked so adversely against the Derby dogs. One, and possibly both of these stakes, it is believed, will be arranged for at the coming trials. The selection of the judge will be made by President W. S. Tevis and Secretary Albert Betz and announced within the near future. The trials will be run on selected grounds in the vicinity of Bakersfield. Messrs. W. W. Van Arsdals, H. M. Keller and Jos. E. Terry compose the committee on grounds. A very enthusiastic and successful meeting is anticipated, the enthusiasm prevailing among the club members and Coast sportsmen being strong enough to warrant the most sanguine expectations in this respect. The Secretary's address is 201 Parrott Bldg., San Francisco.

The Pacific Northwest Field Trials third annual trials will start on October 28th at Whitley island, Puget Sound, and within easy reach of Seattle. Reports from Mr. Van Sant, the owner of the largest ranch on Smith's Prairie, are to the effect that birds are exceedingly plentiful. This is the section where the most birds and the best ground was found for the club's previous trials. The entries for the Derby close on August 1st. The northern sportsmen have made a number of entries for the Pacific trials. A number of California dogs will go north for the October trials. John Lucas will take a string to Washington, among his dogs will be a young Pointer owned by Otto Feudner. Of this youngster much is expected if the promises of his present performances are redeemed. R. M. Dodge, of Bakersfield, Stockdale Kennels, may be induced to handle some of his crack Pointers at the Whitley island trials. W. W. Coutts and Mr. Babcock it is probable will also be present with Pointers and Setters. F. R. Atkins, Seattle, Wash., is the club's secretary from whom further information may be derived.

Among the noted Coast dogs that will not be seen at the coming trials we are sorry to note Peachmark, a phenomenal English Setter bitch—whose intelligence and working sense have in a great degree been transmitted to her two daughters, Peach Blossom and Lady, besides these two there are other budding candidates, by this good Setter, that will undoubtedly make a showing.

John W. Considine's Doc Hick is another good one gone on his final range.

The judges selected for the Connecticut Field Trial Club's trials at Hampton, Conn., beginning November 11th, are: Mr. Horace A. Belcher, of Boston, Mass., and Mr. V. L. Basso, of New Canaan, Conn. F. W. Smith, New Haven, is the club's secretary-treasurer.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

We are indebted to Field and Fancy for much of our field trial data this week.

An opportunity to purchase a good prize winning smooth coat St. Bernard bitch is offered in our kennel advertisements.

Mr. W. Feige of this city recently received from the American Kennel Club the club's elegant championship medal, which his Setter Buckwa won.

Gabilan Kennels' English Setter bitch Fairland Pet whelped on July 5th a litter of ten puppies to Petrel's Count. Four of the pups are pure white.

Nairod Kennels' brood bitch Bonnie Doon (Ch. California Bernardo-Nellie Bland) was served, on the 7th inst., by Chas. Newman's Lester C. (Alta Millo-Beauty of the Joaquin).

Phil J. Fay's Bull Terrier bitch Woodcote Queen (Woodcote Venom-Jen) was served by Miss Graham's Bayview Brigadier (Bayview Bob-Bayview Belle), on June 14, 1902.

John E. Lucas, of Mt. View Kennels, recently received from Messrs. Gray and Edwards, Gibson Wells, Tenn., a handsome and very promising young English Setter bitch, Spotter, a Colonel R.-Sport's Girl Derby dog for the Coast trials.

Danston's Pride, a stylish and high bred young blue belton English Setter is at Gabilan Kennels in stud. These kennels have some well bred Setter and Cocker puppies for sale also. The announcement appears in the kennel advertisement columns.

A Bull bitch, at a more than reasonable price, if she is what the owner claims she is, and we have no reason to doubt him, is offered for sale in the kennel advertisement column. Here is an opportunity to a brood bitch for a Bulldog fancier. Stud dogs' services can always be had, brood bitches are scarce.

A most remarkable case of protracted parturition occurred last week at the kennels of Mr. Chas. Dresser. The Great Dane bitch Fanny, if we are correctly informed, whelped on Tuesday seven puppies, on the following day five more pups were born and on the third day still another installment of pups were whelped, making the total of puppies in the litter the most unusual number of sixteen. Nearly all of the pups were born alive and were strong and are now doing well. We believe this is something like a record in its particular line.

Nairod Kennels will soon have an Eastern dog in the string—a young St. Bernard bitch from the Marse Jeems-Remnant stock, Gypsy Lee II. 62,805 (Alta Leopold-Jim Blaine Jr's Beauty). She is a year and six months old, as yet hardly fully developed, is a very promising looker, we are told, of good bone, sound and active as a cat. Her markings are dark orange, black shadings and white points. So far as known, Mr. Dorian believes she is the only direct descendant of Remnant in this section. She will be served by Grand Master II. Alta Leopold is by Marse Jeems out of Nora Lee by St. Leonard-Marchioness of Butte, Marse Jeems by Remnant-Demetria; Jim Blaine Jr's Beauty by Jim Blaine Jr. out of Segna II., Jim Blaine Jr. by Jim Blaine out of Junis.

We note with regret, that we believe under the circumstances will be shared by every fancier, the death of Mr. J. L. Sparrowe's young Collie bitch Bonnie Bessie II (Bonnington-Admiral's Sunset). Bessie was attacked one day last week by a vicious mongrel Mastiff bitch and literally chewed to pieces, dying from her wounds three days afterwards. The Collie was purchased recently from Gabilan Kennels and gave promise of becoming a valuable brood bitch. Mr. Sparrowe was accustomed to have her follow his buggy and it was while following her master in such manner, that the big dog, which made its appearance from the owner's place of business, attacked her. This was clearly a case where the owner of a vicious dog was negligent and he should be made to pay the penalty of his carelessness.

Fish Lines.

Generally bay fishing for rock fish, seatrout, smelt and perch is getting better daily. Large catches of smelt and big sized rock fish have been made during the week in the vicinity of Point Richmond.

Black bass anglers have not so far had much sport in the Sacramento waters. The water in the ponds and river is very high at present, the fish evidently are surfeited with plenty of food and disdain the fisherman's lure.

Judge Banning took out a party on the Linda from Avalon oneday last week and if the bait had not given out they would have had the boat full; as it was they caught ten yellowtail and twenty rock bass. The gentlemen forming the party were J. B. Banning, John C. Cline, C. H. Riege, Dr. E. Henry Way, W. D. Noble, George H. Monroe and Harry Cline.

Dr. Willard G. Fralick made July 12th we believe, what will probably be the record breaking quantity fish catch of the season at Catalina island. With Boatman "Tad" Gray of Avalon, in the vicinity of Seal rock, just off the isthmus, the doctor caught fifteen yellowtail, seven barracuda and twenty rock bass, a total of forty-two fish, the total weight of them being nearly five hundred pounds, between 10 o'clock in the morning and 3:20 P. M. The largest yellowtail the doctor caught weighed thirty-two and a half pounds and the smallest weighed seventeen pounds.

Al Cumming and party are now at Bassett's, Sierra county. Near this resort, nestling in the hollows of the rugged ranges of granite mountains are nearly thirty small mountain lakes, all full of splendid trout. In one, Packer lake, fish of ten pounds and over can be found, they will take the spoon or a grasshopper hungrily. In another of these lakes trout were caught last season on a perfectly calm day, the fish taking the fly as readily as if the surface of the water had been whipped into many ripples by the wind. Mr. Cumming has sent a number of boxes of choice rainbow trout to numerous friends in this city since going away to the Sierras.

Although little is known accurately respecting the speed at which different fishes can swim, it may be broadly asserted that tropical seas are preeminent for the swiftness of their finny inhabitants, especially when we consider those which are pelagic, i. e., which live for most of their time far from land. Among such forms may first be mentioned most of the species included in the mackerel family, which are highly predaceous in habit, with red flesh richly supplied by blood vessel and nerves in direct relation to rapid locomotion. Ordinary mackerel (though not confined to the tropics) suggest the lines of a racing boat in their graceful build. The closely related albacore and bonito are even swifter, and feed chiefly on flying fish, which themselves possess swimming power of no mean order. These same unfortunates also furnish food for members of another family, misnamed "dolphins," which, without apparent effort, can swim round and round vessels going full speed ahead. The fastest fresh water fish is the salmon, and some of the Newfoundland variety have been credited with a speed of twenty-two miles an hour.

Striped bass anglers have caught a large number of fish in Lake Merritt for a week past. The bass caught, however, are mostly small fish, rarely running over four or five pounds in weight, generally one, two or three pounds. Among those who caught the heaviest fish on Sunday last were James Watt, an eight pounder, we believe, and nine smaller bass, A. C. Cunningham hooked nine fish, C. B. Hollywood eight. On Monday, Mr. Jackson caught four bass in the lake and on Tuesday he landed a seven pounder. Mr. Hollywood hooked a bass weighing thirteen pounds on Saturday. These fish were all taken on clam bait and in a space encompassing but a 100 yards square of the lake's surface at a point in front of the boathouse. The casts were made in the channel or just at its edge. Trolling in the lake with a spoon is impracticable at present by reason of the growth of bottom vegetation and the presence of this same stuff, or rather the voided portions of it, on the surface of the water.

Larkspur creek has been found to be an exceedingly prolific bass fishing ground, one angler taking a sixteen pound fish on Sunday. John Stack caught five fish, the largest weighed eight pounds. Jack Cleary landed three fish. "Junebug" Walker landed crabs and swore at small boys in swimming and at passing boating parties who disturbed his equanimity. Several nice bass, the largest over twelve pounds have been taken in San Antonio slough recently.

The angling fraternity have happy days for the indulgence of their favorite sport during the pleasant weather of the current month. Trout fishing is now at almost its best, and better generally than for several seasons past. Salt water fishermen are elated with the daily improving conditions of angling in bays, tide waters and the ocean.

Most of the trout streams are now low and clear, paving the way for ideal fly-fishing in many waters. Fishing in the Truckee at various points, from Boca down to Pyramid Lake, is reported most excellent. A letter received this week from Mr. Theodore Rothschild who is stopping at the Truckee River Country Club near Verdi, pleasantly states: "This is the second day since our arrival and I find the angling fraternity in good spirits. Fly-fishing is not yet at its best here (July 10th). A spoon—any make, on the end of the leader and two flies further up is the best lure. The spoon gets the large fish and the flies pick up the infants. The law in Nevada compels the return to the stream of all fish under six inches in length, nor are anglers permitted to fish within 50 feet of a fish ladder.

Such a law we ought to have in California. No tenderfoot need come here anticipating a soft job in fishing, it requires the hardest kind of work combined with skill and good judgment to coax Mr. Trout from the stream. Mr. W. S. Morrill of this place is the champion, he went out at 8 P. M. last evening, and in two hours he caught twelve fish—eight to sixteen inches. Mrs. R. T. McGinnis is the champion in her class, she landed a one and a half pounder with a spoon, besides eight smaller fish. Mr. McGinnis caught thirty-six fine fish. Chas. H. Kewell caught thirty-two, Rube Haas also caught a number of nice ones, twenty-six in all. Mr. and Mrs. Percy V. King caught good strings also. Among the other successful anglers were A. L. and Robert Mann of Oakland, Dr. Faulkner and son.

The stream is very erratic, some days over 100 fish are caught, the next day only half a dozen were taken.

Mr. Rothschild had excellent success, most of the fish being taken on the spoon, having tried a variety of flies with but little success. He has sent to a number of friends boxes of fish, since his sojourn on the river.

Poaching.

A. Magini, of this city, was arrested Wednesday near Duncan's Mills for violating the game laws of the State by hunting and shooting quail. The arrest was made by Deputy Commissioner L. N. Kercheval, who tramped the poacher ten miles across the country to Guerneville, where Justice Brown required him to pay $25 for the two birds found in his possession.

Every Sunday morning in the year these foreigners, and also some men and youths who are not foreign born, can be seen going aboard the ferry boats and trains, ostentatiously arrayed in cheap hunting clothes and generally accompanied by a mongrel bred Setter or Spaniel.

The returning trains in Marin and Sonoma, San Mateo, Alameda, Santa Clara and Contra Costa counties pick up these poachers and ground sluicers at many way stations. Jack rabbits, hares, blue jays, owls and hawks and all kinds of song birds (they all go into the pot) are not kept entirely out of sight. But quail and doves, which these fellows never fail to shoot, if opportunity offers, are hidden away.

It is about time that some action was taken to put a stop to a custom that is harmful in the extreme. The following up and arrest, conviction and fining of a few "guineas," as these despicable fellows are termed, would have a salutary influence in stopping the perennial and persistent violation of the law. A few search warrants brought into play, Sunday afternoons on returning Sausalito and Tiburon boats would accomplish marvels.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Sacramento sportsmen are elated over the prospects of duck shooting this season coming. The birds, principally mallard ducks, are numerous, having bred well in many lakes and ponds and in the tule expanses along the river in Sacramento county.

Announcement is made that Pastime, a weekly publication, devoted to sports afield, game protection, the rifle, the kennel and general recreation, will, commencing in August be issued hereafter as a monthly publication and will be known in future as the Western Field. This will issue in magazine form of at least 100 pages, beautifully illustrated. Mr. Frank H. Mayer has been engaged as editor in chief, Dr. C. W. Hibbard will be in charge as business manager.

Pastime has been purchased by a syndicate of wealthy gentlemen, all devotees of sports in general and most of them experts in special lines of sport. The President of the new publishing company is W. S. Tevis, Bakersfield, Vice-President C. S. Wheeler, San Francisco, Secretary A. J. Treat and Treasurer J. M. Quay.

The aim of the new journal, Western Field, will be for the best interests of fish and game, the sportsman, the trade, and the Coast at large, the education of the masses to an appreciation of good game laws, game preservation "and the inter-dependent value of both to our commonwealth." We wish the new magazine success and prosperity.

AT THE TRAPS.

The Union Gun Club regular monthly shoot will be the only local trap shoot to-morrow.

Across the bay, at Manzanita Station, Marin county, a "hammer and nails" shoot will occupy the attention of the Millwood Gun Club. Captain Price will marshal his men together in order to make certain changes and improvements on the club grounds; so, instead of handling their favorite shotguns, the shooters will have a chance to try their skill in working a varied assortment of carpenter's tools.

The Golden Gate Gun Club shoot on the 13th inst. offered a series of 25-bird pool races and a shoot at doubles, besides the regular club shoot for the members and visitors present. Considerable practice shooting was also done.

In the club shoot C. A. Haight and Dr. E. G. McConnell were the high scores, they divided first and second money. Seven shooters who scored eighteen blue rocks each divided the balance of the purse; they were: W. J. Golcher, "Slade," Fred Feudner, E. L. Forster, J. J. Sweeney, Eng. Forster and Dr. Derby. W. E. Murdock, Clarence Haight and Jos. J. Sweeney each won silver bars on straight runs of fifteen birds. The scores shot during the day were the following:

The Empire Gun Club regular trap season for 1902 was concluded at the Alameda Point grounds on the 13th inst. A big attendance of shooters attested the interest shown in the final club races. Premier honors were annexed by A. J. Webb, who has shot in splendid form this year. Secretary J. B. Hauer writes that Webb won the championship diamond medal, the Jas. P. Sweeney record medal and the special handicap prize gun. His score was crowded by J. B. Hauer in the handicap, who was but one bird behind in the season's shoot of 100.

The lapel button offered for second best score in the medal race was won by L. Baird after a close contest with R. C. Reed, who tied with Baird for the prize. A shoot-off at twenty-five birds resulted in a win for Baird. The cuff buttons offered as an additional prize in the money, or re-entry classification match, were won by W. A. Searles and L. Baird, who tied. This being shot off gave Searles the gold sleeve buttons and Baird those of silver. The scores in this final club match were:

Club championship, diamond medal race, 25 birds shot at—Hauer 18, Hodapp 17, Webb 22, Reed 17, Juster 19, Ireland 20, Wattles 19, Collier 20, Baird 20, Searles 19, Leavell 22, Hutton 7, Fish 15, Woods 8, B. S. Wattles 14, Chick 19.

In the re-entry or money race, in different classes shooting at 25 birds under distance handicap and also thrown in 15 singles and 5 pairs, the following scores resulted—First class, Webb, 22 yards, broke 20; Ireland 18-17, Saird 18-24, Leavell 19-19. Baird's excellent score won first money, $6. Second class, Hauer, 20 yards, broke 19; Hodapp 18-23, Reed 18-20, Juster 18-11; Searles 18-22. Hodapp having highest score in this class took second money, $4.50. Third class, Fish being alone in this class took third class money, $3.

Special handicap gun race, 20 birds shot at in 10 singles and 5 pairs. The shooters were placed at different distances between the 16 and 22 yard marks. Those that completed the score for the season ranged within 25 birds out of a possible 100 shot at, showing the distance handicap system, as practiced by the club, to be as near perfect as possible. A. S. Webb finished first, with 78 breaks out of a possible 100 shot at, shooting from the 22 yard mark. J. B. Hauer was second with 77 to his credit from the 20 yard mark, W. A. Searles broke 76 from the 18 yard mark, at which point H. B. Swales and R. C. Reed contested with 74 and 75 breaks. A summary of the season's scores shows Webb to be the winner of the gun, with Hauer a close second, winning first pool money and Searles second money.

Jas. P. Sweeney record medal race—A. J. Webb broke all previous records for the season in this event with his great run of 23 breaks. To do this Webb was obliged to shoot five birds from the 16 yard mark and five from 18 yards, and then compelled to shoot doubles from the 20 yard mark, from which stand he annexed another ten straight, obliging him to again retreat two yards more, and continuing on doubles the first pair was broken and the first bird of the second pair, making a complete run of 23 straight under these peculiar conditions, known to this race only. Hauer finished second in this race for the season, with Shaw third, winning the pool money in the match in the order named.

For the day the complete scores in this event were as follows: Hauer 4, second entry 7, third 6; Swales 10, second entry 1, third 2; Webb 23; Reed 1, second 7, third 7, fourth 4; Shaw 0, second 3, third 14, fourth 0; Lea 5.

Ten bird races—Swales 7, Debenham 8, Hoyt 8, 6, 6, 8; Webb 10, 10; Jones 9, 5, 10, 7, 9, 9; Hodapp 7, 8; Shaw 9, 7, 9; Hauer 10; Juster 3, 2, 6; Chick 8, 7, 9, 9; Dr. Hutton 7, 6, 7, 4; Collier 5, 9, 7; Ireland 8, 8; Fish 7; Guyett 3, 5; Reed 8, 8, 8, 7; Baird 7, 9; Wattles 10, 10; Searles 6, 7; Woods 3, 4; Boyce 7.

The Ferndale Gun Club held a blue rock shoot on the 13th inst. X. L. Davis won the club diamond medal, W. O. Davis captured the leather medal.

This was the club's initial shoot on the new club grounds. President Frank G. Williams was master of ceremonies and looked after the comfort and interests of shooters and visitors with enthusiasm and tact. The second best score of the day was made by Harry Kelly, 23 out of 25. The Ferndale shooters are taking much interest in the sport. Most of the club members are expert trap and wing shots. Thos. L. Lewis, of this city, was present and participated in the various events. The scores made were the following:

The program for the Avalon trap shoot, Santa Catalina island, on July 25th and 26th, has been completed by Mr. O. O. Orr and is announced as follows:

For the first day: Fifteen singles, $1.50, $10 added money; 20 singles, $2, $12.50 added money; 15 singles, $1.50, $10 added money; 20 singles, $2, $12.50 added money; 15 singles, $1.50, $10 added money; miss and out, $1.50, $15 added money.

Shooting Friday afternoon will begin at 2 o'clock. Saturday's blue rock smashing will start at 9 o'clock, and the program will open with two 15 bird events, entrance $1.50, and $10 added money. The third event will be the Tufts-Lyon medal, 50 birds, entrance $1, under the usual rules. Event 4 is at 20 singles, entrance $2, and added money $12.50. The Hotel Metropole trophy at 25 birds, entrance $2.50, will next be shot off. The winner receives $10 cash and his name is engraved on the trophy; all other contestants receive 8 cents for each bird they break. Event 8 is another 20 bird contest, and it is followed by two 15 bird events with the usual entrance and added money. The last is a consolation, miss and out, entrance $1 and added money $10. It is open to all shooters who have entered all previous events and averaged less than 80 per cent.

The division of money will be as stated, 8 cents for each bird on the pool, and the added money will be cut up class shooting, 50, 30 and 20%. There is a special prize of $7.50 for high average, $5 for second and $2.50 for third. Targets will be thrown for 2 cents each. Three traps, Sargent system, revised A. S. A. rules, and the usual barring of ten gauge guns and black powder will prevail. The shooting of a second bird will be allowed strictly as specified in the American Shooting Association rules, and at no other times. The local clubs have heretofore been very liberal in this regard. The inducements for southern trap shots to shoot are excellent, and a large turnout of shooters is expected to go to the island in attendance

High Prices for Beef Cattle.

The following review of high prices paid for cattle, sheep and hogs, covering several years, will be found interesting history to all who are in any degree associated with the live stock business. The Breeders Gazette says:

On Wednesday, June 11th, a bunch of 22 native steers, high grade Shorthorns, sold in the Chicago market for $8 per cwt. This is the highest price paid in the regular market since the "cattle famine" year of 1882, when $9.30 was paid in June. On the same day best heavy swine sold at $7.65, best sheep at $5.75 and Colorado woolled lambs at $7.15—prices that all show a big advance over those paid on the same day of 1901. The $8 cattle were shipped in by J. W. Lee, Henry county, Iowa, and were the pick of a consignment numbering 83 head. Thirty-four sold at $7.70 and a carload of yearlings at $7.65, which stands as the best price paid in a general way for steers of the age and weight—1061 pounds.

Taking into consideration all the cattle that have been sold in carloads in the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, the tip-top limit of price ever reached was $15.50, paid in December, 1901, for the Kerrick Angus steers that won the championship at the International. This is the record. Leaving these and other show steers out of the consideration the cattle sold June 2, 1882, at $9.30 per cwt. stand at the head of the price list. The best for straight Texans is $7, paid last Tuesday, though some of the Texas show steers have brought more money. In 1882 Texans brought $6.80 and Western rangers made up to $6.50. Most dealers think that the prime Montana grass steers that are well graded will bring more money this summer. In September, 1882, following the partial failure of the corn crop in 1881, best heavy hogs sold for $9.35 per cwt., and in April of that same year best wethers sold for $3. The highest for sheep thus far this year is $6.50, for swine $7.65 and for cattle $8.

Average prices, however, tell something more of this story than the figures for the tops on sale. In 1882 the average for native beef cattle was $6.25; for Texas cattle, $4.65; for Western rangers, $4.75; for heavy hogs, $7.65, and for native sheep, $4.80. The lowest yearly average price for native beef cattle came in 1889, when it was only $3.90; in 1880 and 1889 the average for Texas cattle was $2.95; for Western rangers the price level for the entire receipts was but $3.05 in 1887 and 1879 it was five cents more. In 1896 heavy hogs averaged only $3.40, and in 1878 and 1897, $3.65, while in 1894 native sheep averaged $2.80, and in 1896, $3.20.

In London, England, June 10th, American steers sold for 16½ cents the pound, the high point in about twenty years, and the British papers freely state that with a shortage in the beef supply in both England and Scotland, the prospects are for a "much higher range of prices" than at present exists. The general opinion seems to be over there that little relief may be expected from the United States, the unparalleled demand here being abundantly sufficient to absorb all offerings. It is considered probable that a good many range steers and cows will be exported as soon as the Montana and Wyoming droves begin to come to market.

Baby Beef for Market.

There was never a more promising time for the farmer or cattle grower to engage in raising the right kind of beef for market, and the man who has the patience and wisdom to look ahead a few months will realize good profits. Beef and cattle are not going to be much lower for several years, for the supply cannot keep pace with the growth of our population until our ranges are stocked more thoroughly. We have fallen behind in stock raising, while population has enormously gained on us. We are just realizing this, and either people must stop eating meat or be willing to pay more for it than in the past.

There are special opportunities for the man who can raise baby beef for market. This is the fancy beef which the best trade demands, and this trade is less affected by rising prices than the cheaper trade. People with plenty of money in our cities will continue eating beef as before, but they will demand a sweet, tender, juicy beef. This comes from the young calf which is raised and fed for the beef market at once, and which is sold within a year or a year and a half. The beef of such an animal is so much superior to that found on a steer which has been in existence for several years, and has grown hardened and toughened to a rough life on the range, as the meat of a spring chicken is better than that of an old rooster. The baby beef, as it is called, is the kind of meat in demand in all large city markets, and it commands the fancy prices. The tough range steers that have been fattened a little toward the end of their lives have no show in competition with this.

Baby beef can be raised cheaper than tough steer meat because the fattening and growing process is begun when the calf is first born, and it is kept up rapidly until the animal is ready for market. It is during this early period of growth when the increase in weight is steady and equal. Every pound of food is well paid for, and it makes a very large percentage of increase in weight. Even with the prices the same there would be more profit in raising beef in this way than in keeping a steer several years, but with the much higher prices the profits are a good deal more satisfactory.

Sheep Notes.

It is claimed that two teaspoonfuls of turpentine in five times that much milk every four or five days will cure paper skin in lambs.

On many farms sheep should be looked upon as auxiliaries in keeping up the fertility of the land rather than one direct source of profit.

Wool is the farm product which brings the most money in proportion to what it takes from the farm and with least labor to the producer.

Sheep eat so many different kinds of plants which cattle and horses refuse that the addition of sheep by keeping down those plants which other stock refuse really increases the product of the pastures.

While America can lay claim to having developed the most remarkable breed of wool sheep that the world has ever known, we must yield the palm to England for having produced the most remarkable types of mutton sheep. The Englishman is a natural born shepherd; he loves his flock and no amount of discouragement or low prices, of disease or death can destroy his preference for his flocks. The history of the development of these breeds of mutton sheep show plainly that sheep require especial and continuous persevering care to secure from them high class mutton. Sheep require not only special care, but the different breeds of sheep require care that is peculiar to each type of animals, and we find the English shepherd specially efficient in giving these particular types of sheep the attention required. More mutton is consumed per capita in England than elsewhere, and the chief profit from sheep husbandry arises from the sale of mutton. We find, therefore, the English breeder to have succeeded in developing the mutton type of sheep to the greatest perfection and comparatively little attention has been paid to wool.—From report Missouri State Board of Agriculture.

Various Crops for Pigs.

Corn planted a little thicker than one would for grain and then fed out, stalk and corn together, without husking, is getting to be a popular crop in many sections, says T. B. Terry in Practical Farmer. They call this fodder corn. It has been spoken of as corn hay. There are many places where grass does not do very well, where the hay crop is not large per acre, and still the land will grow large crops of corn. Corn hay is an important crop in these sections. Why? Because one can easily grow two or three times as many tons of dry feed per acre as he would get from grass land. Now the corn binder has come into general use it will have nearly as much feeding value as a ton made from grass. In many cases there will certainly be a large gain by growing corn hay, particularly on land where grass does not do very well on account of the character of the soil and because dry weather often prevails. Corn will stand dry weather better than grass.

The Rocky Mountain Husbandman says that while the large flock is here and here to stay and while wool growing may continue to be the permanent industry of large operators, we are gradually nearing an era when the man who owns less than a section of land will have to build barns and silos, grow alfalfa and raise lambs for market. Ten years hence will probably see moderate owners with ample provisions for feed and sheds, lambing in mid-winter and making good money out of flocks not exceeding four or five hundred head. When that day shall dawn we will in all probability see these flocks confined strictly to pure mutton breeds. The wool clip will be heavier than is now secured and the lamb at from six to nine months old will bring more money than the three year old wether does now. We may also expect to see sheep kept in enclosures fenced with six-foot woven wire, fences that will be practically wolf and dog proof in the day time at least, as the small owner will not be able to employ a herder.

BETTING.

BOOKBETTING on harness races is being discussed pro and con by turf journals and race track associations. Last spring nearly every association that will give a district fair and race meeting in this State this year announced that while books might be permitted on running events, auctions and mutuals would be the only betting methods permitted on harness races at their meetings. San Jose tried the auction and mutual plans, but there was not a book bet and no money was made. The association therefore for this privilege. While we do not think San Jose furnished a fair test as to the popularity of the system, as there was but one actual race each day, and no attendance to speak of except on the 4th of July, when not a program could be obtained on the grounds, or even a blackboard utilized for announcements, there are many who believe that the auction and mutuals will not be very largely patronized in California this year. If they are not, there is still no reason why any district or other organization should permit the betting privilege to go to a syndicate, and this is beyond doubt the greatest source of corruption on a race track. Of course, there are bookmakers and bookmakers. There are men engaged in the business of bookmaking who are as fair and upright in making books as is any business man in the conduct of his business, but there are others who only bid on the privilege because they think it is a sure way of getting the public's coin without taking any chance of losing their own. If the betting scheme could be conducted here as it is on the Eastern trotting tracks, where an independent auction box makes the odds on the result, and several bookies offer odds on the heats, the evil would not be so manifest, but the general rule has been in California to grant the exclusive privilege to one man or firm, which will absolutely refuse to accept a wager if they think the horse backed has a fair chance to win. When the owner or trainer is thus absolutely prevented from earning any money on his horse by means of a wager, he is strongly tempted to play another horse and help shoo him in. This is just as dishonest as the tactics of the bookmakers, but there is some little excuse for it.

Murray Howe, the very efficient manager of the Memphis track, was in Boston recently and in an interview in regard to heat betting and the laying up of heats, said:

"It is certainly right that only a very small part of the evil of laying up heats can be attributed to heat betting.

"All the money the boys get out of the books through the practice of laying up heats can be put in a very small vest pocket.

"In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the heats are laid up to better the odds in the auctions or to rest one good horse while a couple of horses are trying their best to get tired.

"It seems to me a very unwise thing to do away with the books. This form of betting is entirely too popular to warrant any association to try to do without it.

"I cannot see why the plan of shortening the races to a point that will make it too risky for anyone to lay up a heat, that few, if any, will try it, is not the best plan. Under this plan the evil mentioned becomes so insignificant that it is easily handled by a competent judge's stand.

"It was tried last year at Memphis, and under it there were more books than were ever seen on a trotting track before.

"This year I have shortened my races and intend to add a few dash events to the regular card later. I believe that the racing will be fully as clean, if not cleaner, than will be seen anywhere else on the circuit, and this, in spite of the fact that from fifteen to twenty per cent of the bets are on the dash races.

"The present popularity of thoroughbred racing has been a great help to the dash races.

The statement here made by Mr. Howe, that from the Memphis betting privilege was in the hands of one bookmaker, as has been the custom in California, and the refusal of bets as low as $10 at any odds on a favorite, he would not be surprised to see the betting ring in the near future.

Several California bred horses were at the meeting given by the St. Paul Driving Club during the second week in this month, and their luck was varied. J. M. Nelson started Richard S. full brother to Clay S. 2:13 in the 2:15 class trot, where he finished 5-3, getting fourth money, the time being 2:21 and 2:20. In the 2:10 class pace the Diablo mare Diodene won easily in 2:11 and 2:12. Goshen Jim got fourth money in this event and Tags was outside the money.

On Wednesday the Californians had bad luck. P. Foley's mare Lady Grannard, by McKiney, caught the flag in the first heat of the 2:21 trot.

In the 2:35 pace, Stipulator, the black stallion by Titus (full brother to Direct 2:05) out of the dam of Coney 2:02, drew the pole, but had the misfortune to pull a shoe and was distanced. Dr. Hammond by Chas. Derby was in this race but made a break and was also distanced in the first heat.

On the last day of the meeting Anselita, a daughter of Dexter Prince met the red flag as she was coming down the stretch. In the 2:22 class pace there were nine starters, Angus Oh So won in 2:14 and 2:12, and Will Welch got second money with Uncle John by Chas. Derby. Nelson started China Maid in this race but after finishing last the first heat, was behind the flag in the next.

In nearly every case where race horses are shipped from one point to another, a low valuation is paid on them so as to secure low rates of transportation. An Eastern court decided last year that in case of injury to horses thus billed the owner was entitled to recover a fair valuation on the animal if the accident was owing to negligence on the part of the transportation company. Last Monday, however, Judge Beatty, of the Supreme Court of California, decided that John F. Schorr, the horseman, was entitled to collect only $600 from the Wells-Fargo Company for injuries to eight race horses shipped to Oakland from Salt Lake. The suit was to recover $21,000, value of the race horse Brodie and seven other animals. The court held that as Schorr obtained a low rate of transportation by valuing the horses at $600, that that amount was all he could recover. Those who ship horses on the California circuit this year should make a note of this.

Andy McDowell has left New York for Moscow, Russia, to identify the horse Oslund L. 2:16, that the Russian authorities believe is being raced out of his class over there by a wealthy subject of the Czar. There was a lot of money spent for telegraphing between here and New York before Andy got his passport, but expense don't count when the Russians are after a ringer. Andy purchased this horse from Geo. Sherwood, of Minnesota, three or four years ago for $3000 and after racing some, sold Oslund L. to Schlesinger & Co., of Vienna, who shipped him across the big pond, and, it is said, sold him to Russian parties. The Russian Government believes this horse has been started out of his class in races for Russian bred horses. They telegraphed to Secretary Gocher to send Andy over to identify the animal, and the great reinsman said he could not afford to go, as he was engaged at a yearly salary. The reply came back to Gocher that Andy would be paid the amount of the salary and all his expenses if he would make the trip. Andy said, "You bet your lifeski I will be there." Then trouble arose about his passport. It was absolutely necessary that he have a copy of his naturalization papers, and so Andy thought as the last time he voted was at Pleasanton, Cal., the papers must be on file in an Alameda county court. So Secretary F. W. Kelley was wired to get a certified copy and mail immediately. Mr. Kelley found they were not in Alameda county, but that the records showed that Andy is a native of Ireland, naturalized at Rochester, New York. So he telegraphed these facts to Gocher, the latter sent to Rochester and secured a certified copy of the papers, and Andy has gone to identify Oslund L. and believes he could do so in a dark box stall at midnight without a light. It was rather amusing that Andy should forget where he was naturalized, but he was doubtless thinking more of horses than anything else at the time, and the papers show—

"That he might have been a Russian,
A French, a Turk or a Prussian,
Or perhaps Eye Italian,
But he found it no temptation
To serve the English nation,
And is now American."

Every person that knows Sam—excuse me, Stam B. Excel Gamble, is fully acquainted with the fact that he is a firm believer in the 13 hoodoo, and can relate innumerable instances of its effectiveness. He sat in my den the day the Blue Ribbon Detroit meeting opened and while reading a list of entries for the M. & M. suddenly looked up and said:

"That settles it; something will happen in the M. & M. to-morrow to a moral certainty. I have thought all along that the Zombro filly Zephyr would win that race, but she took the unlucky record of 2:13 the other day and now I see there are just thirteen horses named for the race. It's too bad, but it can't be helped." I smiled audibly at Mr. Gamble's remark and thought no more of it. Everyone knows about the race now. Zephyr went lame and had to be drawn before the start although she was a big favorite. I am not a believer in signs, omens, dreams or predictions, but when Mr. Gamble came in a few days later and said: "How about that thirteen hoodoo now?" I had to acknowledge that it had worked in this case, and did not have the temerity to even suggest that thirteen may have been a mascot for Rhythmic.

Sandy Smith is working eight head of horses at Aptos Stock Farm for Mr. A. B. Spreckels and writes that he has as fine a lot of young horses for sale as were ever offered in California. They are not afraid of anything, cars, automobiles or bicycles. Sandy received a letter from Vance Nuckols the other day in which he said he drove the sorrel mare by Dexter Prince out of Point Lace (sold for $2275 at the last Blue Ribbon sale) a mile in 2:18, last quarter in 32 seconds, and will now turn her out for the summer. Sandy is working a two year old full brother to this mare that looks just like her and moves like a trotter. He is also working Cronje, the colt by Cupid out of Hulda and says he is going good and will be a fast trotter before the rainy season begins.

Dan Patch won his race at Cleveland last Wednesday as easily as he won any of his races last year. Riley B. made him pace in 2:03 to win the first heat but the telegraph states that it did not seem to tire him in the least. Mr. B. O. Van Bokkelen of San Jose, who was East last year, was in the B. & S. office last Thursday morning and speaking of Dan Patch he said: "He is the greatest race horse I ever saw. It never seemed to make any difference to him how fast the clip was, he had plenty of reserve and at the end of the heat or race showed no evidence of distress. He made a hard campaign, but came out at the close, a big, round bodied stallion that looked like one ready to begin a breeding season. He has more class than any pacer racing and likes to race—never having to be driven. He will go the front on his own courage."

A friend who owns a pacer that is entered for the California circuit this year told me last Monday that his horse had a suspicious leg that was feverish and he was afraid he would break down before the races began. I asked why he did not let up on him entirely for a week or so and he said he suggested that to the trainer, but the latter said it would never do, as he was entered at the Vallejo meeting, which opens August 11th; and if he didn't keep him at work he would not be fit to race. This is a very prevalent idea among many trainers, but I would rather take a horse short of work, but with four good legs, into a race than to have one keyed up to the hour, but with legs at the breaking down point. There are plenty of instances where horses have gone the best races of their career when they had been given a week's rest just before. It often happens over East that rain keeps all the horses in the barn for several days and when it clears up some dicky legged fellow comes out and walks off with first money. There are very many horses of not robust constitution, but endowed with great speed, that are killed off by trainers trying to work them for the speed which they already have. If a prize fighter, that can talk and explain all his pains and soreness and tired feelings during his work can be overtrained, how much more likely is a poor dumb brute of a horse to get in the same condition? It would be a very safe wager that at least two-thirds of the horses that fail to win money on the circuit this year, being beaten in slower time than they have shown in their work, have lost their speed or their soundness by getting too many miles at speed. If trainers were more content to go slowly at the start and not ask a horse for all that he can do until the money is up, there would be more sound horses at the races, and fewer disgusted owners.

Answers to Correspondents.

J. J. M., Visalia—Will you kindly let me know the breeding of Prompter 2305; also if he was a success as a producer, and the names of a few of his get and their marks. Do you know if he sired a colt called Fligo? If so, what was his breeding on the side of his dam?

Answer—Prompter 2305 is by Blue Bull 75, dam the pacing mare Prairie Bird 2:28 (dam of Flight 2:29 and grandam of Fleet 2:18, Fleet Boy 2:24, Matilda N. 2:25, Sid Fleet 2:26 and Vigny 2:26), second dam Fashion by John Baptist, third dam Fanny Fern by Irwin's Tuckaboe, fourth dam a daughter of Leffler's Consul. Prompter is the sire of Apex 2:26, Lucky B. 2:20, Transit 2:26, Creole 2:15 and Walker 2:23. His son Creole 2:15 sired Javelin 2:08, and is a full brother to Ripple, grandam of Sir Albert S. 2:08. Prompter's daughters have produced Shecam 2:12, Gratt 2:16, Brilliantine 2:17, Promise 2:16, McGrattan 2:23 and Rippling 2:25. Fligo is not registered and we have no record of her breeding.

Like all good things, Jackson's Napa Soda has a dozen counterfeits. Watch out!

Dolly Dillon is playing in luck so far as entrance money is concerned. At her Detroit appearance there were but two starters and she got second money; at Cleveland this week there were but three starters in her race and she got third money.

That Cleveland's trotting idol, John A. McKerron, is rapidly getting into great form was evident by a mile in 2:11½, which he showed Mr. Devereux Wednesday morning. In order to win the Boston Cup it will take a sure 2:06 trotter to beat him.—American Sportsman, July 17.

Geo. T. Beckers, acting for T. C. Condon of Portland, has purchased from Jos. Desmond of Los Angeles, the five year old stallion Lord Kitchener, by Zombro, out of Sarah Benton, by Albion, son of Gen. Benton, and has substituted him for Zombro C., in the stake races on the North Pacific circuit.

Secretary Van De Vanter, of Seattle, writes that their stake and purse races have all filled with a very nice lot of entries. The Seattle Derby has 20 entries, Ladies' Plate 26. In the harness events the 2:10 pace has five entries; 2:20 pace, five; 2:27 pace, seven; free-for-all trot, six; 2:15 trot, five; 2:20 trot, eight. The buildings on the new track are nearing completion, and they will soon have the finest and best equipped fair grounds in the Northwest.

Marysville's good program should secure a good list of entries. Next Saturday, August 2d, is the date of closing. There are five purses of $500 each, three of $400, open to all horses, besides purses for district horses. Marysville has an excellent track and horses can be shipped from there to Woodland or the State Fair at small expense.

Geo. Ketcham last Saturday shipped the champion, Cresceus, Aldine Medium 2:15½. The General and Pegasus 2:17½, which will constitute his string this year, to the Glenville track in Cleveland. Cresceus has had little work this season, and Ketcham will use the Glenville track in preparing him for attempts upon the two-minute record.

Don't let next Saturday pass without making entries in the big nomination purses offered by the California State Agricultural Society. There are six that are worth from $1000 to $1200 each, three of them for trotters and three for pacers. There is also a $500 stake for three year old pacers and a special race for amateur drivers. See the advertisement.

Trainer Foote, who brought out John Nolan 2:08 and Rirma 2:09½, showed a good green trotter at the Windsor meeting in the bay gelding Baron de Shay by Oakland Baron, which won the 2:30 trot, taking a record of 2:12½. Baron de Shay was a starter in the M. & M., but was shut out in the first heat, but he won the M. & M. Consolation in straight heats.

The half-mile track record of Iowa is 2:10, and was made by the black gelding William Mac, at Waterloo, that State, on the 10th inst., in the second heat of a race which he won. William Mac is nine years old this season. His record is 2:05½, made in 1899. He was got by Alcyon, whose sire was Alcyon 2:27, and whose dam was Katie Jackson 2:25½, by Almont 33.

When the continued rain compelled the Detroit management to declare the remainder of its purses off after three days' racing had been held, there was one stake remaining to be decided. This was the M. & M. Consolation Stake of $200. But three horses showed up to contest for it and Baron de Shay won in straight heats, the time being 2:15½ and 2:15½. Ted and Wentworth were the other starters.

During a severe thunder storm which occurred on the 5th inst., Village Farm lost one of its highest bred broodmares, and a filly by her sides by Chimes, both being struck by lightning and instantly killed. Ales, the mare referred to, was sired by Alcantara, dam Helen by Dreadnaught, son of Fearnought 132, second dam Hecla by Daniel Lambert 102. Ales was the dam of Helen Smith by Dare Devil and Trinity Bells by Chimes.

Stockton's entries close next Friday, August 1st. No horseman should leave Stockton out of his itinerary this year. There is a $1000 stake for 2:24 class trotters, a $1000 stake for 2:20 class pacers and eight purses of $500 each for other classes. In the five hundred dollar purses two horses can be named in any class and the owner held for but one entry, naming the horse he desires to start at five o'clock the day before the race. This should secure a big entry list, as an owner will have two chances at getting a starter.

While everyone knew that Dave McClary had a good horse in Joe Pointer, few thought that the big son of Star Pointer was anything like the horse that he showed himself to be, in his winning race at Dover last Wednesday. The second heat was paced in 2:09½, which is very fast for the Dover track. That he is a sure 2:05 pacer seems certain. Joe Pointer is a better bodied horse, and also has a better set of limbs under him than has Star Pointer, and McClary says that he is very nearly if not quite as fast as his sire. The only drawback is the fact that he wears hoppers.

An amateur was induced to place a ten dollar bet with a bookmaker, and won $25. This pleased him so much that he placed the $25 with the bookmaker on the next heat. He won again. The third heat he played all his roll, amounting to $60 or $70, and lost, whereupon he fell over in a dead faint. His brother, who chanced to be present, ran for a doctor and asked him to make haste, as he imagined his brother was dying. "I am a veterinary surgeon," the doctor said. "You are just the man I am looking for," the man replied excitedly, "as my brother is a jackass."

Sensational time was witnessed at the matinee trotting meeting at Lexington, Ky., last Friday. The two year old event went to Sarah Curran by Dr. Hooker-Fleetwood. The first heat was won in 2:26½, the second in 2:25, the last half in 1:11½. Hattie Smith, driven by Lee Darnaby, won the three year old event. The daughter of Hinder Wilkes was compelled to step a last half in 1:06½, last quarter in 33 seconds, to win the final heat in 2:18. Charles Marvin's black mare, Miss Jennette, won the 2:27 event, the best time being 2:15.

Alfalfa has many friends among horse raisers. A Colorado ranchman living in one of the valleys near Denver says: "For more than fifteen years I have had experience in raising horses from birth to sale, from youth to age, on alfalfa pasture and hay, except maybe giving them some variety in winter, consisting of corn fodder and straw. All animals and men like a variety in diet. I feed no grain except to teams in harness and my horses are noted for their size, strength and beauty. I sold two Percheron colts in March, three and four years old, weighing 1700 and 1800 pounds, that did not know the taste of grain. I have wintered horses from the city, as many as twenty-five at a time, exclusively on alfalfa to the perfect satisfaction of the owners. I have never noticed nor known any injurious effect from well cured, good hay, cut at first bloom."

The Special Speed Committee of the Golden Gate District Fair Association will meet at Pleasanton on Sunday (to-morrow) to act upon the entries received to the harness events which closed last Monday. Nearly all the races advertised will probably be declared filled. The 2:12 pace is one that failed to get a sufficient number of entries, but two horses having been named for it, but the association will probably open a purse for pacers of the free-for-all class and advertise it in the next issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

John Moorhead, who is acting as agent for that sterling remedy, Dr. Smith's Vita Oil, through the East, reports that this great California liniment is meeting with a big sale everywhere, and E. Cotton Smith, the manager of the corporation here in San Francisco, states that orders from the East are being received almost daily as the result of Mr. Moorhead's excellent work. Mr. Moorhead is well known to the horsemen of California, having campaigned Meridian 2:12½, Sybil S. 2:16½ and other good ones on the California circuit.

The blood of the old mare Homora, dam of Fantasy 2:06, seems to be breeding on. At Listowel, Ont., a few days ago Wisdom King, by Homora's son Wisdom, entered the standard list with a record of 2:29½, and at Peoria, Ill., there is a four year old filly by Saint Vincent 2:13½ out of a daughter of Homora, that was sired by Aeriton, son of Stamboul, that is said to be very fast. About the best yearling at Village Farm is out of Homora's great daughter, Fantasy 2:06. He was sired by The Coker, son of Rex Americus, and this season Fantasy has been bred back to that horse. Wisdom is owned by C. J. Fitzgerald, the popular starter on the metropolitan running tracks.

Forty-two horses are named in the 2:11 trot for the October meeting at Memphis, Tenn. Four hundred and twenty-eight entries were received for the ten early closing events, which shows what can be done regardless of the weather by a secretary who knows his business, has a personal acquaintance with, and the confidence of the horsemen throughout the country. Murray Howe advertised the Memphis stakes thoroughly through the turf and daily papers, but he did not depend upon this alone. He used the mails freely, and was in constant correspondence with horsemen in all directions. But that was not enough. He traveled nights, and had personal interviews with owners and trainers daily, and the result was never in doubt. Good secretaries come high, but the best associations find them most profitable.—Palmer Clark.

E. T. Anderson, of West Berkeley, is now the owner of that good little mare Twilight 2:19 by Noonday 10,000. Mr. Anderson purchased Twilight principally to breed to his handsome large four year old, Jim Rankin by Grover Clay, dam Diversion by Figaro, but will probably race her on the California Circuit, starting first at Vallejo. Twilight has shown more speed this year than ever before and should make a good showing in her class. Her sire, Noonday, while having but three in the list, is a wonderfully well bred horse, being by Wedgewood 2:19, son of Belmont 64. The dam of Noonday was the great broodmare Noon-tide 2:20½, grandam of Boreal 2:15½ (sire of Boralma 2:07), Matin Bells 2:06½, etc. The grandam of Noonday was Midnight, dam of Jay Eye See 2:06½, etc., by Pilot Jr., and the next dam, Twilight by Lexington.

An advertiser offers to sell through the columns of this paper, two mares with their colts that should be a profitable investment for some one as they will be sold at a very reasonable price owing to the fact that their owner is compelled to be absent from home indefinitely on account of his health. These mares are Hera 2:20½ and Mabel G., trial 2:26 trotting. Hera was one of the fastest mares ever trained in California. She is by Mambrino Wilkes out of Kitty by Conductor 18779, and her record was made over the Reno track years ago when it was considered four or five seconds slow. She has two colts, one a yearling by Welcome 2:10½, the other a suckling by Monterey 2:09½. Both are entered, and fully paid up in the Breeders $6000 of their respective years, and the suckling is entered in the Hartford Futurity, $10,000 stake. Mabel S., the other mare, is by Brigadier, and has a fine suckling at her side by Chas. Marvin, full brother to Don Lowell. It is entered in the Hartford Futurity also. Here is an opportunity to get some well bred and promising youngsters, well staked. They can be seen any day at the residence of the owner, P. H. Sexton, 1801 Union street, corner 26th street, Oakland.

Mr. John M. Chestnut of Wayne, Pennsylvania, is a chestnut in name only, and the following story of him taken from a Philadelphia paper will be read with pleasure and satisfaction by road drivers generally: "At the point of a pistol held by John M. Chestnut, two occupants of an automobile humbly apologized for causing his team to run away, and promised to hereafter have some decent regard for the rights of horsemen and pedestrians. Mr. Chestnut lives at Wayne, and drives mettlesome horses round about the neighboring country when not traveling in Europe. The antics of the numerous auto drivers who frequent the good roads near his country place have long been an annoyance to him, and finally he armed himself for the purpose of stopping the first one that made him any serious trouble. The trouble arrived yesterday, when Mr. Chestnut was driving near Strafford. He shouted to the occupants of the autocar, who gave him the merry laugh and increased the speed of their machine. "Stop or I'll fire!" shouted the irate horseman. One of the men in the autocar turned and saw the barrel of a revolver on a line with his head. "Stop! He's got a gun," he cried, and the driver stopped instantly. Both men stepped out of the autocar and abjectly apologized for their foolishness. Mr. Chestnut says there will be no racing past him, at least not until after August 1st, when he sails for Europe."

Harness Horse Items From Los Angeles.

HOTEL ROSSLYN, Cal., July 21, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Permit me to congratulate you on the value of your paper as an advertising medium. Two weeks ago I advertised for sale a mare by Hambletonian Wilkes, dam La Belle, dam of Robert J. 2:20½ and La Belle 2:16. I received inquiries from Chicago, San Francisco and also from Los Angeles. While I did not sell my mare, I had offers. I certainly found that if you want to sell a horse you must do a few things; first find the horse, then get speed, good manners, good looks, then a liberal dose of printer's ink, and buyers will turn up. Of course we don't always sell, but it is a most convincing proof that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is a good selling medium.

The trainers at Los Angeles track are all putting finishing touches on their various charges, also getting their personal wardrobes ready to sally forth and win races.

I met Walter Maben to-day on Spring street coming out of Desmond's store with a complete new regalia, and I predict Walter will surely be the Beau Brummell of the training brigade from this section. Of course, every one knows Walter is a good-looking man. The Zombro filly that he is training for the Occident Stake is sweet enough to make any live man swell up a bit, and just right here let me say that if Durfee and his diminutive son of McKinney and the fleet-footed daughter of Gossiper that Durfee calls Cuete wins the Occident from Walter, Durfee will first have to "loquo" Walter and this bay daughter of Zombro. Of course this is with apologies to Confianza, the Denver filly that is so well touted for the Occident. Let me also predict that this year's Occident will be the fastest ever trotted. Now, let some one get a Stockton hammer and knock me.

Walter sold Lord Kitchener by Zombro for a long pricelast week. Sale made through George T. Beckers, owner of Zombro. This colt in thirty days of Maben's work trotted a mile in 2:20½. Lord Kitchener goes north to race in Oregon.

Cornelius D. by McKinney is going good and fast. He will start in the green classes and will carry the green colors of Joe Desmond. Joe is called a prince by his friends in Los Angeles. I put the boys on to a bit of Irish history last week that Joe is one of the last of the race of Irish kings; he is a direct descendant of Brian Borrough, the King of Munster. We hope that Cornelius D. will add additional fame and fortune to the house of Desmond, for Joe is surely the prince of Los Angeles good fellows.

Last week I. C. Moshier, the webfoot veteran, sold Red Skin, a green trotter by Red Wilkes to James Mooney for Steve Bailey of Seattle, Washington, for $1000. This gelding was no account until the old veteran took him in hand, and it took him just sixty days to trot three times in 2:16, 2:16½ and 2:17. He is a good actor, good looker and sound, and he surely goes to a dead game owner; one that will bet his coin with no limit but the blue sky.

P. W. Hodges has about fifteen head of young stock that he is preparing for next year.

Sam Washington is putting the finishing touches on the Advertiser gelding. We hope Sam and his pacer will keep the memory of Palo Alto green in California this year with valiant deeds of speed and winnings. We believe he will make good.

Vet Kent is training a young stallion by Conifer by Lord Russell, and this young trotter does credit to his royally bred sire. He has been miles in 2:20, with less than ninety days' work. Of course this horse has three great benefits to go on: first, a royal bred sire; second, he is a perfect individual; third, he has fallen into the hands of one of the most careful and best speed making trainers I ever saw.

I find all the Los Angeles purses are being put in saying that every horseman who has made an entry at Los Angeles will be highly satisfied. That the management intend to and will give the best meeting ever held in Los Angeles and the attendance will be the biggest. Los Angeles never was as prosperous as it is to-day, and the best people of Los Angeles own and drive fine horses and are interested in the sport that can truly be called the sport of kings and queens also. In Los Angeles we hope to see such stars as Bonnie Direct, My Direct and I Direct, as a race between these handsome, fast and game sons of Direct would surely attract many thousand people.

By the way, I intend to start a little trotter in a few races here. Please tell the boys to remember those tender lines from "Rubiya" where he says, "Gently, brother, gently," when they see me, as I presume I will need sympathy.

My old friend Johnny Donohue, otherwise known as "Whispering Johnny" is here training a fast two year old mare by Zolock. This big black mare can trot a quarter in 36 seconds and no one knows how much faster as Johnny is a cute trainer. 'Twas he who brought out Midnight—the big black pacer last year; 'twas he who sat on the fence and watched his son, Johnny, Jr., lay up some three or four heats till Farmer Bunch and a few other bright lights got like David Harum's friend's calf, not dead, but just gin out. Then Johnny's boy got his orders to go on and win with Midnight which he did in hollow style.

Johnny is also training a very fine blind filly by Jud Wilkes, dam Betsy by Mambrino Patchen. Johnny got this filly in a trade. His opponent in the trade told Johnny she did not "look" well, so the trade was made without Johnny seeing the Jud Wilkes filly. When he went to get her he discovered she was blind, and true he did kick a bit, but when informed that he was told by the former owner that she did not look well, he took her home. Now since a blind trotter won the M. & M., Johnny's filly is in the swim. She too may be an M. & M. winner. She is bred and gaited to do it. We hope she will, even though like Rythmic, she don't look well. Yours truly,

C. A. HARRISON.

Who Knows This Horse?

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., July 19, 1902.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: Enclosed please find copy of letter sent from old time friends of mine residing at Charles City, Iowa. It rather looks as if the citizens of that state might get a small piece of the same goods that we got. But there was always one thing about Walter K.'s adventure over here that seemed a soothing balm to our crippled exchequer, and that was he had to earn his money; in one race six heats were paced and Walter earned a record of 2:08. The average ringer hunts up softer snaps than that, in fact, they don't prey on the honest men of this Coast often; very seldom has a ringer from the East had speed enough to beat our slower classes. When all the slower class are trotted below 2:20 and paced in 2:12 to 2:17, its pretty poor picking for frauds. If you can do anything to elucidate the subject referred to, please do it. Yours truly,

E. J. GILBERT.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, July 9, 1902.

FRIEND GILBERT: We write you for information regarding a trotting horse that we think is a ringer. He was shipped here from your state one or two years ago by a party by the name of Moore, the man that rung Walter K. through California. He also enjoys the reputation of having rung Roy the Kid last year. The horse that I would like to have you ferret out is a bay gelding, black legs, mane, and tail, with white strip in face, about 12 years old. He is rather on the blocky build and will weigh between ten and eleven hundred pounds and can trot heats in 2:10 to 2:15 any day. He is entered in our class and if he does not belong in it we would like to get rid of him. Westart at Hamline, Minn., this week, after which we ship for Detroit and trot in the 22 class. Iowa has had fourteen inches of rain in the months of May and June and our training is behind. Yours Respectfully,

WALLER BROS.

The Farmington Sale.

The closing out sale of the horses belonging to Lafayette Funk, Esq., of Farmington, will take place at his farm on Tuesday next, Mr. William G. Layng being the auctioneer. The catalogue of the sale just issued lists 63 head of trotting bred horses and in addition there will be sold a number of fine work horses and mules. Among the standard bred animals we noted that good race mare Lizzie F. 2:16½, of which the catalogue says: "She is a bay mare, 16.1 hands, foaled 1887. Sire Richards Elector (son of Electioneer), sire of 18 in 2:30 list, dam Lady Mac by Duke McClellan (brother to Dan Voorhies 2:23) by Gen. McClellan 144; second dam Mattie Howard, the fastest twenty-mile mare in the world. Her record made in 1871 stands unequalled to-day. Lizzie F. is like a four year old. She is free from blemishes and perfect in every way. She is the finest driving mare in California, does not pull on the bit and a lady can drive her anywhere. She has all her speed and inside of sixty days she could, if handled, lower her record. When racing she was the best in her class. As a four year old out of 17 races she won 14 and in one race there was over $19,000 deposited in the pool box and she won the fifth heat and race."

The majority of the horses to be sold are by Lottery Ticket 2:19½, son of Dexter Prince out of Emma Nutwood, dam of two in the list, by Nutwood 600. Lottery Ticket is a handsome horse and has worked miles in 2:14. Mr. Funk raced but one year on the circuit, and circumstances preventing continuance he did not develop his colts, although he continued breeding, and in this sale will be found many good looking, sound, well-broke animals, that are good gaited and stylish and only need development to show great speed.

We have second hand speed carts and sulkies at right prices. Call in time—they are bargains. Sulkies converted on short notice. Sulky and cart wheels made to order. Coast agents for McMurray. Large stock on hand. Kenney Manufacturing Co., 531 Valencia street.

Another Story of Rythmic.

Many are the stories printed nowadays about the winner of the M. & M. The following is by Allen Lowe, of the New York Telegraph:

"A point in connection with the win of Rythmic in the classic Merchants & Manufacturers' Stake at Detroit, seems to have been overlooked by everybody.

Rythmic is owned by the Turner Brothers, who are well known to the running horsemen of New York. They brought out Tillo, a Suburban winner. They were also responsible for the appearance of Peat, the old sprinter which, after being raced by Pittsburgh Phil, again lapsed into their hands, and is now racing out in Chicago. They owned Burlington Route, and it seems to me they were interested in Kinley Mack.

They have never been interested in the light harness horse, Rythmic being the only trotter I have ever heard their name in connection with.

Rythmic contracted a bad case of pink eyes as a two year old, and lost the sight of both eyes. He was turned out and taken up last year, more in the nature of an experiment than with any fixed idea of his having any racing value.

He developed an immense turn of speed and stepped a mile in 2:10, on a track which is not counted as having any great speed-giving qualities. Like some other blind horses, Rythmic was afraid of being hurt, and it was a grave question whether he would race or not. He was hard to control on this account, and took a stout hold of the bit.

Scott Hudson thought he would race, and was perfectly willing to take the chance of steering him in company. That his judgment was correct, was shown by the fact that he outclassed his lot so thoroughly that there was simply nothing to the race. He went out around the field the first heat, and had room to burn after the word was given.

There is an inside piece of history connected with the race that has not been touched. E. E. Smathers, who has developed such a fancy for the harness horses, and who is counted the best bettor that ever was seen on the line, wanted to bet a ton of money on Zephyr, the California filly, that has been touted as a world beater.

He thought that George Spear would give her a better drive than her regular teamster, and made an offer for her control in the stake. This was accepted, but when Zephyr was worked out she developed lameness in the whirlbone. This was when the preliminary auction selling was in progress, so Smathers sent a commission to back Rythmic.

The price against the blind horse was better this way, for when Zephyr's name was stricken off the book it left the field price longer than when it came to the horse selling alone against the field.

The Smathers commission was about $5000, and it cleared up a little better than $11,000 to the race.

J. B. Haggin, owner of the famous Rancho del Paso Thoroughbred Stud in California, has imported another English horse. This is the five year old thoroughbred Galveston by Galopin out of Hampton by Hampton, second dam Feronia by Thormanby. Galopin won the Derby and so did Thormanby, so that the blood of the winners is very close up in Galveston. He is a half-brother to Sempronius imported last year by Eugene Leigh and now standing in Kentucky at McGrathiana. Galveston claims the distinction of having in the July Stakes at Ascot finished ahead of Diamond Jubilee, which won the Derby for King Edward in 1900.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

CONDUCTED BY

WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C. V. C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses, cattle or dogs by sending a plain description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

E. S. McG., Grass Valley—Have a horse troubled with a hard swelling below the shoulder. Something in the nature of a shoe boil. It does not succumb to any treatment we have used on it. Have opened it and drawn off a large quantity of pus, blistered and used a pad to stop him from lying on it, without any success. Would you kindly suggest something through the columns of your paper and oblige.

Answer—If it be a shoe boil, or capped elbow, and is old and hard, removing it with the knife, stitching up the part and treating it with antiseptics is the best treatment. This should be done by a veterinary surgeon or someone who understands the anatomy of the parts that he is cutting into.

In case the horse hurts the swollen part when lying, notwithstanding the protection of the boot, he should be made to stand when in stall and not allowed to lie down, except when running in lot or pasture.

Tincture of iodine applied daily for four or five days, then discontinued for a couple of weeks, and again repeated as before, may benefit it, if it be not convenient to operate on it.

Past, Present and Future of the Horse.

A synopsis of a monograph that has been prepared for the Department of Agriculture by George M. Rommel, B. S. A., on the market classes of horses, which will be of interest to dealers in carriages and harness, showing as it does that the demand for horses is continually increasing, despite the fact that they have been displaced in large numbers by mechanical appliances during the past decade, is as follows:

The growth of the horse market during the last few years, its present healthy tone and the apparent promise of a continuance of these conditions for at least a considerable time to come, warrant the bestowal of time and attention, not only upon the general demands of the market, but also upon rather detailed examinations of the various kinds of horses that are wanted. A general observation of the horse markets in the United States reveals very different conditions from those existing in the early part of the last decade. In this connection three facts present themselves for consideration:

First—The market is seen to be on a much firmer basis than it was in the years from 1893 to 1897. Not only are prices much higher, but, generally speaking, the competition among buyers is keen, and a serviceably sound, well set-up horse of the right type, in good condition, can always be disposed of at a profit to the producer.

Second—One is impressed with the pronounced scarcity of animals of the better grades, especially among light horses. Dealers cannot satisfy the demands that come to them for high class roadsters, coach horses and saddlers. Even among "business horses" a higher price must often be paid than buyers desire, and it is said that this has even led some establishments to send agents into the country to take advantage of the mutual differences between farm and market prices. To a casual observer this is, perhaps, the most striking feature that presents itself. A change from a condition of over-production and panic prices to one of scarcity and strong prices has come about within the course of less than five years.

Third.—Going more into the details of the market, we find a pretty well-defined system of classification. Buyers are on the market to get horses of a certain type, and thus have created "classes."

Going back to the firmness of the market, the causes of the low prices and over-production that preceded it present themselves. The recent depression of the horse business began about 1890. Up to that time immense numbers of animals were in demand for street car use. This trade absorbed many horses that had always constituted the overwhelming majority on the market—the small chunks and the general purpose animals; and with the introduction of the cable car, and, almost immediately after, the sweeping substitution of electric cars for horse cars in nearly all the large cities, these immense numbers of horses were thrown on the market without a demand for them, and the public was suddenly confronted with a condition of extreme over-production. This, however, would only indirectly affect the higher grades. Extra individual horses maintained a fairly good scale of prices, and never at any time were they such a drug on the market as the commoner sorts. The severest test to the market horse was yet to come. Strongly organized conditions might have tided over the effects of over-supply that the falling off of the demand for the street-car horse brought about, but the punishment was to be made all the more complete by the financial panic of 1893.

The general panic that began in that year, but whose influence was felt most severely in the horse-producing sections two years later, was really the most effective cause for the breakdown in the horse market. The cheaper grades fell still lower, and the higher classes began a descent in prices that forced men out of the business and had a most disastrous effect in creating a general distrust of the horse, not only on the part of men who were already engaged in his production, but also with prospective purchasers.

On the heels of the panic came the bicycle, and in a few years the electric carriage followed. The bicycle influenced particularly the demand for cheap drivers—the inferior grades—and naturally intensified the downfall of prices. However, though for a time the growing use of the bicycle brought about a decline in the use of horses, its effect was hardly so severe as appeared; certainly it was not permanent. If the bicycle had seriously affected the horse in any capacity it is by the inroads that liverymen claim it has made on their business. The most effective force for furthering the downfall in prices was simply fright, which brought about an unnecessary unloading of horses on a market already oversupplied. The results after the lapse of a few years, and the adjustment of the bicycle to its proper place as an important economic factor, with the return of the business to normal conditions, give ample reason for such opinions.

Experience with automobiles has shown that in their present state of development their effect on the horse market is not serious. For business purposes, they have not yet been found to be entirely satisfactory, whereas the bicycle has become an invaluable adjunct of business. At present the "auto" is the least dangerous of all the deterring influences that operate against the horse market.

The lack of confidence in the horse breeding business, which resulted from the depressing influences of the panic, undoubtedly brought about a decline in the breeding of the best grades. This cannot be shown very accurately, for the 12th census has reported the largest number of horses in the history of the country. By a careful study of the market conditions, however, it is evident that a more exciting market has found an inferior grade of horses from which to draw its supply. Misfits and culls are common enough, but they are not in demand.

The increase of population, with a growing love of a good horse, and the wonderful growth of business, call for many more horses than were needed for such purposes in the early '90's."

Too Good for the Money.

[From the Ohio State Journal.]

When you pick up a Holmes county farmer for an easy mark in a horse dicker you reckon without your host. The native of Holmes county has had a great deal of fun poked at him, but when it comes to horse swapping his wisdom is deep.

A shrewd horseman related to me an instance to prove this. He went into Holmes county to dispose of a horse that was a good stepper, carried his head high, and sized up generally as an attractive beast. The animal, however, had a touch of heaves, and was spavined, both of which maladies had been doctored up in order to make the sale easy. One day as the horseman was getting well into the wilds of Holmes he met a son of the soil.

"Nice day," he began.

The horseman admitted this.

"Likely lookin' boss yer hev there?"

"Yes, he can't be matched in this section."

"Fer sale?"

"O, I'm not anxious," (carelessly.)

"What dew yer ask fer him?"

"Well, I wouldn't take a red less than $60."

"Um—sound?"

"Sound as a dollar."

"Trot er pace?"

"Trot."

"Four minutes?"

"Three!"

"Gentle?"

"Gentle as a lamb."

"Kick, bite or balk?"

"Never."

"Age?"

"Five year old."

"Haint got a blemish?"

"Not one."

"Only $60?"

"That's all."

"Say, stranger," concluded the Holmes countian, like a man sure of his ground, "yew either stole thet boss er yew'r a gol-darn'd good liar."

With that the native clucked to his own horse and drove on. There are two reasons why the horseman did not resent the native's last statement. One is that it was the truth, the other because the Holmes county farmer was over six feet tall, had fists like rail-mauls and a long reach.

Evidently W. K. Vanderbilt has pinned his faith closer to the Hanover blood than most men care to do in connection with any one thoroughbred sire. Having got together in France a lot of thoroughbred mares about as good as were to be bought in Britain and the French Republic, besides reinforcing it with a selection of the best American bred matrons, he purchased Halma by Hanover, and a great race-winner in his turf days, and sent him over to head the stud. Now he has bought another son of Hanover, by name Hammock, from P. J. Dwyer. This is a black horse out of Aurania, full sister to Tremont that never knew defeat when on the turf, though it is true he only raced during his two year old form. These names recall the famous Dwyer victories. Tremont and Hanover, one a black and the other a chestnut with much white, were both owned the same year as two year olds by the Dwyers, and Tremont did the most of the big work. Hanover won but three races that season, but Tremont never started again and Hanover won nearly twenty stakes and purses before being raced off his legs as a three year old. He was kept at it, as were all the Dwyer horses in these days, for some more seasons and then went to Milton Young at McGrathiana, where he proved the most phenomenal success in the stud, dying far before his time.

Distinguished Amateur Reinsmen.

Doubtless one of the most distinguished active admirer and amateur driver of the trotting horse to-day is Philander Chase Knox of Pittsburg, now Attorney-General of the United States. He left a practice of $200,000 a year to enter the cabinet. He was associated with the late ex-President Benjamin Harrison in the Indianapolis Street Railway case, and on meeting this eminent council later at Atlantic City, after greetings, the ex-president said:

"By the way, Knox, how did you come out in the settlement of your account with that street railway company? I got $25,000 out of them for my services."

"I am very glad to hear it, general," replied Mr. Knox, pleasantly. Then in a modestly deferential way he continued: "I got $125,000."

"What!" blurted the ex-president. Then he wheeled and continued the walk without another word.

During his career in Pittsburg Mr. Knox found recreation in hunting, fishing and golf, but his hobby was the trotting horse. At one of Splan's sales in Chicago he bought the trotting pair Wert and B. C. for $9500. Later he drove a pair of trotters a mile in 2:10½ over the matinee track at Pittsburg. He made a study of the horses and brought his knowledge to bear in driving them for a great effort, just as he would leave no stone unturned to master an important case.

From a sketch of Mr. Knox's daily life in Washington we learn that he is up at 6 o'clock in the morning and breakfasts with his family at 8 o'clock. The intervening two hours are spent behind his famous pair of roadsters, Wert and B. C. The unerring judgment of the martyr President McKinney was once more made manifest in his choice of Mr. Knox, who was not a politician in any sense of the word, but his intimate knowledge of corporate law and his standing in the legal profession alone led the great protectionist to choose him as Attorney General Griggs' successor, and the president of "strenuous life" has clung to him with hooks of steel.

Like the late Robert Bonner, the learned attorney general is a good Christian, as well as a good horseman. He is a vestryman in the Church of Ascension, Pittsburg. Discussing religious creeds one day with some friends, the attorney general, in reply to a question as to his belief, said: "My creed is to live for those I love and to do all the good I can."

California State Fair Premium List.

Secretary Geo. W. Jackson of the California State Agricultural Society is sending out the following circular letter with copies of the premium list for the State Fair this year:

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 21, 1902.

DEAR SIR: We desire to call your attention to the changes made in the Premium List for the Fair of 1902; particularly to page 31, Class I, Shorthorns, open class, and to page 32, Class Ia, for State only. The American Shorthorn Breeders' Association will duplicate premiums in these classes; for particulars, see notice, page 31 of Premium List.

On pages 39 and 40 you will see the Grand Sweepstakes for all recognized Standard Dairy Breeds. In regard to this class, we quote you the opinion of Prof. W. L. Carlyle, professor of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the University of Wisconsin: "Such a class has long been established in the Iowa State Fair, and also was for a time at the Minnesota State Fair. In judging this class at the Iowa State Fair last year, I did not hear of any dissatisfaction with the judgment rendered, and I think it brought out one of the finest exhibits that was seen in the whole Dairy Department of the Fair. It gives the judge an excellent opportunity of calling attention to the fact that good dairy animals are found in all breeds, and that no one of them has a right to claim superiority over the others, and that much more is dependent upon the individual animal than upon the breed to which it may belong."

The Directors of this Society are very desirous of having a large exhibit of all classes of live stock, and have secured Prof. W. L. Carlyle, a National authority, to judge them, and we take pleasure in referring you to the following notice from the Pacific Rural Press of May 31, 1902:

"The live stock displays at the California State Fair next September should receive the careful attention of all interested in those lines. The educational value of having such an expert as Prof. Carlyle pass upon our local animals can hardly be overestimated. He can be trusted to bring us up-to-date standards from that part of the country where perhaps higher ideals prevail than elsewhere, and where such ideals have been most nearly approached. To have a premium at his hand will be a distinguished honor; but more valuable still it will be to actually know by sight what is the accepted type, and this advantage can be shared by all who will go to the Fair and watch closely the judging as it proceeds. One of our oldest swine breeders said to us the other day: 'I believe I am a good judge of swine, but I want to see just how my judgment stands as compared with that of the best Eastern experts, who have reduced judging to a science.' Prof. Carlyle's engagement should not only bring out a large display, but it should be used to its fullest advantage by hundreds of earnest people who want to be just right in their views."

EIGHT STAKES FOR RUNNERS, with from $300 to $400 added money, are advertised in this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN by the California State Agricultural Society, to close August 9th, the races to be contested at the State Fair this year. The Rush Stake for all ages is at six furlongs, the Mackey Selling Stake for two year olds (also at six furlongs), the Grove L. Johnson Selling Stake for three year olds and upwards and the Vincter Stake for three year olds and upwards are at one mile, the Bella Vista Stake for two year old fillies is at five furlongs, the Governor's Stake, a handicap for three year olds and upwards, is at a mile and a furlong; the California State Fair Annual Stake, a handicap for two year olds, is at six furlongs, and the President's Stake, a handicap for three year olds and upwards, is at one mile and a quarter. In addition to these stakes, the running program will provide for enough overnight events to make four or more running races each day. To all these overnight races there will be free entrance. From reports gathered from all sections of the Pacific Coast, it is evident that the California State Fair of 1902 is to be one of the greatest in the history of the California State Agricultural Society. This year the live stock and agricultural exhibits promise to be especially large and interesting and a very large attendance is assured. The racing program, both harness and running events, will be particularly good, as the present time and entries will doubtless be very numerous. Every horse owner should have his stable represented.

CONTRA COSTA'S FAIR, at Concord, always a good one and largely attended, will be a record breaker this year. It will be held at the new fair grounds, and the racing will be on the new track, which promises to be one of the best in the State. The fair opens October 1st and continues four days. The program is printed in our advertising columns as arranged for each day. There are two $500 purses, for free-for-all trotters and free-for-all pacers. The same amount. The other harness events are for district horses. There will be one running race each day. Only five entries are required to fill and three to start. The racing will be in one of the prettiest valleys, among the most generous people, at one of the best tracks, managed by as accommodating a board of directors as can be found anywhere on earth.

Cleveland Grand Circuit Meeting.

The rainstorm that caused the Detroit meeting to close down on Thursday of last week continued so that the Cleveland meeting could not open until Tuesday, but some great sport has been had there at the Glenville track since.

The program opened with the 2:14 trot for a purse of $1500. There were thirteen starters and Major Delmar won in straight heats. The time was 2:11½, 2:12½, 2:11½. Bonsilene, the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's mare by Stamboul out of Bon Bon, was a starter, but was placed last in the summary.

The 2:09 pace was the sensational race of the day as it took eight heats to decide it. Fred S. Wedgewood got the first heat in 2:08½, Capt. Sphinx took the second and third in 2:07½ and 2:10½, Dan R. got the fourth in 2:08, Winfield Stratton captured the fifth in 2:08½, then Wedgewood got to the front again in the sixth heat in 2:10, and Dan R. being less tired than the others staggered to the front in the seventh and eighth heats in 2:12½ and 2:13½. Terrace Queen, Salem, Dandy C., Maggie Hubbard, New Richmond and Lou Vaughn were the other starters.

The Santa Rosa Stock Farm started B. S. Dillon in the 2:19 pace, but he was outside the money. Dandy Chimes won in straight heats in 2:09½ and 2:10½. Uncle John by Chas. Derby was a starter in this race but got none of the purse. In the telegraphed summary: Uncle John was 7 and B. S. Dillon 11. There were thirteen starters.

Directum Spier was the winner of the 2:27 trot in straight heats in 2:13½ and 2:14. He is by Directum out of a mare by Axtell. There were nine starters in the race, the Palo Alto bred mare Lauretta by Norris out of Laura C. by Electioneer being fourth in the summary.

On Wednesday eleven thousand people turned out to see the fast horses, the 2:04 pace and 2:07 trot being on the program.

The unbeaten Dan Patch was almost a 1 to 5 favorite for the pace. He won, but had to cut his record to 2:03½ when pressed in the opening heat by Riley B. The performance did not tire the favorite in the least and he took the deciding heat with ease. The other starters were Searchlight, Connor and Indiana.

The first heat of the 2:07 trot went to The Monk, who had sold for 50 to 10 on the field. Lord Derby was far back, and the judges decided that Spear had made an improper drive. He was taken down and George Saunders put up behind Lord Derby. The drive on the stretch was terrific and The Monk was nipped at the wire. Lord Derby trotted the last half mile in 1:00½. A bad break put him out of the going in the deciding heat, and the race went to The Monk, Dolly Dillon, the only other starter, being unable to force him out. The judges fined Spear $250 and gave the money to the substituted driver. All bets on the race were declared off.

Waubun won the 2:12 trot, taking the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:10½, 2:12, 2:12½. Hesperus won the first and second heats in 2:09½, 2:11. Lady Thesbe, Belle Kuser, Ruth M., Poindexter, Dan T., Denny S. and Iva Dee also started.

Direct Hal captured the 2:15 pace, but was beaten in one heat. He took the first, third and fourth in 2:08½, 2:10, 2:10. Elder One won the second heat in 2:09½. Pauline G., Schley Pointer, Mosie Moore, H. J. P. and Gold Brick also started.

Another big crowd was at the track Thursday, and fast time was again the rule. The Santa Rosa Stock Farm's mare Anzella again demonstrated her ability to win in her class by annexing the first money in the 2:10 trot, winning in straight heats, both in 2:08½, a new record for her. She met a high class field of nine trotters. Charley Mac got fourth money in this race.

In the 2:11 class pace five heats were paced in from 2:05½ to 2:08½, and You Bet by McKinney was third. He must have paced a great race even though he did not win, and will certainly be in the 2:10 class before the season is over. The brief telegraphic summaries of the day's races are as follows:

2:23 class trot, purse $3000, 3 in 5—Wentworth won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:12, 2:13½, 2:13½. Lord Marsh won the first and second heats in 2:14½, 2:11½. Darwin, Miss Brook, Hallie Hardin, Boralma's Brother, Goldbug, The General and Aunt Rose also started.

2:11 class pace, $1200, 3 in 5—Daphne Dallas won first, second and fifth heats in 2:07½, 2:07½ and 2:07½. Casconda won the third and fourth heats in 2:05½, 2:08½. You Bet, Don Riley, Carthage Girl, Rosebud, Donna McGregor, Dick See, Shorty, Pat Wilkes, Berdina and Maggie Hubbard also started.

2:10 class trot, $1500, 2 in 3—Anzella won two straight heats in 2:08½. Aggie Medium, Dan Wilkes, Charlie Mc, Dorothy Redmond, Anna Hella, Glory King, Chimes and Edna Cook also started.

2:17 pace, $1000, 2 in 3—Green Line won two straight heats in 2:08½, 2:08½. Major, St. Rega, Winner, Frank Powell, Cubanola and Sylvian One also started.

A Flourishing Driving Club.

While the Los Angeles Driving Club is the pioneer amateur club of gentlemen drivers in on the Coast organized on the modern plan first made popular by the celebrated Cleveland organization, and is doubtless the largest and most prosperous driving club in California, it may soon have to look to its laurels as the newly organized club at Fresno, and the Sacramento Driving Club are fast becoming its rivals in membership and in the number of fast horses owned. The Sacramento club held its regular annual meeting this week for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the report of the secretary showed it to be in a particularly prosperous condition. The officers elected were as follows, all enthusiastic amateur horsemen and regular road drivers and gentlemen of standing in the professional or business ranks of Sacramento county's citizens:

President, Albert Elkus; Vice-President, W. O. Bowers; Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. E. J. Weldon. The Board of Directors are: F. E. Wright, L. S. Upson, F. J. Rubstaller, Dan Flint, John Batcher, H. A. Bell, H. O. Buckman, C. W. Paine, W. Sawyer, W. Trust, Dr. McCullem and Ira McMullen.

It was decided to hold a driving matinee on the 8th of August at Agricultural Park and it was proposed to handicap the horses by time limits in the starting in an effort if possible to make the horses bunch up near the wire and make a close finish, instead of classing the horses as heretofore.

This proposition, however, was not definitely decided on and will be the matter for discussion at some future meeting. H. A. Bell drew the attention of the club to the fact that the State Agricultural Society had hung up a trophy valued at $1000 for a free for all race of horses owned by members of recognized driving clubs driven by amateur drivers.

He then stated that the bylaws of the club prohibited the membership from driving in hoppers or in racing against horses in hoppers and he suggested that the secretary be instructed to correspond with the Los Angeles Driving Club and such others as had a like provision in their bylaws and request them to join in a petition to the directors of the Agricultural Society requesting them to call this race off and to substitute a race barring all hoppers, and it was decided so to do.

The secretary reported that there was so much money in the treasury that no more was required at present, and it was agreed to remit the collection of the next three months' dues and to so notify the club membership. The club has a membership of over 80 in good standing as to dues, and a number of others who, being absent from the city on their vacations, have failed to pay in, but will probably do so on their return. The speed committee for the ensuing term is F. E. Wright, Frank J. Rubstaller and Charles Silva.

Colusa Entries.

Of the races advertised by the Colusa association, entries to which closed July 15th, but three, the 2:40 trot, 2:20 pace and 3:00 district trot, were filled as follows:

2:40 Trot, Purse $500—J. W. Nesbit's Dolly N. by Clarence Wilkes, H. A. Bell's H. D. B. by Arthur Holt, G. E. Smith's Adminster by Admiral, Sam Bryan's Let Him Be by Fairmount.

2:20 Pace, Purse $400—J. Olsen's Sonoma by Gossiper, John Sangler's Jennie S. by Directum, Wm. Brown's Flashlight by Illustrious, Wm. Leach's Convict by Constantine.

District Trot, 3:00 Class, Purse $200—C. Arvesden's Sutter by Noonday, H. B. Turman's Jim Corbett, W. S. Smith's White Stockings, G. E. Showler's Norma by Dexter Prince, J. W. Nesbit's Dolly N. by Clarence Wilkes, S. A. Bryan's Let Him Be by Fairmount. All the other classes advertised will be kept open until August 1st.

A Prominent Liveryman.

Mr. C. B. Dickens of Minneapolis, Minn., who conducts one of the largest livery stables in the Northwest, writes as follows: "I have been using Quinn's Ointment for some time and with the greatest success. I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends. No horseman should be without it in his stable." For curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches it has no equal. Sent by mail or express, prepaid, upon receipt of one dollar. Address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y., unless you can obtain it from your druggist.

Hopples are not confined to half mile tracks by any means. The 2:14 pace at Detroit had eleven starters and nine of them wore the straps. There were five heats in the race, and with excessive scoring it seemed the longest and most tiresome race of the week. As Palmer Clark says: "A big field of hobbled pacers in a three in five race is enough to make a starting judge take to the tall timber."

On a hot day drink Jackson's Napa Soda lemonade and be refreshed.

Demand for Saddle Horses.

One of the most favorable signs of the season is the tremendous demand that exists in all the large American markets for saddle horses of both kinds—both the so-called gaited Kentucky kind and the walk-trot-canter kind. Prices are hardly any criterion in this case. The rich man pays from $1000 to $3000 or more for what suits him of either sort, the poor man buys the horse that is either able or is supposed to be able to "saddle" and thereby "ease his pains." The fact is that the supply of really finished saddle horses of any sort is woefully short. All the dealers with reputations for furnishing finished performers are overrun with orders.

Hark back a few weeks and see what happened at Durlands on the opening day of summer. Orders for saddle horses to buy outright, to lease by the season and to rent by the day, broke all records and totaled something over 670—a most astonishing record considering the craze for automobiles of the racing type that exists at present and did then among the wealthy young men and women of Gotham. The polo playing set in New York, inspired thereto by the trip of their adepts to London, where an unsuccessful attempt was made to wrest the International Cup from the British in a series of matches two in three, has been doing much missionary work in the swell set of New York and it is only reasonable to suppose that much good has been done thereby.

The very fact that the British ponies, when it came to the pinch, raced all around the American, though almost equaled by them in the first game, has drawn the attention of various breeders to the subject of producing small racing horses capable of staying and going a very fast pace. This spirit seems to have permeated the entire United States, so far as its largest cities are concerned, and to-day very many more young men in such cities are desirous of acquiring the art of sitting on a fast going horse than at any time in the history of the nation. The result is that a great number of young men who cannot be called wealthy and many more who lay some claims to that distinction are daily practicing the art of horsemanship with the result as already stated that the demand for saddlers is more keen than so far has been recorded in the history of horse exchange in the United States.

No more manly exercise could be indulged in. The so-called gaited horse, no matter if he can only raise a rather mean sort of hobble in lieu of the true saddle gaits, is in tremendous demand, and any one who does not believe this statement ought to do one of two things—to be convinced—either to journey down any favorite bridge path in some park in a great American city, or to attend a daily auction when it has been announced that a consignment of "Kentucky and other saddlers" will be disposed of to the highest bidder.—Breeders' Gazette.

Alfalfa as a Pork Maker.

F. D. Coburn, Secretary of Kansas State Board of Agriculture, in his book entitled "Alfalfa," says: "The hog is much more of a grass animal by nature than it has, in many cases, any chance to be under domestication. The successful feeder, however, recognizes the fact that the most profitable gains can be made on good pasture with a small allowance of grain to finish for the market. Clover is a great favorite for hog pasture, but those who have tried both clover and alfalfa find the alfalfa greatly superior. It stands pasturing better than clover, and is a better feed. Alfalfa affords an ideal hog pasture, and if judiciously treated and good hogs are raised, there is no part of the farm that will give the satisfaction that the alfalfa pasture does. Pigs weighing thirty to sixty pounds, twenty to thirty head per acre, put on alfalfa pasture in the spring should ordinarily make a gain of one hundred pounds each. Hogs may be left to subsist exclusively on the green alfalfa, but better results are obtained by feeding with it a small quantity of grain. Exceedingly large returns are obtained from the small quantities fed; the alfalfa being green and bulky, needs the grain to balance its effect. The pasture not only affords a cheap growth, but the bulky character expands the digestive tract of the hog, thus enabling it to utilize a large quantity of feed when the finishing period comes, which is a very important consideration."

The Ideal Beef Animal.

At a farmer's institute at Summer Lake, Oregon, Dr. Withycombe, Prof. E. R. Lake and Prof. F. H. Kent were the speakers, Dr. Withycombe gave the people of that section an idea of the beef types among cattle. He called attention to the difference in conformation of the beef and dairy types of cattle. He stated that it was the practice of many stock raisers to speak of the roan Durham, the red Durhams and the Shorthorns as though they were separate and distinct breeds, but that such nomenclature is a mistake. They are all Shorthorns, and were originally reds, whites and a mingling of the two colors, producing roans; a characteristic Shorthorn color. It was stated that two beef steers of equal age and purity of breeding, and receiving the same care, might sell for prices differing as much as 2 cents per pound in a discriminating market, owing to the different manner in which the animal carries his flesh. The ideal beef animal will be free from any "patchiness" on the body and will have broad well-fleshed back where are found the valuable cuts of beef. The hind quarters will be fleshed well down toward the hock; in fact, when viewed from the side the body will be found to nearly fill a rectangle in outline.

Importance of Milking Cows Dry.

An inexperienced or careless milker can easily dry up and diminish the quantity of milk. Leave a little milk in the udder for a few times and you will soon find that you are losing in both quantity and quality. Every dairyman knows that the richest milk is that drawn last. Some one has calculated the loss from such hurry in milking as leaves a little of this best of the milk in the udder. It may amount to one-half a pound of milk at every milking, as was found to be the case by a farmer who followed his hired man and milked all the cows after him. By this second making he got over a pound from some cows and less than one-half a pound from others, but from ten cows he got five pounds of strippings at one milking.

This, to some, does not seem to be a very large amount of milk, but if milking in general were done so carelessly the total loss of milk in the United States from lazy milking would amount to sixteen million pounds per day. One can easily calculate this, as the statistical reports give the number of milch cows in the United States as 16,292,360, and it makes plain that a great saving may be made by milking the cows dry.

Caring for Sheep.

On the management of sheep during the summer months depends to a very considerable extent the success of the flock. There are a few things which must not be neglected in caring for the sheep in very hot weather, as at that time they are liable to suffer from many causes. The water is a matter that will require almost constant looking after to maintain a constant and pure supply. Tall grass should be avoided in the pasture fields, especially if it is a wet season. The grubby deposits its eggs and the maggots do great damage, especially in warm, damp weather. Sometimes a few of the sheep will get out of condition and it will need a little attention and perhaps feed to get them in good shape again. One of the important items in sheep raising is to make them grow rapidly during the summer on grass and to have them in fine condition in the fall to start in the winter.

The Old Campaigner Talks of "Class."

"It will be pretty hard to convince me that there was no job in that race between Dan Patch and Harold H. at Windsor," said the Amateur after he had read the telegraphed account of the affair in the morning. "I have been in the harness since 1901 over the Lexington track last fall and do it so easy that it is my candid opinion he can step three of that kind any day. Yet he was beaten in 2:06½ and did not put up half a fight in the second heat. It all looks very queer to me and is but another addition to the evidence which goes to prove that a two-horse race is seldom anything but a job."

"You go outside and sit in the watering trough for an hour or so, until you cool off," advised the Old Campaigner, "and then I'll tell you one more thing about horses that you have had neither no time or no inclination to learn. If you will take the fractional time of the first heat of that race at Windsor you will find in it the most absolutely convincing proof that the race was on the dead level and that the best horse not only won it, but that he is so far the best, that there is no sense in mentioning them the same week. It was class that beat Harold H. The same class that made Dan Patch better than any pacer he met in 1901. The same class that he will have to possess if he beats horses of the Royal R. Sheldon and Audubon Boy brand this year. It is not for me to say that he has it, though I have my own opinions. Harold H. is a good pacer, in his class. He proved that last year so good and strong that it is beyond argument and time used in discussing it is wasted. But there is an ocean of difference between the ability to pace a workout mile in 2:04 and pace a race mile in 2:06½ when a horse of better class is setting the rate at which certain quarters and halves are covered."

No one knew last year, not even McHenry, how fast Dan Patch could pace a mile, and he never tried to find out. But he did know that in all his races he never failed to have the speed necessary to step any part of the mile fast enough to make all the other starters wish they were in the barn. If an eighth in fifteen seconds were needed in his business Dan was there with the goods. If it had to be a quarter in thirty seconds, a quarter in thirty seconds it was, and there were spots in those eighths and quarters, my son, that were fast enough to make the best of them sea sick. Those spots were not exhibitions of mere speed. They were the best evidence in the world of what horsemen call class. They cooked the goose of the pacer that lacked class, but they never turned a hair on Dan Patch. Audubon Boy showed the same class in most of his races and never more plainly than when he was beating Shadow Chimes, a pacer with as much speed as the chestnut colt, but lacking a trifle in point of class. Horsemen long ago learned that the mere ability to trot or pace a fast mile is not enough of a foundation for a race horse. The give and take of a heat race is something fearful and requires something more than speed. It is probable that Harold H. can pace miles much faster than his record. But he will never do it in a race against Dan Patch when they are both right. Why? For the simple reason that Dan can take the heart out of him at some spot in the route and is liable to do it any time. Take that first heat at Windsor. They stepped the first quarter in 30½ seconds with Dan on the outside. At the half the time was 1:01. From there on it was Dan all the way and he finished at about a 2:40 gait. His class settled the affair at the half, or near there and it is safe to say that in spots the clip was better than a two-minute one.

"That's what did the business for the Canadian. If he had been up against something of his class the mile might have been paced in 2:04 for there would have been no danger that he would have been killed off at the half. When you get a horse with 2:04 speed for a mile that can step a quarter in 30 seconds without blowing up you are mighty near to owning a race horse, for such a horse has class. He don't care if Dan Patch never lowers his record. He don't need to. A mile by him in two minutes would not prove him a greater race horse. To my mind he has already proven that he has class, something a record mile might not prove. And when the horse comes along that can beat him you will soon discover that he has beaten him, not because he has more speed, but for the very good reason that he has more class. You can do your own guessing as to how soon he will arrive."

The new performer, Polar Wilkes 2:12½, by Erie Wilkes was bred in Montana. Fred Mulholland, who returned last week from Denver, where he was presiding judge during the very successful meeting held at Overland Park, tells us that Polar Wilkes was used as a cow pony and driven on the road, and never trained for the races until last fall. He wears the straps but is quite a pacer and is headed for the 2:10 list with every chance of getting there. He got his record in a five heat race which he won, beating a field of eight horses.

Sandwiching Three Races is Popular.

The fact that there has been something radically wrong with the method of conducting trotting races has been slowly dawning upon friends of the light harness sport during a dozen years or more. Many are the plans, more or less practical, which have been advanced with the hope that they would popularize the sport with the general public. Almost everyone will admit that protracted scoring and long waits between heats has been the worst evil with which track managers have had to contend. To remedy this, two in three in place of the old-time system of three in five racing has been tried, and while it serves to shorten the program, and everybody knows that the best way to disgust people with trotting is to keep them at the track after a reasonable hour. Say, for instance, one goes to the races to see a friend's horse perform; perhaps the race may be the last on the program and is not reached until late in the afternoon, and then is not finished. In the meantime an important engagement has been missed and the object of the trip has not been attained. It is this sort of a thing that has kept horsemen trotting for their own money.

The Brighton Beach plan, which provides that horses which do not win a heat in three shall go to the barn, is not only logical, but is most certainly a move in the right direction. But the plan which comes nearer than anything else to solving the problem is that of sandwiching three races, and the mystery is that it had not suggested itself to some up-to-date track manager before. Its trial at Readville last fall came about through the fact that at the Breeders meeting, when the days are short, there was a doubt about their ability to race off all the events—although it was against the rules of the National Association, the plan was tried and pleased the public immensely. At the meeting of the National Association last winter the rule was changed, so that it is optional with the association whether they race under the new system or not.

At the Readville spring meeting the plan was again tried and worked splendidly. The fact that seven races and nineteen heats were run off at Readville in about five hours shows the possibilities of this plan of racing. Manager Christie, of Granite State Park, tried it at the meeting at Dover last week and the result of the trial there pleased everybody, and that it will be adopted by all first class associations seems certain. As is usual with them, the trainers and owners were opposed to the plan at first, but even they, who more than any class of people on earth, want to go round the stump all their lives because their grandfathers did, are now coming to see that this plan will be best for everyone.—Boston Courier.

Imp. St. Symphorion, the horse Chas. Boots purchased over East recently for $1100, will be placed in the stud at the Elmwood Stock Farm near Milpitas. Mr. Boots will ship him west in the fall, and he will be bred to Brutus mares. St. Symphorion is a half brother to the great horse St. Gatien, being by Newcastle out of Saint Editha. He left the turf sound in his sixth year, and is now sixteen years old. With a limited opportunity Small Bore Guns.

The shotgun of to-day is a lineal descendant of the old English blunderbuss and Spanish escopeta, which were designed to effect the certain slaughter of human game at short range. In war they were handy in checking a cavalry charge when the riders were close enough to count the buttons on their coats, for the flaring, bell-shaped muzzles of these arms gave generous spread to the charge of round balls and slugs, and a single shot might easily empty a half-dozen saddles. In the hardly less perilous days of peace, housebreakers and highwaymen afforded occasional targets for practice ashore, while the pirates of the Spanish main found practical use for these old arms in their little commercial ventures. Probably they were even then employed to some extent in hunting, but the day of bird shot had not yet dawned--nor of "sport," in the sense in which the word is now understood. For a couple of centuries the evolution of the shotgun was slow; a continual up-stream pull against the tide of popular prejudice. It was hard to convince gunners that a straight barrel could give as satisfactory a pattern as one that flared at the muzzle like a trumpet; that "mustard-seed" shot could, by any fortunate chance, cut down a crossing pheasant; that any new-fangled contrivance for igniting the charge could satisfactorily supplant the flint and powder pan. Only seventy-four years ago we find Colonel Hawker, the most interesting sportsman writer of his day and an intimate friend of Joe Manton and other noted English gunmakers, stating that "the more shots I fire, the more I am persuaded that the flint gun shoots the strongest into the bird, and by far the easiest against the shoulder." Many of the readers of this article can recall the opposition encountered by the breech-loader upon its introduction; practically all of us have listened to arguments against hammerless guns, choke boring and automatic ejectors. But the march of progress is irresistible. All obstacles are surmounted, all opposition swept aside.

Within the last few years a visible tendency has developed among American sportsman to adopt guns smaller in gauge than the popular 12 bore, at least for the lighter shooting, where extreme range and breadth of pattern are not especially essential. Under conditions which formerly obtained it was only natural that American gunners should incline toward the larger gauges. Our game was found in its native wildness, not semi-domesticated and held within enclosures, as in European countries. Prairie shooting was principally at long range; in the timbered regions there was an ever present chance of stumbling upon large game. Duck hunters wanted nothing smaller than an 8 or 10 gauge and were a long time discovering that the 12 gauge could be made to answer their purpose. Later, when trap shooting came in favor, and a few of the larger clubs barred guns larger than 12 gauge from their grounds, there was a protest from the shooting public against a measure so radical and revolutionary. But the ruling held good and has since been universally adopted. Furthermore, rules were formulated granting distance concessions to smaller gauges, and the 16 and 20 has frequently won honors from the 12, on live birds and targets as well. Beyond the Atlantic these "baby guns" have long enjoyed popularity. The most noted makers of the earlier days of the nineteenth century rarely made their guns as large as 12 gauge, and they produced masterpieces--guns that modern manufacturers can hardly excel, whether in point of serviceable value, or in material, workmanship and symmetry of outline. Of four "Joe Manton" guns, now in the possession of Manton & Co., of Calcutta, India, the bore is 14, 15, 18 and 20 respectively; and it was with guns of similar gauge that Colonel Hawker was constantly making straight runs of 40 or more kills in partridge shooting--on one occasion grassing 14 consecutive snipe. Here we have records worthy of modern skill, modern guns--and big bores. Our best professional shots would be well content to equal them.

American sportsmen cannot be charged with undue haste in turning from the larger gauges which have served them so long and well. They are feeling their way, as it were, but still advancing. The 16 bore has established itself on secure footing throughout the country. Guns of still smaller bore are not yet in common use, save in certain locations or sections. The reason for this is easily found, and is two-fold. Few sportsmen, save in the vicinity of the larger cities, can secure an opportunity of testing the capabilities of 20, 24 and 28 gauge guns without a first expense of their regular list price, express charges added. And even if they purchase one of these little guns and find it all that heart could desire, there is still the difficulty of securing proper ammunition through their regular channels of supply. As a rule, where a first gun makes its advent in a community of gunners, others follow. In proof of this fact, and as evidence that the small bores are capable of making friends wherever they go, regardless of latitude, longitude or controlling circumstance, a single instance may suffice. Away to the southwest, in San Antonio, Texas--the city of the Alamo--there are probably more small bore guns owned and used than either in St. Louis or Chicago. They are favorites, even for wild fowl shooting along the gulf coast, and are regularly used by many of the local trap shooters. Mr. A. B. Critzer, a San Antonio sportsman well known to the fraternity from the Atlantic to the Pacific, has shot a 28 gauge gun for years and finds that its diminutive charge, when properly placed, drops a full-feathered Canada goose as readily as double the weight of powder and lead from a 10 bore. Mr. Edwin Sturtevant, of Chicago, who has devoted much time to comparative tests of the diminutive weapons, remarks: "The satisfaction of stopping a screamer with a 20 gauge is infinitely greater than to grass the bird with a larger bore and nearly twice as much shot." If this line of argument holds good, Mr. Critzer's "satisfaction" in similar cases must approximate blissfulness most supreme.

In considering the adoption of a gun smaller than 12 gauge sportsmen are commonly influenced by the fact that its lighter weight will lessen the weariness consequent upon a day's hunt, that it can be aligned upon game more quickly and with slighter muscular effort than is required with a heavier arm, and that a reduction in gauge is equivalent to an economy in ammunition. But, when considered from a technical standpoint, this is not all that is gained. Practical tests have demonstrated that a 20 gauge at 40 yards, using 2½ drams of smokeless powder and ¾ of an ounce of shot, has a velocity in foot seconds something over 8½ greater than a 12 gauge with 3½ drams of powder and 1½ ounces of shot. And charge velocity counts, especially on swift-flying birds, and on crossing shots, where the common tendency is to underestimate the lead required. A 26-inch circle will enclose the pattern of a cylinder bored 20 gauge at 30 yards; the pattern of a choke bored 12 gauge is about the same. Consequently, since the majority of sportsmen have been accustomed to the use of choke bores in the field and at the trap, they can take up the 20 gauge with an assurance that their percentage of kills need not be less than formerly. The 24 and 28 gauges, though more properly adapted to light shooting on open ground, will perform quite as satisfactorily as the 20 bore in hands competent to hold them on the centre. With ordinary charges their killing range is smaller in proportion. With barrels especially constructed to withstand the strain, a 28 gauge may be charged to kill as far as a 10 with ordinary loads; but, for some reason that is not thoroughly understood, a charge of powder that bears an elongated shape, as in arms of small calibre, is conducive to extreme breech pressure and its accompaniment of recoil.

Parker Bros. of Meriden, Conn., were among the first of American manufacturers to commence the production of small bore breech-loading guns, feeling assured that they would be found adapted to the conditions which obtained in field shooting in many portions of our country, and that their practical value for all-round work would be eventually recognized in the United States, as it already is by sportsmen beyond the Atlantic. The sterling merit of the Parker gun is so universally known that it is unnecessary to dwell thereon. Scattered all through States and sections can be found veteran sportsmen who still swear by their Parkers of the old "lifter action" model, and would not exchange them, after decades of continuous use, for any arm on the market. In the halcyon days of duck shooting on the Illinois river, the Kankakee marshes and other noted grounds, the Parker 10 gauge was the favorite, and probably the sons of those who wielded these 11 and 12 pound guns are now using smaller gauges from the same factory. The Parker gun is now made in 14, 16 and 20 gauges in all grades, with hammers or hammerless. The higher grade guns have fine Damascus or Titanic steel barrels; the cheaper, barrels of fine English twist and vulcan fluid steel. The 14 bore, while largely used in England and on the Continent, has never achieved popularity here. Why, it is difficult to state. Prior to the general adoption of breech-loaders there was a common belief extant that the 14 bore would handle shot of all sizes to better advantage than guns of larger or smaller gauge. There have been American single-barrel 14 bores on the market--notably the old model "break-down" Stevens--which were in every way serviceable. But sportsmen apparently inclined to the 16 bore in preference, and it was natural that manufacturers of guns and ammunition should follow their lead. The Parker 20 gauge is chambered, if so desired, for a 3-inch shell, which permits the use of a greater amount of wadding than can be used in the ordinary shell, and largely obviates one great fault ascribed to guns of such small calibre--namely, balling the shot. It may be of interest in this connection to record the results of a pattern test made with a Parker 20 gauge at Palos Park, Ill., August 29, 1901. The gun had 30½-inch Titanic steel barrels; both barrels full choke; shell, 3-inch Magic (formerly smokeless) U. M. C.; powder, DuPont smokeless, 32 grains by weight; shot, Tatham's chilled; charge, in all loads, ¾ ounce; wads, Trap, 2½-inch Express, B card under shot and B card over shot, all 20 gauge, fair pressure on wadding.

The tabulated results are of value, not only as showing what an individual gun has done, but what other guns of the same gauge, barrel length and system of boring should be able to do with proper charges. But it does not follow that the patterns shown stamp the gun as perfectly adapted to field shooting. On the contrary, the writer believes that the makers themselves would advise the use of one less closely choked, since the average wing shot is not always sure of holding within 18 inches of the right point on a flying target at 30 yards.

In the early 60's English gunmakers were wrestling with the problem how best to lock the barrels of breech-loading guns to the frame, to keep them down and in perfect contact with the standing breech. Many methods were tested before expert testimony agreed that the proper point for the fastening was as nearly as possible at the top of the breech and barrels. In 1862 Westley Richards introduced the extension rib, held down by a retracting bolt in line with the barrels, and at about the same time Greener brought out the cross bolt which has since been adopted by many manufacturers. In America, the L. C. Smith appeared late in the '70's, having a cross-bolted extension rib, which was then the strongest fastening known.

If asked to point to a representative American gun, one might safely choose the L. C. Smith. As a nation we believe in a combination of beauty and utility; we like to produce goods that look well, wear well and give the user perfect and enduring satisfaction. American mechanics, machinery and system are revolutionizing the world, simply because we cling to the idea that whatever we manufacture must be as good as it looks, and look a trifle better than a similar article produced by foreign competitors--a great deal better, when price is considered. The Smith gun exemplifies the success of this policy. It classes with the best of American makes, which is equivalent to saying with the best in the world. When first produced the apparent strength of its cross-bolt fastening caught the eye of our practically inclined sportsmen; later they were impressed with the range, pattern and penetration secured by the system of choke-boring used, fully meeting the requirements of the wild-fowl hunter and trap-shooter. It has held the popularity then gained, and where millionaire sportsmen gather for a friendly contest at live birds, or market hunters flock to a favorite shooting ground, the Smith gun will be found prominently represented. As yet the L. C. Smith is not made in gauges smaller than 16. Its makers, the Hunter Arms Co. of Fulton, N. Y., devote their energies to supplying an existent demand. But all their regular grades of hammerless guns are made in 16 gauge--the No. 00, or cheapest quality, alone excepted--list prices ranging from $47 to $740. The mechanism of the Smith gun is remarkably strong and simple. It is bolted at as great a distance as is practical from the hinge-point to utilize the advantage of a long leverage; has steel-freed bridge-locks attached to lock plates as easily detachable as those of a hammer gun, without springs save the mainspring, and the cocking mechanism is composed of two pieces only. Lack of space prevents a comprehensive description of the Smith in its various grades. The barrels are of Damascus, Crown, Nitro or Whitworth fluid compressed steel--the manufacturers consider the Whitworth barrels the best in the world. The stocks are of English, French or Circassian walnut, selected for fineness of grain and figure, and richness of color. In finish, the arms are as perfect as expert workmen can make them.

In the year 1916 the Remington Arms Co., Ilion, N. Y., will have completed a century of active connection with the manufacture of firearms. Its military rifles have armed warring tribes and nations in four continents; Remington revolvers--now no longer manufactured--for years figured in the service equipment of United States soldiery, and swung at the belts and saddle pommels of the men who cleared the path for civilization through our western wilds. This concern--then under the firm name of E. Remington & Sons was one of the first to engage in the production of breech-loading shotguns, improving upon existing models and systems from time to time and keeping thoroughly in step with the march of contemporary progress. The original Remington gun was a hammer lifter action, and Models '82, '83, '85 and '87, and '89, all differing each from the other in many of their parts. The mechanism of the arm in its present state of perfection may be easily understood. It consists of hammers, cocking levers, triggers and main and sear springs. Before the gun is open sufficiently to admit of inserting a shell in the chamber, both hammers are cocked and the triggers are locked automatically.

The Remington Model 1893, single barrel shotgun is, perhaps, the most generally popular low-priced gun of its type on the market. It is semi-hammerless, the cocking lever being at the right side of the frame, immediately under the user's thumb as he grips the stock. It has a blue steel choke-bored barrel, rebounding lock, case-hardened frame and pistol grip stock with rubber butt plate. In material, workmanship and shooting qualities it is up to the Remington standard, better than which one can hardly ask. In the past the 10, 12 and 15 gauges of this gun have outsold the smaller bores, but there is a growing demand for guns of 20, 24 and 28 gauge, in all of which sizes it can be supplied. The guns have 28, 30, 32 and 34-inch barrels and range in weight from 5½ to 6½ pounds.

This list of American small bore guns is not complete, these extracts having been taken from an article by S. D. Barnes in the Sporting Goods Gazette, even as to arms at present manufactured, but it may be said to include nearly all that are largely used and have an established reputation. A number of guns well known to sportsmen have been omitted for the sufficient reason that their manufacture has been discontinued.

There is another popular make of shotgun, the merits of which we cannot pass by. This gun is the well known product of J. P. Clabrough & Brothers. These guns are built to order and made in various grades, hammerless and hammer guns, crown, fluid or laminated steel and Damascus barrels. These guns are not made in smaller gauges than 16's. The cross bolt through the extension rib, with two bolts under the barrels, gives this make a strong breech fastening second to none. The barrels are bored specially for nitro powders and shoot equally well with black powders. The materials used, engraving, fitting and finish are all of superior quality. All of these guns are thoroughly tested and are guaranteed for pattern and penetration. These guns are fitted with perfect working automatic or plain ejectors, and can be taken apart or put together as easily as an ordinary gun without the ejector. These guns have been used for years and with much satisfaction by our Coast sportsmen, both for field and marsh shooting and also at the traps. They range in price from $400 to $35.

Another reliable gun is the W. J. Golcher make; this is an all-round piece, very reasonable in price, made of the best material and nicely finished. They are strong and reliable guns for duck and quail, choke bored for close and hard shooting and far killing.

There are others, bearing the names of American firms, which are made by the thousands in Belgium and Americanized by the payment of import duties. Some of them are very neatly made and serviceable arms and have accomplished much toward popularizing small bores through their sale in the smaller towns where a small gauge gun of better class would hardly have found a purchaser. And there are Belgian, English and French guns which sell as such, represent the acme of the gunmaker's art in their respective countries, and are peers, it is claimed, to the best of our own production in practically every essential particular. But this article has to do with American guns principally.

Several of the various cartridge companies have evinced a disinclination, not unnatural on their part, to manufacture shells of the smallest gauge. To undertake the production of a new shell necessitates a very heavy expense for additional machinery, which is reluctantly assumed unless there is a promise of an immediate demand to justify it. I believe that all ammunition concerns are now listing 20 gauge shells, but this statement would not have held good a few short months ago. The Union Metallic Cartridge Co. manufactures shells of 24 and 28 gauge in "Nitro Club" grade. Imported brass shells for these guns are on the market, and are very convenient in many instances, though brass shells are not adapted to nitro powders. Purchasers of 20, 24 and 28 gauge guns, especially if residing in localities where there are few sporting goods establishments, will generally find it profitable to depend on the factory for their shells as a never failing dependence in case factory loaded ammunition is at any time unobtainable. Luckily there is no lack of small gauge wads. Their English and Belgian guns, when the American sportsmen rarely ordered his arms direct from the maker, but purchased whatever his dealer had to sell. As the foreign manufacturer supplied American orders from his regular stock for the home market, small gauges predominated, and there was not the present uniformity to gauge. The same wads would not work satisfactorily in two guns stamped with the same number, for the sufficient reason that the arms differed materially in size of bore. Each sportsman was compelled to study the individual peculiarities of his own gun, and proportion the charge in accordance thereto.

Years may elapse before small bore guns achieve the popularity they deserve, but it is gratifying to note that practically every American gunmaker of prominence concedes that their day is coming. We are now at the turning of the tide and may await with confidence the change in popular sentiment that must certainly develop.

The Chico Gun Club members enjoyed a moderate trap shoot on the 13th inst. G. L. Barham was high gun and established a new record for the season by breaking 92 out of 100.

At single birds five scores of twenty each were shot, the results of each and the totals being as follows: W. A. Robertson 14, 18, 17, 17, 16, total, 82; Loshbough 15, 16, 15, 16, 14, total 76; Barham 20, 18, 18, 19, 17, total 92; White 13, 14, 14, 13, 16, total 70; Johnson

In a match of twenty-five sets of double blue rocks, the scores were Barham 43, Robertson 34, Johnson 35, Loshbough 25.

"One Barrel Pete" is at present located in Santa Rosa. He has given the local sportsmen several exhibitions of his skill. On one occasion he won a $50 wager by beating his opponent at a blue rock shoot. Pete "stood" on his head as usual when he shot, whilst the other shooter shot in the ordinary way.

A few of the Capital City Blue Rock members wound up their season's shoot on the Kimball & Upson's grounds last Saturday. In the club event Newbert was high with 24, although later on in the day just succeeded in breaking out 25 straight. Winters received a gold bar in his class for breaking 21.

Final preparations are being made for the dove stew, which will be held on the Del Paso shooting grounds, August 3d.
